J. McEwen, federal minister for home affairs, stated the Commonwealth had already received about 900 group nominations. Of this total the Church of England Immigration Society had recommended 200 boys and 200 girls for employment by the New South Wales government, the Salvation Army had nominated 300 domestic servants and 120 farm boys and the government of South Australia itself had submitted a requisition for the rest as domestic servants.

MILLBROOK

APRIL FOOL PARTY IS HUGE SUCCESS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 4.—The April Fool party, held in the basement of St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Union was an unqualified success, and the program was fittingly started off with the hilarious one-act comedy, "In May With June," which had the atmosphere well charged with laughter throughout its thirty minute length.

The scene was laid in the living-room of the Sommers' farm home, and one of the daughters of the home, June Sommers (Leitha Edworthy), kept up her reputation for getting herself into scrapes by telling her strong-minded maiden aunt, Della Loring, (Marjorie McDowell), who was determined to marry her niece to the banker of her home town, that she was already engaged to a fictitious character, Jimmy Jones.

Determined to help June out of her predicament, Charlie Wilson (Earl Edworthy), a neighboring young farmer who is deeply in love with the troubled girl, tries to pass himself off on Aunt Della as Jimmy Jones, winning that lady's heart with his fervent exclamation, which sent the audience into convulsions, "O, Miss Loring, if I had only met you first!"

Helping out with the impersonations were June's sixteen-year-old sister, Polly Sommers (Lois Dawson), whose weakness was wanting to make a pie, which, however, is fed to the family pet, Fido, causing him to be quite ill; Elsie Hopkins (Jean Fisher), a nineteen-year-old neighbor, who is much taunted with her inclination to run into too much flesh; and Benny Jenkins, who works on the Sommers' farm and is in love with Polly, who preetnds not to favor his suit, telling him she "keeps two of his pictures in the clothes' closet to scare off the moths." Ken Kidd filled the role of Benny in a most efficient manner, causing the audience many a hearty laugh with his clever impersonation, looks and dialogue.

The situation was complicated by the arrival of the real Jimmy Jones (Olver Brock), 'one of the Jones' boys', who is arrested by the deputy-sheriff (William Ridge), who takes along also Charlie Wilson, still impersonating Jimmy, the charge being "desertion of a wife and five kids." In the end, by means of a plot between the other characters, June is given such a scare that she acknowledges her love for Charlie and they go off to be married, while explanations finally straighten out the other tangles, with an understanding apparently under way between Benny and Polly also, and the old adage is proved: "All's well that ends well yet, though times seem most adverse, and means unfit."

The play will be repeated on Thursday, April 7, at Millbrook when Springville will be here as the other competitor in the Presbytery comedy competition, presenting "The Florist's Shop" as its entry. Friday evening's program was completed with games and contests suitable to April Fool day, under the direction of Ken Kidd and Bea McDowell, finally closing with a big circle and all singing "Taps."

Outlook Less Hopeful For 1938 Lake Season

Prospects for the 1938 shipping season on the Great Lakes are not so bright and rather gloomy predictions are forthcoming from various sources regarding the amount of iron and coal which will be moved on the inland waterways during the next six months. FIND RED LIGHTS NOT RESPONSIBLE

CAPE TOWN, April 5—(CP). — Judgment has been given by the supreme court of South Africa in a case following the wreck of the British motorship Winton in Table Bay, July 28, 1934, as the result of confusion of a red flashing navigation light with a red flashing beacon light on a wireless mast ashore.

Plaintiffs were the Avenue Shipping Co., Ltd., owners of the ship and two London firms interested in its cargo of wheat. The defendants were the South African Railways and Harbors and the Overseas Communications (South Africa) Ltd.

The shipowners claimed £46,000 ($230,000) for the ship, while the cargo owners claimed £42,000 (210,000). They said the railway administration had erected the navigation light at the end of a breakwater at Table Bay Docks and that the Overseas Communications, with the knowledge and acquiescence of the other defendnts, erected the beacon light as a warning to aircraft. The Winton, it was alleged, confused the two lights and stranded.

The defendants denied that there were any justifiable grounds for confusion and in giving judgment in their favor, Mr. Justice Centilvres said the co-existence of the two lights did not constitute a danger to shipping. He held the stranding of the Winton was due to the negligent manner in which the ship was navigated.

Port Arthur 'Cats Stage Game Battle

EDMONTON, April 4 (CP).—Port Arthur Bearcats, as gallant a senior hockey team as ever came out of Thunder Bay, get their second crack at Trail Smoke Eaters tomorrow night at Calgary.

Conceded little chance against the high-scoring British Columbians prior to the three-of-five Western final, Bearcats delivered a great performance in the series opened here Saturday when they carried Smoke Eaters to 20 minutes of overtime before dropping a 5-3 decision.

STORIED PARISH SEEKS SHEPHERD

WASDALE, Cumberland, April 5 (C.P.). — The united benefice of Wasdale, a parish abounding in legend and one of the most rugged in England, is seeking a new vicar. Although the parish covers an area of more than 10,000 acres, it embraces only 150 souls.

The church where the vicar conducts service stands in the shadow of Scafell Pike, the highest peak in England, at 3,210 feet. A low building with only three windows and seating 40 persons, the church is surrounded by the graves of those who have lost their lives in efforts to scale the precipitous ranges nearby.

Less than a century ago there was no enclosing wall or door on the church. A thorn bush served to keep out the sheep. At such times as it was required the church was bedded with bracken like a stable, and had only two pews. The rest of the worshippers brought feeding troughs or wooden blocks on which to sit.

Until 1901 there was no burial ground at Wasdale and the coffins, strapped to a horse, were taken over the fells to a cemetery at Eksdale. This practice gave rise to the story of the dale ghost—a galloping horse seen dimly through the mist, with a coffin strapped to its back.

Legend has it that at a young man's funeral the horse took fright and bolted, being lost in the mist. The mother fretted and died, and at her funeral on a snowy day, the horse bearing her coffin was also lost.

"Y" VOLLEYBALL PLAYOFFS OVER

The regular "Y" volleyball season concluded Saturday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. gym, with the playoffs in the spring season of the Lillico Trophy competition resulting in a victory for Captain Larry Gould's team. In the round-robin playoffs to terminate the schedule, Gould's gang won six out of six, while Wedlock's squad finished second with four wins and two losses. Nicholls' bunch won two out of six, and Williams' crew ended up with six reverses in the playdowns.

Personnel of the championship team, holder of the Ivan T. Lillico Cup is: Captain L. Gould, Jim Gillespie, E. Girven, Christ Graham, Jack Hardill, G. Maniece and J. E. Smith. In the playoffs, Wedlock won two from Nicholls, 15-5, 15-12; Gould defeated Williams, 15-4, 15-8; Nicholls beat Williams, 15-7, 15-12; Gould won over Wedlock, 15-7, 15-13; Nicholls lost to Gould, 15-8, 15-4; and Wedlock defeated Williams, 15-11, 15-12.

No Need To Change

Leut-Col. Fraser Hunter has a bill before the Ontario Legislature the purpose of which is to allow members to use the letters M.P. after their names. He would put them on the same basis as members of the Ottawa House. At present the customary lettering is M.L.A. (Member Legislative Assembly) or we have seen it written as M.P.P. (Member Provincial Parliament.)

The changing of such designation is not an important matter. The system we employ at present has in it a finality and accuracy which would be wiped out by the confusion of calling all members of the legislature and the federal parliament by M.P.

Even a stranger in the community would know when he saw the names Alex Elliott, M.L.A., or J. J. Duffus, M.P. that the former was the provincial and the latter the federal member. If both were M.P. the clarity we now enjoy would be done away with. It might better be left alone.

The Chemong Bridge

The floating bridge across Chemong Lake has not come through the winter season as well as the fall wheat. The bridge has had a rough time, and we have no way of knowing that it will not have a rougher time before the ice gets out of the lake.

The Chemong bridge, long a thing of use for people in a wide area and also a spectacle for the tourists to look at and cross, is the longest bridge of its kind in existence. It is nine-tenths of a mile in length, and it actually floats. On a day when the lake is rough the water runs right over the flooring of this structure. And there have been timid people on such days who have had to stop in cars at the passing points who have been glad enough when they completed the journey.

The understructure of the bridge is largely intact. The railings have been broken down in other years, but with the coming of clear weather it has always been possible to restore the thing complete and have it open for traffic.

There is some division in the City Council about being committed to a policy which would make the city liable for a share in the continued upkeep of the Chemong bridge. That attitude of caution is right enough, and we have no particular fault to find with it. At the same time it is well to remember that Chemong bridge is an asset to the city. It is a short cut from here to serve a considerable area, and it is an attraction as well as a convenience for the tourist in summer season. So in that way what happens to Chemong bridge is a matter of direct concern to the city, and we should so regard it.

Passing Them Along

A couple of vagrants were in Peterborough, at least that was the reason for their being brought to court. Evidently they had been begging on the streets. The decision was that they could go if they were willing to keep on going. They were. According to their story they were on the road to Norwood, and it was all right as far as Peterborough was concerned. If they happen to get into court at Norwood then we take it they can get out by promising to be on their way again.

We have been doing that for a long time. All the towns and cities are the same. They all come to the conclusion that these vags are not good enough to be allowed to stay; if they persisted in staying they might lock them up for a short season. And they all conclude that they are good enough to be sent along to the next place. We dare say a good many magistrates are quite cognizant of the futility of what they do, but the trouble is there is nothing much else they can do. If there were a better way they would be glad enough to adopt it.

Toronto And Its Noise

Toronto went to the Ontario Legislature to get power to enforce a noise-regulation bylaw. On that case Toronto did not get a scratch hit nor a base on balls. It never got any farther than the home plate.

In the category of unnecessary noise Toronto would have placed:

> Any sound made by any animal or bird which disturbs the peace, quiet, comfort or repose of any individual in the neighborhood; the grating, grinding or rattling noise or sound caused by a condition of disrepair or maladjustment of any motor vehicle, motorcycle or other vehicle whatsoever or part thereof.

It is well that the committee of the legislature tossed that request out on its ear and the wonder is that Toronto's civic governors would have entertained any idea they would have received support at Queen's park for such arrant nonsense.

Toronto has thousands of motor vehicles, and they in turn puff and snort and honk; some are large and well-groomed and they move with ease and do it quietly. Others are not of that disposition. They are as mean as their drivers, and it is a notorious truth that Toronto has more drivers with poor cars and poor manners than any other place in the province.

When thousands of people decide to huddle together and live in one pretty much congested area like Toronto they are going to make a noise. Most of the people who work there will all want to move at the same time of day; at close of day they will all want to move toward home, and all at the same time. People make noise and the more people there are in a given area the greater the noise. There are more delivery horses, more trucks, more street cars and more buses, more people walking on cement sidewalks. A big city does not know what it is to be quiet and it never will.

No Definite Authority

Nine patients died in Hospitals in Orlando, Florida, and the cause of death was stated to have come from injections of ensol. Ensol is a serum developed by Dr. H. C. Connell of Kingston, and naturally such a tragedy became a matter of immediate concern to him. News of such an event would be carried by every newspaper on the continent.

Later investigation has made it clear that the ensol used in these cases which resulted fatally in Orlando had not come from the Kingston laboratory at all, but had been manufactured in Philadelphia. For the sake of the Kingston physician and in fairness to him it is to be hoped that the second story receives as prominent display as the first.

The matter was referred to in the House of Commons at Ottawa, where tests of ensol are being undertaken in the Dominion laboratories. Hon. C. G. Power said an application had been made by the Connell laboratory in 1935 to manufacture and sell ensol. The license was refused and the government department asserted such licenses would not be issued until ensol had been favorably reported by competent authority.

While the license could be refused it appears there is not much which the Dominion authorities could do about it. There is no authority to supervise or control free distribution such as is exercised in Ontario with regard to insulin. Nor has the Dominion department authority to interfere with the making up and preparation of prescriptions by laboratories, physicians or hospitals. So the Dominion authorities could refuse a license, but after such refusal there would be nothing to prevent the applicant going ahead with his work. Which is another way of saying that under existing law the department dealing with such matters has no definite authority.

The Bill Is $130,000

What practical results will come from the report of the Turgeon Commission on textile industries is something which seems to be not clear at the moment. The commission came into existence as the result of a protest from the City Council of Sherbrooke, Que., because the Dominion Textile Co.'s rayon plant in that city shut down when the Dominion government arranged a new trade treaty with Japan. The claim of the company at the time was that the goods from Japan had forced the closing of the Canadian plant.

It was then that an order-in-council was passed creating the Turgeon Commission and its operations covered the records of 100 companies. The evidence of 130 witnesses was taken, and in all five million words of evidence and argument were reported and the number of exhibits placed on file numbered 1,165. The record far exceeds in volume any inquiry yet held in the Dominion. It is estimated that the Dominion government will have to pay $130,000 for this report.

In a general way a good deal of the material in the report is such as has been covered before. There is much related which is already known. The recommendation is made that in case consumers in the home market are being charged too much for goods made by a factory which is enjoying tariff protection there should be no hesitation on the part of the government to lower the tariff to correct the situation. That has been discussed in parliament on several occasions and political leaders have subscribed to the theory.

There is extended reference to hours and wages of the textile industry. Admittedly and unfortunately it is still classed as a low wage industry. The World Conference on textiles held in Washington last year placed Canadian wages above those paid in Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, Central Europe, India, China and Japan, but that in itself is not the answer to the question. The real problem is that the pay in our textile industries in general is lower than the pay which other people receive in the same areas.

The method of applying remedial action regarding these wages is a point where we find two government—or a number of governments—entering the same field. The Turgeon Commission was touched into action by the Dominion government, and this report regarding working conditions, hours and wages, has been submitted to the central government. But the actual control of such matters is in the hands of the provincial governments. In Ontario the Industry and Labor Board has already brought into existence a new schedule of minimum wages and it has been found to be both satisfactory and unsatisfactory. The Ontario action had nothing whatever to do with the Turgeon Commission report as it was taken some time before the commission had reported. The Dominion government, although in possession of the report, is not the body which can govern wage scales in the various provinces. So once more we have that conflict between federal and provincial authority, and in this case the Dominion government has paid $130,000 for a report and yet it lacks authority to impose its opinion in so essential a thing as wages and hours of work.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Safety signs are to be placed at "Death Corner" in York township. Oh, well we suppose the pedestrians will read them anyway.

Toronto council cut its salaries and then restored them all in one day. It is unnecessary to point out that it happened on April 1.

New Jersey farmers may go in for growing the castor bean and that, dear kiddies, means that there is no danger of castor oil ever becoming scarce.

Toronto man of 22 was sent to prison for three years because he had been guilty of 15 housebreakings. That was a case of simple arithmetic; five breaks equal one year.

Alberta has refused a grant of $100,000 from the Dominion government and last reports from Ottawa state members of the cabinet are slowly recovering from the shock.

The Ontario Legislature has approved of sweepstakes but the real trick will be in getting the Federal Parliament to change the criminal code to legalize that particular form of gambling.

According to a London doctor there is a super condition of electricity in the nerves of the human body. That sounds like something the Hydro engineers should investigate.

Some fifteen or twenty beer licenses in Ontario have been cancelled. It is still possible however to run across a beverage room without making a sleeper jump.

An American-born player has been pronounced the best rookie of the year in the National Hockey League. Canada's supremacy in the field of hockey may one day be overhauled.

It is said that three Toronto seats might be wiped out if the Legislature is reduced in size. That, however, would not mean so much to the Conservative party now as in the days when the Queen City was Tory Toronto.

The city council in considering the question of a footbridge over the Quaker Oats dam should not forget that the traffic would be much heavier if folk knew the passage could be made in safety.

Premier Hepburn says that many ministers support sweepstakes. Judging from the remuneration they receive it is is not likely the gentlemen of the cloth in the rural districts buy many tickets, however.

While Ontario legislators are talking about legalizing sweepstakes the magistrate at Ottawa has been demonstrating that at present there is a law against that form of gambling by handing out $1,000 fines.

Mayor Davison of Calgary says the relief problem is in municipal politics from coast to coast. However so far as Peterborough is concerned there has never been the least suspicion that any one here was playing politics with relief.

City of Galt set its relief fund at $41,000 for 1938. In the first three months $16,000 was spent, that being at the rate of $64,000 for the year. Either the estimate was too low or the expenditure too high. Looks as though they would have to call a committee meeting.

BIG MONEY

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When it came on to Saturday, then Joe and Pete were out our way, and Angus was with them; when they quit playing why they'd talk, you'd hear them nigh for half a block, they'd argue now and then.

¶ And each was sure that he was right, he'd argue hard with all his might, each mind was fairly set; they could do naught but disagree, the next stage on it seemed to me, was where they'd start to bet.

¶ A hundred dollars Angus said, was what he'd bet on what he'd read, to show his case was strong; Pete went two hundred just like that, he'd also bet his Sunday hat, to show that he was wrong.

¶ But Joe he held another view, he'd done a bit of reading too, nor was his betting slow; yes, they could laugh at him and scoff, he'd bet ten thousand right straight off, that what he said was so.

¶ Wee Angus would not take his dare, and he was ready to declare, although I thought it rash; he wouldn't be backed down by them, he'd start some betting there and then, a million in cold cash.

¶ And after all their betting time, they came and touched me for a dime, they didn't ask for more; I guess their funds were rather low, I had a notion that they'd go—straight to the corner store.

Our Statesmen Talk in Riddles.

(From Parliamentary Reports)

Mr. DUNNING: I never said any such thing.

Mr. BLACKMORE: I shall make it abundantly clear to my hon. friend in just a minute. I am simply using an illustration.

Mr. DUNNING: My hon. friend has no right—

Mr. BLACKMORE: Let me make my point first.

Mr. DUNNING: My hon. friend says that the Minister of Finance said that we do not need electricity. The Minister of Finance never said any such thing and my hon. friend cannot put words into my mouth.

Mr. BLACKMORE: I am simply giving an illustration. If the Minister of Finance cannot follow figurative language, it is too bad.

Mr. DUNNING: My hon. friend can use all the illustrations he likes, but he cannot put words into the mouth of an hon. member which that hon. member did not utter. I used the English language and nowhere did I use such words as those now attributed to me.

Mr. BLACKMORE: The point is this: The Minister of Finance argued that the A plus B theorem was faulty and there was no deficiency of purchasing power in the country as a result of industry. That is the same thing as saying that there was no need of electricity in the community. Why take all this trouble to create electricity? If that is not sufficient, I will take it all back. The trouble is the Minister of Finance did not allow me to finish what I was saying.

Speaking figuratively again, the next statement was that electricity will kill people, it will burn them—inflation.

Mr. DUNNING: Who said that?

Mr. BLACKMORE: It was said that the new money would create inflation, that that would mean disaster and chaos. That is the same as saying that electricity would burn people and kill them.

Mr. DUNNING: As long as it is clear that I did not say that, it is quite all right. My hon. friend is saying that, not I.

Mr. BLACKMORE: The next question was that you cannot get a transformer, you cannot get a fuse plug to enable you to control the electric current after you create it. Therefore, do not create it. The objection there was to the just price.

Mr. McLEAN (Melfort): Will my hon. friend tell us now what he refused to tell us a few weeks ago? Who will be the transformers? Who will be the experts?

Mr. BLACKMORE: Would my hon. friend permit me to finish without interrupting?

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member's time is exhausted.

Mr. BLACKMORE. If I might have just a few minutes more, Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. BLACKMORE: I appreciate greatly the courtesy and consideration of the house, Mr. Speaker. There is a great deal to be said. I know the members want the facts, and I am glad to give them.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Time.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member has exhausted his forty minutes and can continue with the unanimous consent of the house.

Mr. DUNNING: Mr. Speaker, I think I was responsible for depriving the hon. member of five minutes of his time, but I do not think more than that.

MEN OVER FORTY.

(London Sunday Express)

HENRY SIMLER, of New York, was annoyed by a circular suggesting that men over forty were not any good in their jobs. He wrote to twenty managers of big business in America, and discovered that the average age of the ten best salesmen in each business was 44.5 years. Some of the best were over seventy.

In American retail businesses, Mr. Simler has discovered, for every £20 worth of merchandise sold by employees in their twenties, salespeople in their thirties sell £20 7s. worth, those in their forties £21 1s. worth. And in the fifties the record is even better—£21 15s. worth.

Now big business in America is taking up the idea. The American General Electric Company announces that it will have forty per cent. of its employees over forty, to keep the same balance as the general population.

And in one of Ford's plants, of the last 700 men hired, 200 have been over fifty. Ford employs a seventy-eight-year-old boiler man(a new employee), an eighty-four-year-old freight car inspector, and an eighty-on-year-old stock room worker.

The idea is that machines wear out but men mature.

TAKE THEM TO COURT.

(Detroit Free Press)

A CONTRIBUTOR to the letter column asks for a new law: "one providing a fine for drivers who speed through puddles and splash pedestrians."

A new law to curb the splashing nuisance seems hardly necessary.

Courts in some of our States and in Canada have already held splashers responsible for damage caused to clothes of pedestrians and required them to pay the cost of having the clothes cleaned.

The next time a motorist splashes your skirt or stockings, take him in court and see if there is not equal justice in Michigan.

METHOD EXPOSED.

(Chatham News)

THE "GRAPEVINE" system which is said to be utilized by transients was forcibly illustrated to a certain woman of this city a few days ago. A transient asked for food. It was an inconvenient hour to prepare food, so the woman gave him ten cents, to get rid of him. Not long after, another transient called asking, not for food, but for money. Still another arrived soliciting financial assistance, which led to the strong belief they had been "tipped off" by the first recipient.

Factory Whistles and Tin Horns.

(From Southam Press, Toronto.

ARE WE REACHING the point where we can no longer hear the factory whistles because of the noise of a few tin horns?

Perhaps it's the "Swing music" age, but it's a shame when even one of our good citizens has reached a state of mind whereby he would prefer Cab Calloway to Caruso.

And, speaking of music, there never has been a tune played which means so much to so many people as do the notes which come from the whistles of industry calling men and women to their daily opportunity of being free citizens—earning their way as they go along, independent to trade their efforts and ability for the highest remuneration ever known to man. On the average, that is what this new world has been offering. Compare things here with conditions elsewhere and doubt it if possible.

But let's consider those whistles. Some of them sing tenor, some sing bass and others various of the remaining notes in the scale. Sound them all and you have the symphony of success—success for the millions who, directly or indirectly, profit by what this theme song of industry stands for. To add a new whistle to the ensemble is an achievement. To silence or damage an old one is nothing less than a calamity.

Unfortunately, for all men, we have in our midst a few tin horn "tooters" who have been making so much noise about comparatively nothing at all that many of us are failing to appreciate the magic of the music of the factory whistle.

These "Tooters" with their flair for preaching damaging industrial restrictions, and with their hymn of hate, "The Economic Royalist Rag" are, whether they know it or not, out to work ruin to the thing which means most to nearly everyone. If they succeed, who wins?

Perhaps that grand old picture "The Angelus" offers a suggestion: Whenever a factory whistle blows let all good citizens doff their hats as a means of expressing their thanksgiving for the unmistakable fact that here men have the opportunity to earn their livelihood or——

Are we reaching the point where we can no longer hear the factory whistles because of the noise of a few tin horns?

Are Intelligence Tests Reliable?

(From the Chatham News.)

THERE SEEMS to be a let-up impending in the use of "intelligence tests" for the purpose of measuring the intellectual capacity of an individual pupil or student for this, that, or some other calling or course of preparation for the business of life.

In this there is nothing to be surprised at. Such tests were recommended, and for some time applied in the schools, but it has never become a general settled opinion among scientists— especially the practical teachers—that the "game was worth the candle."

There are scientific reasons for this skepticism in the matter; but without depending on scientific considerations alone there is the outstanding and absolutely convincing fact, that some of our ablest scholars, deepest thinkers, and most brilliant geniuses, have been what the Scottish people call "dull in the uptak."

Consider two examples as confirmatory illustrations: Sir Walter Scott and Rev. Dr. Adam Clark. The former was hampered by an accident that lamed him for life, but did not necessarily incapacitate him for displaying his innate genius, which became monumental when it slowly unfolded itself. The latter is reported in the best biographies as "having given at school no promise of the remarkable love of learning which he afterwards displayed." Either of these famous men would, under the modern "tests" have been in his early "teens" pronounced by his teacher a "near dunce."

Some children in school, early develop an aptitude for memorization of facts, and the reproduction of them, when tested by examination, either oral or written. But this brilliance of mentality may be of little practical value for life. The culture that counts in the end and the long run is the culture that is developed by the exercise of reasoning brought to bear by a capable teacher on the simple phenomena of the pupil's own environment. The scholastic training that does not make a pupil inquisitive as to the cause and effect of familiar phenomena of all sorts, does little more for the pupil in school than waste his time and deprive him of cultural opportunities.

Britain's Policy of Peace.

(Letter in Christian Science Monitor.)

IN YOUR COMMENTS on the situation brought about by the resignation of Mr. Eden and the policy pursued by the Prime Minister, you seem to ignore the fact that the policy of Mr. Eden as that of Mr. Chamberlain, has always been conducted on the principle that the British Government is not concerned with the form of government of other nations; that is purely the concern of the nations concerned. The main object of the British Government (though not apparently of H. M. opposition) has been, and is, to preserve peace. In your editorial comments you make one true statement, that the first essential is the preservation of peace. Anyone who saw anything of the last world war will be heartily in agreement with that, more especially as a future war would be far more destructive and horrible.

You make one other statement, which is, unfortunately, also true, and that is that the British people are apt to be swayed by sentiment(as on the occasion of the Hoare-Laval peace proposals, when a wave of hysteria swept the country and resulted in Abyssinia being sacrificed on the altar of an abstract theory). The danger of the present situation lies in the fact that unscrupulous place-seekers such as the present "opposition" in Parliament, and enthusiasts like Lord Cecil, try to make use of this sentiment in such a way as to plunge the country into war, whilst at the same time paying lip-service to such catch-phases as "peace and security through the League of Nations."

As Mr. Chamberlain pointed out the other day, this is a meaningless and indeed mischievous phrase! The League of Nations, as at present constituted, is not capable of providing security for its loyal members against the powers of aggression. Of the seven great powers in the world, three are hostile to the League, one (Russia) is only in it for her own ends, to stir up trouble throughout the world, and one (the United States of America) holds aloof and cannot be relied upon to adopt any but a selfish and isolationist policy. If the United States had not deserted the League in its infancy, the League might have developed power to secure the peace of the world, and the fact that it has never had that power must be laid at the door of the United States. It ill becomes, therefore, any American to talk disparagingly of British or French action or inaction in connection with the League of Nations.

A Bible Message For To-day . . . .

AND AS SOME spake of the temple how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, he said, As for these things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And they asked him, saying, Master, but when shall these things be? and what sign will there be when these things shall come to pass? And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them. . . . Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven. But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogus, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake. And it shall turn to you for a testimony. Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer: For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. . . . And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake. But there shall not an hair of your head perish.—Luke xxi, 5-8, 10-15, 17, 18.

AT LAST A PROTEST.

FOR FOUR long months the Gazette has withheld the natural masculine protest against these rags the women are wearing over their heads that look like soiled peasant handkerchiefs. The fashion is as old as Eve and as ugly as the painted Jezebel.

Generally speaking, the average male anywhere from 7 to 90 has a deep biological interest in the headgear—in any headgear—of any woman, from a Gainsborough to a beret, from a poke bonnet to a sunbonnet, a long jump! For any hat any woman wears makes her look lovely. The fashions change but the old lure in changeless as the hats of the girls go floating by down the ages. They all make Col. John W. Everyman want to duck under them and sneak a snack of lipstick.

NOTE ON CHILD LABOR.

(New York Post)

FREDDIE Bartholomew has a salary of $100,000 a year. He has been paying his father $10,000 a year out of it. Now his attorneys have asked the courts to permit suspension of the $10,000 payment—on the ground that otherwise Freddie won't have any of his salary left at the end of the year.

Incredible? Let's see.

Out of Freddie's $100,000 he must pay $67,000 in federal and state income taxes. That leaves him $33,000. His attorneys get $15,000 of that, which leaves him $18,000. His agents' fees are $5,000, his living expenses $9,800, while there are claims of $39,000 pending by another agent and $4,700 by still another agent. So, if all these claims and costs are upheld—

Freddie will have worked all year, produced big successes, and end up about $35,000 in the red.

Hastings Streets No Boardwalk Council Decides On Action

Constable Ordered To Keep Streets Clear Of Girls Without Sufficient Clothing

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, April 4.—The regular monthly meeting of the village council was held in the Council Chambers Friday night with all members present.

Correspondence was read from Miss Mary Lynch, Toronto, regarding the protection of her property by a wire screen from the ball park. A letter was received from George M. Brant, Toronto, regarding a price on a lot suitable to erect a summer cottage.

A. V. German enterviewed the council regarding a suitable crossing for a car to run over the sidewalk to his lot. The streets committee were instructed to attend this matter.

Constable W. Wellman requested that the council purchase new clothes and equipment. The chief stated he is without a gun and does not fancy answering night calls without protection. He also needs trousers and a police badge, if he is to dress properly, he said. The council decided to take this matter up for consideration.

Keep Streets Clear

Complaints are again being registered against the appearance of the fairer sex in scanty attire on the village streets this summer. The council were unanimous that this condition has to be cured to a degree. Constable Wellman was instructed to exercise his authority in having the streets kept clear of girls without sufficient clothing.

The question of milk licenses was discussed but was left over to a later date. The property committee are to look over what repairs may be needed on the town scales.

Hastings paved streets are valued at $25,000 and the local hydro system at $20,000, according to estimates given by the council to the clerk for the purpose of entering them as assets in the financial statement.

Reeve Kelly stated that trees with branches over the paved streets have caused the pavements to break up in certain sections of the village and suggested that they needed trimming. This matter will also be investigated.

On a motion of Stevenson-Lynch the tax collectors time was extended for one month.

On a Lynch-Stevenson motion the clerk passed a by-law appointing deputy returning officers and poll clerks in the event that Monday's nomination for hydro commissioner may go to an election. The election would be held April 11.

By-law No. 754 governing hawkers and peddlers in this village received its several readings and was put in force.

Linesman Rehired

E. M. Hess, linesman, was rehired by the Hastings Hydro Electric Commission for $600 per year salary, at the regular monthly meeting, held in the council chambers, Friday afternoon. This is an advance of $50 per year salary and the motion stipulated that he keep down trucking expenses as much as possible. Mr. Hess and the Hydro commission had debated for the two previous meetings over the matter of the commission purchasing a truck for the linesman.

At Sacred Heart the troop is going through a period of rebuilding and reorganization. Assitant Commissioner E. Wolfe gave the boys a good pep talk at the camp fire. Any new boys who desire to join the troop are asked to attend the meeting next Friday at 6.45 p.m.

The new association headquarters are now ready for any scouters' meeting or any other senior scout meeting. Any arrangements for the room can be made through me at 3067, as I will retain the keys until the local association appoints a definite trustee at their next meeting.

The reports are very slow coming in. Why not just phone 3067 and let me know what is being done?

At the St. John's Rover Crew a new program was put on last Tuesday, when the crew split in three parties, each being give a paper with full directions to travel covering East City to finish up at a given point about 9.30. A team under Jack Collis arrived first; Charlie Jefferies second, and Fred Ford and his merry men were last. At some future date a larger field will be covered.

BLUM'S FINANCIAL PROJECTS UPHELD

PARIS, April 4.— (AP).— The French cabinet to-day approved Premier Leon Blum's fiancial projects, including centralization of all exchange operations in the Bank of France.

Financial experts interpreted such centralization as virtual exchange control.

Blum's proposals, which must be submitted for parliamentary approval are expected to encounter difficulties in the Senate, also provide for revaluation of the gold stock in the Bank of France "at actual level."

This was regarded by financiers as possibly amounting to a new devaluation.

A third item in Blum's financial revision would place an "extra-ordinary tax" on capital holdings such as bank accounts, stocks and bonds. This tax would start at four per cent, but it was said sums under 100,000 francs (currently about $3,000) would remain tax free.

Additional measures to prevent "tax frauds" were proposed by the Premier. He suggested that security holdings unregistered at present should carry the name of the owner so taxes against these holdings could no longer be avoided.

Loses Securities Tax

Along with his proposal of stop "tax frauds," Blum advanced a measure to reduce the tax on securities from 24 to 18 per cent. He likewise proposed an unspecified reduction in the income tax rate, which was raised in August, 1937, under Georges Bonnet's financial decrees.

Blum also proposed a two-year suspension of public debt amortization.

The measure will be debated in the Chamber of Deputies Tuesday and in the Senate Wednesday.

Blum's sweeping financial proposals, which go now to the council of ministers meeting under President Albert Lebrun, contemplate complete revision of the government's control over money and industry.

The purpose is to strengthen the nation's financial structure against the danger of war.

In addition to the financial measures, Blum, while fighting to prolong the life of his popular front cabinet, suggested increasing working hours in factories involved in rearmament.

No Right To Ask Press To Keep Things Out Oshawa Man Says

Insurance Report Is Laid Over Until The Aldermen See It

OSHAWA, April 4.—"At the first meeting of council this year we passed a motion asking the press to come to all meetings, and we have no right to keep asking them to keep things out of the paper," Ald. Clifford Harman asserted at a committe meeting of City Council

A report regarding tenders submitted for insurance on city property was presented by Ald. J. Coleman, but Ald. Walker protested that it should not be given any publicity until Ald. Dafoe, the other member of a special committee on insurance, had been given an opportunity to present his report.

Mayor McLeese admitted the business of the press at meetings of council was to report the proceedings, and members of council had no right to ask that items of business be kept out of the papers. He claimed, however, that if figures regarding tenders for city insurance were published at the present time it would not be fair because the other member of the special committee had not been given an opportunity to report. Council voted to lay over the report until next meeting, and no items were revealed.

George Mallett petitioned council to have a street light erected in the vicinity of his fuel yard, claiming that he had lost quantities of fuel on several occasions due to lack of illumination near the premises.

S. G. Carnell, Oshawa, was appointed as member of a special neutral committee to allot boundary roads for maintenance between Oshawa and the Township of East Whitby.

Committee will recommend to Council that a meeting of interested persons be sanctioned to investigate the possibility of holding a "Civic Day" here this summer.

A special committee composed of Ald. Anderson, Coleman, Harman and Harner will consider some form of civic recognition of the Oshawa Junior hockey team. It was agreed to include some plan for honoring marathon winner Jimmy Bartlett when the hockey situation was considered.

14 SLAIN IN RIOTS AS EGYPTIAN VOTE SUPPORTS FAROUK

CAIRO, April 4 (C.P.). — The Wafd Party, dominant in Egyptian politics for a decade and successful in the long negotiations that led to the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty and national independence for Egypt, today dwindled to a small minority in Parliament.

In last week's elections, held on Thursday in Upper Egypt and Saturday in Lower Egypt, the Wafdists —Nationalists—won but 12 seats in a house of 264 members against 159 they held in the previous Chamber of Deputies which had 232 members.

The Government Coalition and parties supporting it won 232 seats, while the remaining 20 constituencies will have fresh elections as no candidate achieved a clear majority.

Government newspapers, expressing delight with the results, promised all complaints in regard to balloting would be examined. Wafd papers, on the other hand, declared violent incidents which marked the election were sufficient to cast doubt on its validity.

Fourteen were killed in election riots, six on Saturday and eight on Thursday. Police in Cairo and Alexandria, however, kept the situation well in control in those cities and outbreaks of violence were confined to smaller centres.

Wafd Leader Shaken Up.

Mustapha Nahas Pasha, the defeated Wafd leader, charged he was dragged from his motorcar and manhandled when he tried to supervise voting in his constituency.

The victory was a personal triumph for 18-year-old King Farouk, who ousted the Wafd leader, Mustapha Nahas Pasha, as Premier early this year and summoned Mohammed Mahmoud Pasha to form a government. When parliament would not vote confidence in Mahmoud Pasha the election was called.

The Government's strength in the new chamber will be divided as follows: Government Coalition parties, 99; Saadists, 79, and Independents, 54.

The Saadists, formed of an internal fight among the Wafdist Party, are led by Dr. Ahmed Maher and obtained thousands of votes which normally would have gone to the Wafdists. It was believed Ahmed Maher's group would achieve Cabinet recognition.

The first step toward Cabinet reorganization was seen in the resignation of Abdel Fattah Yehia Pasha, Foreign Minister, who declared he had joined the Cabinet to carry out election pledges, and, now his mission had been accomplished, he was retiring.

GAINING GROUND ON GRASSHOPPER

OTTAWA, April 4.—(CP).—Reports issued by the agriculture department of the Dominion government show extensive survey by scientifically trained government experts is gradually bringing under control the grasshopper plague in the prairie provinces.

Closely clipped patches of grass along the road tell the surveyors when they have found a colony of the road-side variety.

The female grasshopper deposits eggs by opening the ground with a wedge on the end of her tail. She lays them in a protienous film which forms a pod-shaped sack around the eggs and protects them until maturity. These sacks contain 15 to 20 eggs.

Extremely sensitive to light, the grasshopper may lay as many as 200 eggs during a sunny, dry season—but when it is dull and rainy the number of eggs diminishes greatly.

Maps of the provinces are marked out in shades of yellow, pale green, dark green, deep blue and red according to the density and danger of the anticipated menace. The approximate density of grasshoppers anticipated is discovered by surveys working in a diagonal line across each province, digging one square foot under every three miles and counting the number of eggs laid.

As a warning to the farmers to take protective measures to insure a crop unharmed by this pest, maps are distributed province-wide.

A poisonous bait of parts of bran, sawdust, sodium arsenite and water is prepared by the government in each of the provinces. It is easily obtainable in any amount by the farmers.

The following executive members were returned to office: H. H. Berscht, Hamilton. J. F. Dobson, Barrie, C. S. Gilbert, St. Thomas, D. L. Graham, Strathroy, Frank H. Spry, Amherstburg, and Max J. Swanston, Peterborough.

It was decided to create Junior B groups for towns of 5,000 or less population. A midget group for boys under 14 also will be conducted

Other motions adopted will give entire net gate receipts to home clubs in playdown series while teams will not be allowed to revert to a lower series until the following season. Heretofore, some teams had been allowed to revert to a lower series when the playdown stage was reached.

The 1939 annual meeting will be held in Owen Sound, that city defeating Toronto in a vote.

The motion calling for the severance of the A.A.U. affiliation was passed by a 39 to 2 vote after lengthy discussion. Past President W. J. Smith, one of the organizers of the Sports Federation, moved the motion. Opposition was led by Fred Steele, president of the Central Ontario branch of the A.A.U. Steele was backed by J. M. Barclay of Thorold, past president of the Southwestern Ontario branch of the Amateur Union.

On The Skids

The Deans, indeed, have fallen on evil days. Old Diz is an "if" pitcher after his poor work last year and Paul, ABOVE, in an even worse plight. He is on the voluntarily retired list at the moment but has applied for reinstatement. When it is granted the Cards will ask waivers on him, according to Branch Rickey.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

A GUY named Jackson states in his Toronto Star column: "It seems to me that it's about time the O.H.A. and the N.O.H.A. got organized on a plan to eliminate this idea of having the senior champions playoff against the senior 'B' team for the right to move into Allan Cup playoffs. Either that or have the N.O.H.A. organized as a separate branch of the C.A.H.A. Senior 'B' hockey is intermediate with a fancy name. If a team is good enough to play the senior 'A' winner in the final rush of the eliminations it should be good enough to play senior 'A' hockey all season. The thing just doesn't add up and a new deal is long overdue."

IT STRIKES us that Mister Jackson is always advocating big moves without checking up on a few angles. He got very mad at Eddie Shore the other night and dared Calder to suspend him. Without knowing that it is not in Calder's power to suspend any players, but a matter for the Board of Governors. And now he intimates that the nasty senior 'B' teams, like the Petes, are taking advantage of the O.H.A. by wanting a crack at senior 'A' clubs. Yet it was the O.H.A. that offered this bait, and more, to get clubs to play senior 'B', even letting squads like Kitchener and Brantford play in senior 'A' groups all season to provide opposition for the few real senior 'A' teams that are left, and then letting 'em drop back to senior 'B' in the playdowns. Also, the N.O.H.A. is practically a separate branch of the C.A.H.A. We would suggest Mr. Jackson wake up.

OUR HEARTY congrats to the Campbellford kids who Saturday journeyed all the way to Galt and won the Ontario puck bantam championship by a 4-2 score over Waterloo. It was a sudden-death fixture, played there at 11.30 a.m., when 'twas found a few days ago that the Oshawa arena would not be available for the final. The Waterloo lads, rubbed out Woodstock—while the Hydro Town bantams cleaned up in this neck of the timber—but met their Waterloo at the hands of a scrappy Campbellford contingent. Unlike Toronto, which took credit for Newmarket as a suburb when they won the Dominion junior title a few years ago, we can't call Campbellford a suburb of Peterborough. Without getting slaughtered! But at least this plucky bunch of young puckists hail from our district.

A FEW items on basketball. C.G.E. copped the first of the two-game City Cage Loop finals over St. Paul's at the 'Y' on Saturday by a 40-27 score and, with that 13-point margin, are favored to win the title when they clash again Wednesday p.m. It'll be in the 'Y' about 8.30, we suppose. An exciting, wide-open joust which might have got rougher than a country road in April but the officials had hitch-hiking thumbs which gave several scrappy players a one-way ride. Return fixture ought to be hot, too. Church Basketball League will present crests this year to members of winning teams. St. John's Juveniles get theirs tomorrow eve at a supper given the cage squads of that church by interested older supporters. George St. Bantams will receive theirs from Prexy Gord Clegg at the George St. father and son banquet on Friday.

LOT OF lacrosse dope should be released after the O.L.A. annual argument in Toronto on Good Friday, April 15th. It's gonna be opened up plenty wide all around, as they dropped the word "amateur" from their title last year. It's now the Ontario Lacrosse Association. A new series, junior 'B', is advocated, and Peterborough might sponsor such a team. It has also been suggested that the junior limit be boosted to 21 years. This sounds sensible, but doesn't always work out in fact. When we were 21, we were told we knew far too much for a punk of our years—though nowadays we are told we don't know as much as a 14-year-old! Ah, yes, we will probably wind up by agreeing with every one of our critics and then do a hitch in Orillia. However, local lacrosse news should be seeping through shortly.

SWEEPING CHANGES cam into being Saturday at the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A.—podden, pliss, the Ontario Baseball Assoc., without the "amateur"——in Niagara Falls. They seceded entirely from the Amateur Union and took up with the new Ontario Sports Federation, which permits pros of other sports to play amateur ball, pro and simon-pure ball teams to tangle, pros to come back after a year's absence, and such like. It carried by a 39-2 vote with Bill Smith of Toronto naturally being named chairman, since he invented it! The O.B.A. decided to create junior 'B' groups in towns of 5,000 and less, and also form a midget group for boys under 14 years of age. Home clubs in playdowns will keep all the gate receipts henceforth, no team may revert to a lower series the same year, and next session will be in Owen Sound.

JACK SCOTT of Kitchener is the new prexy, with J. C. McDonald first vice-president. Peck Ward of the Falls is second vice-prexy. Ernie Gibbard of Napanee was defeated. Max Swanston of Peterborough goes back again as an O.B.A.A. executive member, a real honor. Secretary Snyder and Treasurer Hillmer were returned. Messrs Berscht, Dobson, Gilbert, Graham and Spry, are other executive members. The party from here which took in the convention included Max Swanston, Bob Elliott and Bill Regan. The latter and Art Casterton voted for the Central League. Leo Deadey received his transfer from Kirkland Lake to this city, while Blazetich and Jeffers got theirs from Napanee to Toronto. Nearly all applications were granted. Re-instatement of Eddie Murphy will come up at the next executive meeting, in about two weeks, but he should get it okay.

STILL LOTS of hockey activity around and about. The Hawks rubbed out Amerks and now meet Leafs in the five-game Stanley Cup finals. Cornwall defeated Falconbridge in two straight games to end that senior Allan Cup playdown serial. Oshawa juniors proved they are still hotter than a fly in a kettle of boiling aqua by ousting Sudbury in Toronto Saturday e'en. In an all-U.S. amachoor final series, Hershey knocked off Detroit Holzbaughs. Orangeville evened up the junior 'C' finals with a 4-3 nod over Aurora, Lindsay's conquerors, over the week-end, and they settle it in Toronto tonight. Kingston and Barrie have their third junior 'B' final in Midland tonight, with the local Colts' conquerors two up now. And so it goes as major ball loops get set to open.

* * * * * *

PICKING 'EM off the grapevine: It has been found necessary to again postpone the annual soccer meeting, billed for tonight, till a later date . . . . Prexy Max Swanston of the C.O.B.L. suggests that Smiths Falls or Perth might be invited into this loop on some basis or other, since they are out of pro ball . . . . With Ernie Gibbard's defeat as O.B.A.A. officer, we fear Napanee will be hard to entice back to the Central Loop this year . . . . Southend Softball League re-organizes at an annual meeting April 11th in Barrack's store opposite the Brinton diamond, at seven in the eve . . . . The Cobourg colleens won the Ontario Ladies' Basketball Association finals on Saturday, and our congratulations to the group winners of this section . . . . P.C.I. senior boys' cage team may be playing next weekend . . . . Ditto with our St. Paul's intermediates in O.C.B.A. playdowns . . . . Delegates to the ball annual at the Falls report a highly enjoyable session in all respects . . . . More C.O.B.L. transfer applications will come up at later O.B.A. executive meetings within the next month . . . Dit Clapper would look okay playing ball or lacrosse in local livery this summer . . . . Auf wiedersehen, as the Dutchmen put it.

COBOURG CAGERS WIN 'B' GAME

TORONTO, April 4.— Cobourg's girl hoopsters have the Ontario intermediate "B" title on the wing. They proved formidable foes for Community House whe nthey were on the long end of a 25-to-18 score in the first game for the championship, played Saturday night.

The second game of the two-game series, points to count, will be played in Cobourg next Saturday night.

Cobourg clearly outplayed the Housers all down the line. Audrey Dufton (not related to the Audrey Dufton who plays softball for the Toronto Ladies' softball team) was the standout performer of the night. Hooping them in from all angles, backward, one-handed and whatnot, Miss Dufton found the hoop for 12 points. In the limelight, too, was her teammate, Janet Young, who totalled six points.

Corinna Goldberg led the Community House attack with six markers. Bad foul shooting was an important factor in the locals' loss, when they missed 15 out of 21 trys, and 11 in a row in the last half.

AUSTIN, Tex.—Outfielder Jules Solters, recently scratched off the holdout list, reports to Cleveland Indians today. His arrival, Manager Oscar Vitt hopes, will supply some of the batting punch the Tribe has been missing.

BARSTOW, Calif.—Lee Handley, Pittsburgh Pirate infielder, whacked a homer in yesterday's game at Bakersfield, and was astonished when a park attendant wheeled a couple of cases of breakfast food up to his locker. ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — St. Louis Cardinals boss Branch Rickey admitted today he "probably" will have something to say later about Judge Landis' decree cutting loose a number of the Gas House Gang's minor league farmhands. In the meantime, Shortstop Jimmy Webb who was made a free agent by the decree, left the Cards' camp, disclosing Boston Red Sox have the inside track on his services.

Badminton

R. O. BENSON

Before long local clubs will be getting ready to fold up for the season. Individual players will soon start thinking, if they haven't done so already, of hanging up their racquets and letting the birds go to roost—some may contemplate minor adjustments which might convert their badminton sticks into tennis bats—others will prepare to head for the wide open golf spaces—and still others may just twiddle their thumbs for exercise, until October rolls around again. With Garison club finals set for April 9, and Peterborough Club annual meeting and club championship finals set for Tuesday, April 12, this winter's badminton should be pretty well washed up, ironed, folded and ready to be put away by the middle of this month. Of course, a few die-hards may continue to stay with it on into the closed season—and it can be played outdoors, y'know—but officially, the term will be up.

In the meantime, club championships are being pushed ahead at the armouries, and first-round results are coming in fast for the ladies' and men's doubles. A number of byes have been awarded in the first round, and it is still a heated question whether players who enter the second round on a bye, are eligible for admission to the consolation if they lose out in the second round of the championships. Decision on this point will not be definitely known until the consolation draw appears. In the ladies' doubles, first round, Mrs. Preston and Miss Adams were given a bye, Mrs. Dobbin and Mrs. Allin defeated Mrs. Walker and Miss Burgess; Mrs. Copp and Miss Reid defeated Miss Moore and Miss Batten; Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Clifton, bye; Mrs. Rishor and Mrs. Nichols defeated Mrs. Hardill and Mrs. Maniece; Miss Scott and Mrs. Sparrow defeated Mrs. Dawe and Miss Cox; Miss Finnie and Mrs. Bailey defeated Mrs. Cranford and Mrs. Morphet; Miss Donaghue and Mrs. Selkirk, bye; Miss Davidson and Miss Cole, bye; Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Jamieson defeated Miss Garvey and Miss McClellan; Mrs. Melton and Mrs. Munro defeated Mrs. Green and Miss Ackford; Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Cunningham, bye; Miss Comstock and Miss Harvey, bye; Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Putnam, bye.

In the men's section, Green and Brown defeated Cranford and Morphet; Maniece and Hardill, bye; Anderson and Sparrow defeated Eastwood and Sorby, default; Preston and Bailey defeated Baker and Sheehy; Gemmell and Copp, bye; Thompson and Stuart defeated Lewis and Jones; Tollington and Drynan defeated G. Gillespie and Comstock; Rutter and Rishor, bye; Westbye and Braund, bye; Kitchen and Putnam defeated Bergman and McGregor; Baker and Allin defeated Girven and Cunningham; J. Gillespie and Richardson, bye; Hewitt and Rishor defeated Northrop and Leybourne. Entries for the singles are coming in slow; so far only half a dozen ladies have responded along with nine or ten men. Most of the members seem rather reluctant to try a hand at singles after playing almost nothing but doubles all year.

Juniors at the Garrison Club held a round robin tourney on Saturday afternoon with evident success. Being a young organization, completing only their first season, they are not attempting to hold club championships this Spring. Next year, they plan to increase membership and to promote inter-club matches with outside teams. In Saturday's play, Pat Graham captured the girls' award, gaining 130 points; Barbara Nichols came next with 122 points and Helen Geale had 115 points. Doug Quirt was the leading boy with 161. Bill Hall was right on his heels with 160 points. From 30 to 35 players were on hand for the affair.

Over 100 people of South Africa who went to Argentina to settle, have just returned home destitute.

BOWLERS PREPARE SEASON'S PLANS

(Herb Martin.)

Once again the board of directors of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club (in a moment of weakness) has ordered us to assume the responsibility of writing these articles on lawn bowling for the season of 1938. Well, if they can stand it and the rest of the bowlers can take it, we can. The risk is all theirs.

It appears to us that only a couple of days ago we were writing curling notes, and now here we are jumping right into the lap of lawn bowling. We had no intention of commencing this column so soon, but when Howard Clegg, chairman of the Membership committee, supported by a couple of "high power salesmen" paid us a flying visit and commenced to put the pressure on, we took it on the chin and here we are.

Back in Circulation.

This is just to show the public that we have a lawn bowling club in our city, and we will be operating this summer, and we are now beginning to organize for the season's play. For the time being we ask the skips to be prepared with their rinks when they are called upon to report. In the meantime we will nose around, hither and yon and see what we can find out. The president has given us the authority to crash into any committee meeting, so we will get all the news first hand. Of course we may get kicked out of some of er them, but will do what the announcer of the fight said the other night over the radio, "Come out fighting to protect yourself at all times." More later.

Chile's imports in January were nearly 50 per cent higher than in the corresponding month of 1937.

NIXON CHAMPS BEAT WATERLOO BY 4-2 COUNT

GALT, April 4 (CP). — Campbellford Bantams, the Eastern Ontario district winners, won the Ontario bantam hockey title and the Harry C. Nixon trophy when they defeated the Waterloo Sisken Cubs, 4-2, in a sudden-edath final Saturday. The Waterloo youngsters, who played two decisive games within 24 hours, were outclassed by their bigger and heavier rivals, but displayed some good hockey combination plays.

Campbellford bagged two goals in the opening period, Bibby scoring the double, with Bertrand getting an assist on the first count. In the second period, Dave Bauer, baby brother of the famous Bruins' Bauer, netted the only tally, Voisin feeding him the puck for the goal. In the third, the Cubs tried hard to even the score, but two goals by Storie and Bibby late in the period put the game on ice for the Eastern rivals. Voisin, picking up Cotey's pass, scored the final count of the game for the Cubs.

Waterloo Cubs: Goal, Gleiser; defence, Bauer and Ellis; centre, Clayfield; wings, Bond and Dotzert; subs: Lorenz, Cotey, Voisin, Warnholz, Seip.

EDMONTON CLUB STAYS IN RACE

WINNIPEG, April 4.—(CP).—Edmonton Athletic Club's impressive comeback to defeat St. Boniface Seals 3-1 here Saturday after losing the first two games of the three-of-five western junior hockey final presaged a bitter struggle in the fourth game here to-night.

Fast skating, relentless backchecking and finely co-ordinated team play of the Alberta titlists was in sharp contrast to the first two won by Seals 7-3 and 8-3.

Coach Stan Moher's switch in goalies for the third game may have been partly responsible for Edmonton's tighter defence, but much credit goes to Neil and MacColville, ace forwards of New York Rangers, who sat in the Edmonton box Saturday night.

The Colvilles played with E.A.C. when the Albertans reached the National junior final in 1934, only to lose to a great Toronto St. Michaels team. The brothers gave pep talks in the Edmonton dressing room Saturday night.

CHIHAWKS VERSUS TORONTO LEAFS IN STANLEY CUP FINALS

Chicagoans Stage Comeback To Defeat Americans 3-2 In Crucial Hockey Tilt

Seibert, Levinsky And Romnes Score Goals For The Winners

NEW YORK, April 4 (C.P.). — Wonder team of hockey, Chicago Black Hawks to-day were ready to shoot for the Stanley Cup; if the finals fall in line with the dizziness of the rest of the playoffs, Bill Stewart's men should down Toronto Maple Leafs for the world professional title.

Underdogs from the start of the playdowns, the Hawks came from behind last night to trim New York Americans 3-2 in the final of a best-of-three game semi-final round.

As they did in their earlier series with the favored Montreal Canadiens, the Black Hawks, last team to qualify for the playoffs, won after losing the first game of the round. Their dogged uphill fight continued into last night's struggle when they spotted the A's a first-period goal.

It was a fine personal triumph for little Bill Stewart in his first year as a National League coach. Only American-born mentor in the big-time, the circuit's former senior referee drove the makeshift squad past all obstacles to the final best-of-five game series which opens in Toronto on Tuesday.

Favorites Defeated.

All four rounds in the eliminations to date have seen the favorites defeated, and although Bald Bill continued his policy of never making a prediction, he said he knew his boys would make a fight of the finals, "and anything can happen in a season like this."

Major Fred McLaughlin, Hawks' owner, whose dream is to give Chicago a team of all-Americans and call them the Yankees, thrilled at Stewart's success To add to the major's delight Alex. Levinsky and Doc Romnes (both born in the United States, scored Chicago's second and third goals.

Red Dutton, fiery manager of the A's, rushed across the ice after the game to congratulate Stewart. Bitter enemies in battle, they hugged each other on the Madison Square Garden ice surface as a crowd of 15,531 cheered for victor and vanquished alike.

Carr Scores for Amerks.

When Lorne Carr sent the Americans in front late in the first period it seemed as though the "Old Men of Manhattan" were headed for victory. They held on desperately, but goals by Earl Seibert and Levinsky in the last six minutes of the second period changed the picture.

The Duttonmen set a killing pace in the closing chapter in an unsuccessful effort to tie the count. As the Americans were caught down the ice in the third period, Romnes took Paul Thompson's pass to score what proved to be the winning marker. Red Beattie scored later, but only served to narrow the Hawks' margin.

Saskatoon Grads Win Cage Honors

REGINA, April 4.—(CP).—Saskatoon Grads won the Saskatchewan men's basketball championship here Saturday night, defeating Regina Rifles 35-24 to win the two-game point series 66-55. The first game at Saskatoon March 26 ended in a 31-31 tie.

LIST STAGEHAND AMONG FAVORITES IN KENTUCKY RACE

NEW YORK, April 4 (AP)—If the future books prove correct, it will be Stagehand and Fighting Fox when the pick of the three-year-olds thunders past the finish line in the 64th Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, May 7.

Stagehand needs no introduction. His victories in the Santa Anita Handicap and Derby are so recent that fans hardly can have forgotten how he whipped the mighty Seabiscuit and won $136,000 in 10 days, after failing as a two-year-old.

Fighting Fox is feared as a Derby threat chiefly because he is a full brother to the great Gallant Fox, the Derby and triple crown winner of 1930. He always was in the money in five starts last year, but yet has to prove he can go the Derby distance of 1¼ miles. Stagehand showed he could do that when he hung up a new track record of 2:01 3-5 in beating Seabiscuit by a nose in the Santa Anita Handicap.

Popular Horses.

A victory for either would be popular. Stagehand, owned by Maxwell Howard of Dayton, O., is trained by Earl Sande, one of the two jockeys to ride three Derby winners. The Fox, from William Woodward's Belair stud, is being conditions by that astute trainer of champions, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons. Jim saddled the Derby winners, Gallant Fox and Omaha, and sent Granville on to win the 1936 three-year-old title after the colt lost his rider at the Downs.

"At this stage of his training, Fighting Fox is a better horse than either Gallant Fox, Omaha or Granville," said Fitzsimmons today. "He has more speed, whether he can go the route remains to be seen, but I believe he will."

Some experts have tried to decry Stagehand's victory over Seabiscuit, since he was in receipt of 30 pounds. But [illegible] horse that can run as fast as [illegible] did and come from be[illegible] a drive reminiscent of tw[illegible] and Cavalcade must be consid[illegible]

PROPHECY COMES TRUE

CORNWALL OUSTS FALCONS 4 TO 2 ALLAN CUP RACE

OTTAWA, April 4—(CP)—Ottawa's myriad of hockey fans, who jammed the auditorium here Saturday night and saw Cornwall Flyers defeat Falconbridge Falcons 4-2 and eliminate them from Allan Cup competition, looked forward to-day to a week of championship hockey.

Cornwall plays Quebec Aces in Montreal to-night in the first game of the two-of-three series for the Eastern Canada Senior title and the right to play the Western Canada champion in the Allan Cup finals in Calgary. On Wednesday, the second game will be played here, and a if a third is necessary it will be staged here Friday.

Nine thousand fans roaded approval Saturday night as Cornwall banged Falconbridge's forwards around and won the second game of the two-of-three series. Flyers took the first contest in Toronto 5-1.

OSHAWA GAINS JUNIOR FINALS

TORONTO, April 4 — (CP). — Never rated better than an even-money bet since the playdowns started, Oshawa Generals found themselves in the Eastern Canada Junior hockey finals to-day. In their wake were such highly-fancied clubs as Toronto Marlboros and Sudbury Wolves, both victims of the Motor City squad.

Generals, Ontario Hockey Association standard bearers, completed their rout of the Wolves Saturday by defeating the Northern Ontario titlists, 4-2, in the third and deciding game of their series. By their victory, Generals earned the right to meet Perth of the Ottawa Valley to decide which team will represent the East against the West in the Memorial Cup playoffs.

First Perth-Oshawa game will be staged in the Motor City to-morrow night, with the second and third—if the latter is necessary—in Ottawa Thursday and Saturday.

Baseball's Leafs Split A Double

AVON PARK, Fla., April 4.—It was just a case of a local boy who didn't make good, when Louisville Colonels shaded the Maple Leafs, 12-11, in a free scoring battle of base hits yesterday afternoon.

The largest crowd of the training season turned out to see young Conklyn Wells Merriweather make his debut with the Leafs. But the local southpaw, after getting by the first inning safely, didn't give his fans much chance to cheer.

Edged Out Columbus.

The Leafs beat Columbus Red Birds 6-5 Saturday, thanks to a couple of timely taps by Backstop Frankie Reiber—he banged out a pair of triples, each coming with a man on base, and both times scored when the outfielder relayed the ball in poorly. Earl Caldwell and John Berly shared the pitching. Caldwell was good, tossing four hitless frames before he gave up three hits and a run in the fifth. Berly issued five passes in the sixth, four of them in succession. Porter made the feature catch and clipped a pair of singles.

Up And Over Goes Mr. Meadows

Earl Meadows, University of California's, and it could be added, the United States' leading pole vaulter, was 14 feet off the ground when the camera clicked for this shot. He was in the process of taking the championship in that event at the Chicago relays, an intercollegiate sports meet.

Once Toronto Leafs Mascot, Now Stars With Oshawa Team

Billy Taylor Rated As One Of Brightest Prospects For Pro Ranks

OSHAWA, Ont., April 4 (CP). — Billy the Kid once was mascot for Toronto's National Hockey League Maple Leafs. Billy (the Kid) Taylor ranks today as one of the brightest junior prospects for professional hockey in the country.

Taylor, at 18, is one of the stars of the Oshawa Generals team which starts a series here tomorrow night with Perth Blue Wings for the right to represent Eastern Canada in the Memorial Cup final. Few persons figured Generals would be hanging around at this stage of the playdowns.

But Blond Billy, a mascot five years ago with Leafs, is one of the big reasons why Generals have knocked off such highly regarded teams as Toronto Marlboros and Sudbury Cub Wolves. A hint of his scoring power is shown by the fact he has scored 15 goals in the last 12 games. And to show he is a team player he has made almost as many assists in those games.

On Leafs' List.

He'd like to play professional hockey if he's 'good enough to make the grade." At present Billy, who isn't related to the famed Cyclone Taylor of another era, is on the negotiation list of Maple Leafs. His parents wouldn't mind him jumping to the monied ranks.

In the days when the Taylor family lived in Toronto and Billy used to haunt the Maple Leafs Gardens he established some sort of claim to fame by taking the ice at the big Toronto sports arena between periods at N.H.L. games. Only 13 then, he used to "score" goals while the spectators whooped it up with his every shaky stride. It's a common practice now around the circuit to see a youngster on the ice at intermission, but Billy things he "was the first to do it."

Now that Generals are used to upsetting the dope in the playdowns, Billy figures they are a cinch to get by Blue Wings. "We should take them all right," he said, but wouldn't make any predictions about Generals replacing Winnipeg Monarchs as Memorial Cup titleholders.

ELECTRICS WIN CAGE PLAYOFF

C.G.E. will carry a 13-point lead into the second game of the City Basketball League two-game playoff series, next Wednesday, as a result of their 40-27 victory over St. Paul's in the "Y" on Saturday. The Electrics took the first of the finals by setting a fast pace all the way, as the Presbyterians, defending champions, looked quite disorganized in spots. A good gathering of fans saw a lively, open tilt. It might have become rough but for strict refereeing. Galley, Gemmell and Sedgewick were sent off for exhibiting warlike tendencies, and Archibald left for four fouls. Though 29 fouls were called, 16 for the losers.

The first half was tight with the count 19-18 for C.G.E., and St. Paul's led most of the way. Early in the second stanza, Holmes hooped three field baskets to put Electrics well up and, despite frantic work by the Saints, the C.G.E. crew added to their lead as they rushed the losers off their feet.

Leads Scorers

Jakafby led the winners in scoring with 18 points, some on neat angle shots. Holmes got eight and Tranter seven. Galley and Archibald were strong defensively. Weir, though making 12 points, was off in much of his shooting, as were his teammates at times. Pulkinghorn with six and Sedgewick with five were other Saints' scorers. McIntyre and Marsh proved good as guards but failed to score for the first time this season. St. Paul's were weak on penalty throws, getting but seven in 23 attempts. The teams:

C.G.E.: Jakafby, Galley, Hunter, Holmes, Cameron, Archibald and Tranter.

St. Paul's: Marsh, McIntyre, Weir, Ascott, Pulkinghorn, Gemmell and Sedgewick.

Referees—B. Dyer and K. Gillespie.

PETE LANGELLE LEADS SYRACUSE TO 6-3 VICTORY

SYRACUSE, April 4 (CP) — Up steps Pete Langelle, a Winnipeg gift to professional hockey, in a hero's mantle today with the minor league Syracuse Stars. To gain the role the youth who played last year with the Dominion junior champion Winnipeg Monarchs scored three goals against Cleveland Barons.

Langelle sparked a Syracuse attack in a 6-3 victory over Barons last night as the teams opened their best-of-three series for the western division championship in the International - American Hockey League. Providence Reds and Philadelphia Ramblers, playing off for the eastern section title, split two games during the week-end. Reds won 5-3 Saturday and Ramblers scored a 1-0 victory Sunday.

Stars, who finished far behind Barons in the regular schedule, two goals by Langelle and one by Murray Armstrong in the third period for their victory. Other Syracuse marksmen were Norm Locking and Maxie Bennett. The Cleveland scorers were Lorne Duguid, Phil Hergesheimer and Jean Paul Pusie.

Murray Patrick came through with the only goal last night of the game between Reds and Ramblers in the second overtime period. In the free-scoring first game Art Giroux, Starr, and Mel Hill scored singles for Providence while Sammy McManus tallied twice. The Philadelphia marksmen were Kilby McDonald, Bobby Kirk and Lloyd Roubell.

U.S. DAIRY, FOX MEN ASK AID AGAINST CANADIAN OUTPUT

WASHINGTON, April 4 (CP).—As hearings opened before the committee for reciprocity information today on the proposed trade treaty between the United States and Canada, Wisconsin producers of cheddar cheese and silver fox pelts sought protective barriers.

Senator Duffy (Dem., Wisconsin) said any reduction in duties would be "ruinous and destructive" to the dairy industry and to the silver fox fur business.

"Reducing duties on first one and then another of the dairy products will endanger the entire dairy tariff structure," he said in a statement filed with the committee.

"There is no need of importing cheddar cheese or any other kind of cheese from Canada or other foreign countries, because on February 1, 1938, there was in cold storage of United States cheese, 9,000,000 pounds more than the preceding five-year average. And this, in spite of the fact that last year we had the highest per capita consumption ever experienced in this country."

Hits All Products.

Any reduction in the duty of milk products would affect all other milk products, Duffy added, because milk can easily be shifted from making cheese to the production of butter, evaporated milk and other products.

"If dairy products can not be produced at a profit the balance of United States agriculture can not be successful."

Duffy said that before the tariff on cheddar cheese was raised in 1930, more than 9,000,000 pounds were imported from Canada, and after the boost in rates, imports dropped to less than 1,000,000 pounds in 1931.

"But in 1936, when the lowered rates took effect, almost 11,000,000 pounds were imported and for the years 1936 and 1937, cheddar cheese imports from Canada constituted 95 per cent. of the Dominion's cheese shipments into the United States."

Got Its Start in 1922.

Turning to the silver fox fur business, Duffy said world production is about 1,000,000 skins a year, of which about one-third are produced in the United States. The business in the United States, he said, really dated from the imposition of the 60 per cent. tariff in 1922.

"Even with the 50 per cent. duty, Canada and Norway sell a large number of pelts in the United States. Last year more than $1,000,000 worth came in over our tariff wall.

"Silver fox skins are luxuries. The United States is the principal market for luxuries. To glut the market with foreign skins would ruin the price, and destroy the fox farmer of the United States," Duffy declared.

In 1922, he added, fox pelts averaged more than $100 each. In recent sales they brought only about $41.00.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

River through Lerida, and collided with the Moors and Foreign Legionnaires.

The insurgents held firm under the assault, pushed back the militia and took possession of the key points of the city, running up their flag in the cathedral tower. Insurgent tanks and armored cars rumbled through the city, shedding a blaze of machine-gun fire on the houses and the winding streets where the militia still fought.

The militia still waged guerilla warfare against the Insurgent advance guard, striving to slow the advance until the new government line of defence could be reinforced, between Balaguer and Borfas, cutting the highway about 12 miles to the east.

With the government's natural defences crumbled down before Tortosa, the Insurgents had only flank attacks from the hills and the lesser frontal resistance to face there in the march down the Ebro River valley.

The government counter-offensive on the Guadalajara and Teruel fronts see-sawed under the raids of Insurgent planes, with slight progress reported against Insurgent lines.

The exodus to France of government refugees, military and civilian alike, persisted. Frontier officials said 5,440 militiamen had arrived at Bagneres de Luchon and been repatriated, 258 of them to Insurgent Spain via Hendaye, and the others to Catalonia via Cebere.

Barcelona, the provincial capital, remained calm in the face of the Insurgent offensive. Food became scarce, but the general situation was not desperate. A Barcelona communique said government troops beat back an Insurgent threat to Tremp, Barcelona's source of electricity 37 miles north of Lerida.

SHANGHAI, April 4 (AP)—Japanese, advancing under cover of artillery and aviation through smoking ruins and against raking machine-gun fire, reported to-day they had occupied Taierhchwang in southern Shantung province on the central China front.

Chinese were retreating southward to the ancient Grand Canal, crossing into Kiangsu province, the Japanese said. Chinese defence lines on the north banker of the canal and about Taierhchwang were said to have been wiped out.

One Japanese detachment was advancing five miles southeast of the town, working along the canal.

Casualties were high on both sides, with estimates from foreigners that there were 200,000 Chinese in the battle along the southern Shantung border, now the main centre of the war.

SCHOOL "AT HOME" IS JOLLY AFFAIR

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, April 4. — The students of Havelock High School held their annual "At Home" last Friday evening in the Town Hall auditorium, which was very attractively decorated in the school's colors, red, white and purple, for the occasion. The dance was very largely attended and proved to be one of the most successful ever held by the students. Music was provided by Doug. Hutchinson's Orchestra.

Several novelty numbers were included in the program, of which the "broom" dance proved particularly interesting. Streamer, statue, and prize waltz numbers were also much enjoyed. Miss F. Thompson and "Bud" Inkster won the prize in the statue dance, while Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Little took first honors in Joseph Little took first honors in hats and horns distributed among the dancers added much to the entertainment.

said to have been made by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and James Clark Liberal member of the Legislature for Windsor-Sandwich, in which both spoke of their dislike for any kind of hypocrisy.

Doubtful of Charge.

He referred to Premier Hepburn's reported Legislature remarks concerning letters he had received from members of the clergy, and the statement that "no greater hypocrites exist than these gentlemen."

"I do not believe there is, in the whole clergy, Protestant, Catholic or Jew, anyone who would indulge in gambling as a means of personal gain," said Mr. Farquharson. "It is a piece of pure camouflage to say this money will be used for hospitals.

"Across Canada there are 600 hospitals costing $60,000,000 to maintain each year. To raise this, it would be necessary to dispose of $300,000,000 worth of sweepstakes tickets. That is the percentage which would accrue if they were carried on in the same manner as the Irish sweeps."

FLIPPERS FOR SUPPER

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S., April 4.—(CP).—Many North Sydney families had seal flippers—a great Newfoundland delicacy—for supper last night, after arrival of the Canadian Government icebreaker Montcalm.

When news spread that the Montcalm had a partial load of seals on board, residents trooped down to investigate. Captain John Hearn declared open ship on the flippers, rather than throw them away.

Marmora Hunter Bags Timber Wolf Swimming In Crowe River

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Marmora, April 4.

SANFORD Lawrence had the novel experience of shooting a swimming male wolf on Thursday afternoon.

About two-thirty, Sanford was paddling his boat up the river near Wheistone Lake when he saw the animal crossing the river about 50 feet ahead of him.

"I knew that they swam", he told the Examiner "but it was the first I ever saw one in the act."

Thirteen years ago Sanford shot five wolves in quick succession and made headline news.

"This wolf got badly fooled before All Fool's Day" agreed Marmora's noted hunter. "After I put a shot in him, I paddled up to draw him by the hind leg into the boat. He rolled his eyes at me so I took my axe and hit him on the head twice before he quieted. He measured 6 feet 4 inches in length."

Forced From Homes

CHELMSFORD, Ont.—Several families were forced to flee their homes here because of the record flooding of Chelmsford Creek near Sudbury. More than two feet of water has risen above the floors of some houses. The bridge over the creek is under water and boats are used to carry people across streets.

Gambling Just The Same

HAMILTON—"I can see no difference between gambling on the sweepstakes and gambling on the stock market. Sweepstakes are for all, and the latter form of gambling is indulged in by those with oney," said Rev. W. A. Henderson, rector of St. Mark's Anglican Church last night.

C.C.Y.M. Executive

The Canadian Cooperative Youth movement would seem to be well organized and quite capable of looking after itself to judge by this picture in which the newly elected president, Alex Sjoberg, seated at right, is taking a quiet little nap in front of the camera. It may be the result of effort in securing election, or of work that has already been piled on his shoulders, but in any case he was very very tired. Not even the cameraman's admonition could keep him from dozing while he was being "shot." Seated beside the president, and more alert, is Wm. Moody, vice-president. In the back row from LEFT to RIGHT are Jack Foskett, treasurer; Gordon Powell, past president and newly appointed industrial relations officer; W. Wiggins, educational director; J. Johnson, director of publicity.

KNOCKED OFF WHEEL

As Robert J. Douglas of Westwood, driving a car north on George street at 6.30 p.m. Saturday, was making a turn west into Brock street, his automobile collided with a bicycle ridden by Patrick Doran, 16, and the rider was knocked off his machine. Douglas drove the boy to the office of Dr. Robert Young for treatment and it was found that he had the calf of his left leg bruised. The bicycle was damaged by the impact.

Both back fenders and the hub caps of the latter were damaged and the left front fender and headlight of Clapper's car were also damaged.

LIGHT SESSION

Three charges of drunkenness formed the only cases in police court this morning. Two men who were charged with being drunk while they are on the interdicted list both asked for an adjournment, without plea, and were granted their request, one for a week and the other until Wednesday morning. The other accused, charged with being drunk in a public place, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and $4.50 costs. Magistrate Langley hesitated a moment before setting the fine, "I am trying to stop these cases," he said. However, inspector Reid reported there was nothing flagrant in this particular case, so the fine was not stepped up.

JUST CHIMNEY FIRE

If ever you have a chimney fire at your home, don't call the fire department to the scene by telling them "my house is on fire." That is what happened this morning and the fire chief's car, and two engines raced across Hunter street bridge to the home of William Glover, Driscoll Terrace. The proper procedure is to notify the fireman on the switchboard at headquarters that your chimney is on fire, or your house as the case may be. In event of chimney fires much less and different equipment is taken to the scene. Two other chimney fires called the fire department out this morning. One was at 479 Sherbrooke street, the home of R. Lee; the other at 584 Murray street, the home of T. Holland.

COUNCIL MEETING TONIGHT.

The April meeting of the City Council will be held tonight. Business is likely to be lighter than last month. Appointment of an alderman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. F. Huycke, K.C., may be considered, but there has been no recent discussion of this topic by any of the committees.

SERGEANTS TO MEET

Plans for the coming drill season which will begin this month will be discussed at a meeting of the sergeants' mess of the Prince of Wales' Rangers at 8 o'clock on Tuesday night. This will be an important session and it is hoped that every member will be on hand to take part in the proceedings.

HEALTH IMPROVED

The many friends of Charles Stapleton, former sanitary inspector were glad to see him in town last week and to find that his health, the condition of which had caused him to resign from his position last year had improved greatly. Mr. Stapleton is now living in Toronto. He was sanitary inspector here for many years and contributed valuable service in that capacity.

BOYS KNOCKED DOWN

Lloyd, 60½ Hunter street E., reported to the police Saturday afternoon that as he turned into Hunter street, after travelling north on George street, two small boys, Donald Watson, 720 Stewart street and George Gray, 122 Murray street, who apparently became confused as they were attempting to cross Hunter street from the Bank of Toronto corner to the north side of the street, ran into the side of his car and were knocked down. FURTHER INFORMATION.

Supplementing the information regarding a proposed co-operative market for Peterborough, H. G. Walker informed the Examiner today that the interests promoting the project would call for tenders locally, affording contractors in this city an opportunity to share in the work, and also that engineering and architectural fees would not entail additional expense. The only investment the city would be asked to make would be to provide the site, and on the other hand would have control of the market.

"UNREALITY"

"Unreality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Peterborough, on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." (I John 2: 17.) Selections from the Bible included the following from Proverbs 23: 5, "Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not?" Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook, included the following, "As God Himself is good and is Spirit, goodness and spirituality must be immortal. Their opposites, evil and matter, are mortal error, and error has no creator. If goodness and spirituality are real, evil and materiality are unreal and cannot be the outcome of an infinite God, good."

Torn From Bridge

Here is part of the railings from Chemong's Floating Bridge, torn loose by pounding ice. Rex Forsythe and Ray Nicholls are seen here in the boat they are rowing about in the lake on the watch for floating timbers. They piled all this lumber on the shore in the hope it could be used to repair the bridge.

ROTARY IS URGED TO LEND SUPPORT TO Y.M.C.A. DRIVE

A plea for support for the Y.M.C.A. financial campaign for $8,500 was voiced before Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day by Nelson McEwen, national boys' secretary who is here assisting in the drive. Mr. McEwen, who was accompanied by G. H. Roper, general secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., and James G. Wharry, campaign chairman, told the Rotarians that the local effort was being made under most encouraging auspices for not a campaign in Canada this year had fallen below the figure reached last year. Montreal had just completed a drive for $95,000 and had attained a total of $96,150 with over $3,000 more to come in.

Mr. McEwen referred to the fact that many members of Rotary were on the canvassing teams and he urged those who were not to co-operate with the workers to make the event a success.

President James Dutton asked for a good representation of the Peterborough Rotary Club at the inter-city ladies night to be held at Newcastle on the night of April 20 at which the program will be in charge of Elwood Hughes of the Canadian National Exhibition.

The speaker to-day was Rev. George A. Andrew, a Canadian missionary who has spent many years in Honan, China, who, introduced by Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson of All Saints' church, gave a very interesting address upon the ancient civilization of China. A vote of thanks was passed to the speaker on motion of Rotarian Dr. J. A. Bannister.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELSPETH ROBSON.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Elspeth Robson, who died on Saturday was held this afternoon (Monday) from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. A. Middleton, 569 Park Street. Rev. E. W. Young of St. Andrew's United Church officiated, and interment was made at Little Lake Cemetery.

Widow of John T. Robson, Mrs. Robson was born in Douro Township, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Young of Peterborough. She died after an illness of five weeks. MISS DUNLOP.

Peterborough lost one of its closest links with the past on Sunday, when Miss Marianne Dunlop, lifelong resident of this city, died at her home, 550 Water Street, at noon. She was in her 93rd year, and one of the city's oldest residents.

Miss Dunlop's mind was keen to the last, and she was a fount of information on the pioneer days of this district. She was interested in a wide variety of subjects and until her eyesight failed was a great reader, always informed on the news of the world. She will be long remembered for her many gifts to charity, the Sailors' Mission, Bible Society and Grenfell Mission.

She was the daughter of the late Andrew Charles Dunlop and Eleanor Susannah Dunlop, and a granddaughter of the late Major and Mrs. Dunlop of Edinderry House, Edinderry, County Down, Ireland; and also a grand-daughter of the late Honorable Thomas Alexander Stewart and his wife, Frances, of Auburn, Peterborough. While no immediate relatives survive, Miss Dunlop has connections across the entire Dominion.

YOUNG BOY IS AUCTIONED OFF CHURCH SERVICE

A young boy was auctioned off for a cool million dollars at George Street United Church on Sunday evening.

It was part of a unique father and son service sponsored by Rev. M. C. Parr, and featured by attendance of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir. An auctioneer brought the boy, Ronald Parr, son of the minister, to an auction block at the front of the church, and offered him for sale. Bids stepped from an original $5,000 to a final one million before the sale was completed.

First bidder to be heard by Auctioneer J. H. Miles was War, in the person of Tom Shields. Offering $5,000 he made a strong plea, urging that his business could not get along without boys and that failure to secure them would drive him out of business. "What are a few million boys more or less in the world as long as munitions manufacturers make money?" he asked. He said the government sets their value at $5,000 apiece and so offered that amount.

His bid was raised by Pleasure, played by Charlton McBride. "I can offer bigger and better things," he said. "War means death, but pleasure means fun, and fun is a big thing in a boy's life. He offered $5,500. At that moment Crime, played by Leo Copp, stepped forward. "Wait," he said, 'pleasure is a false alarm, insipid, vapid, empty. "Boys want thrills, danger, excitement, mystery. I am in the biggest business in the world." He painted a glowing picture of the advantages to be had from a life of crime, and offered $6,000, guranteeing the boy riches and fame. He raised the bid to $6,000.

Fame and Fortune.

Big Business, played by Don Gilmour, told of the fame and fortune that awaited young men who would follow him, and raised the bid. Education, played by L. M. Richardson, made the next raise. One of the most eloquent pleas was voiced by Frank Greatrix, bidding for Home Life and Fatherhood. "I want this boy for fatherhood," he said. "The great bulwark of our nation is in their hands. I want this boy to train himself to raise sons of high character and purpose. Home life and fatherhood are man's real vocations. V. R. Henry spoke for the professions and Walter Outram for the farmer. Rev. M. C. Parr made an even higher bid for idealism and service. "Man does not live by bread alone," he said, and pleaded for firm character as the fundamental need of the present day. Such character only came as a result of religious training, he argued. "The church wants this boy not to keep him for herself always, but to train him into Christian manhood for big business, for education, for fatherhood, for the professions, and for the farmer," he said.

At this moment, war, pleasure and crime pooled their resources and made the highest bid—20,000. Business, education and the professions bid $50,000 and war, brandishing a gun, shouted a bid of $100,000. Then the church announced it would give a million.

"A million for the boy?" queried the auctioneer. "Son, you are the hope of the world, and cheap at a million. Because you are my boy and the final vote is mine, I give you to the church.

WORSE DEAD THAN ALIVE

KITCHENER, Ont., April 4 (CP).—Some inefficient poisoner of rats has caused a serious problem here. The rats have died in obscure places in the business section and the stench is terrible. The health department will use tear gas on the living ones to drive them out and avoid any future mistakes.

"Talak" Parts Them

Relatives in England of the Scottish-born Sultana of the Malay state of Johore, confirmed reports that she had been divorced by the wealthy sultan who uttered the formal Moslem word "talak" to sever his matrimonial ties. The Sultan and his wife, the former Mrs. Helen Wilson, are shown here. "Talak" is the equivalent to the English expression "get out". While the divorce became final with the utterance of this word, the government of Johore will officially grant the divorce to meet British legal requirements.

COUPLINGS PARTED CHEMONG BRIDGE

Couplings in the Chemong Bridge were parted in four places Saturday to relieve the strain on the whole structure, anchors were reported holding stoutly, and excepting the loss of the railings, swept away by ice last Thursday and Friday, the bridge was regarded as having a good chance of coming through the Spring assaults with no major damage to its floating timbers and highway surface.

Sam Bell of Bridgenorth informed the Examiner today that the couplings were severed for the purpose of providing openings for the current to flow in whichever direction the wind blew.

This morning a strong breeze out of the north was blowing parallel to the bridge, easing recent straining. The main body of ice beyond the channel of open water on either side of the bridge was still intact today, the recent colder weather apparently preventing for the time the break up that is due any day.

MORE SNOW, COLD STILL IN SIGHT

TORONTO, April 4 (C.P.). — Snowflurries marked week-end weather across Western Ontario and weather forecasts hinted cold weather and more snow was likely during the night. Chill winds yesterday in Toronto carried occasional falls of snow which melted as soon as it reached the ground.

London reported four inches of snow and an 18.2 reading of the thermometer. Stratford, with an inch and a half of snow, reported a low of 19 and a high of 33. The high mark was 22 degrees lower than the same day last year.

Snow fell at Galt, but the roads were in good condition. Windsor, after a cold week-end of snow and rain, expected more snow from lowlying threatening skies.

Ottawa's weather was clear and 40 above to-day. Cold weather during the week-end in Northern Ontario improved flood-swept roads only slightly.

Anti-Communists Fight In Hall

MONTREAL, April 4 (CP)—Police were called yesterday to restore order at a meeting they described as anti-communistic. Arrival of the police put a stop to fighting which had been going on in a hall on north-end Mount Royal Avenue. No one was hurt and there was no damage.

Officers said there were close to 1,000 people in the hall and that fighting broke out when someone yelled: "Are Fascists in Canada going to be like those in Spain and murder innocent women and children?"

A secton of the crowd began yelling and stamping their feet. When others objected fighting broke out. Police were called and when they arrived the fighting stopped immediately.

MUSKRAT CATCH IS REPORTED HEAVY

The supply of muskrat pelts reaching the city on Saturday indicated a heavy catch for the first week of the season. Trappers continued their deliveries this morning, Lech and Sons buying around one thousand hides by ten o'clock. The price averaged one dollar.

Marshes from the Scugog to Rice Lake were represented in the piles of pelts, stretched on their osier gads, that have already reached the fur houses, and at the present volume it was believed that the price would not exceed the recent $1.10 level for the better grades.

LAUNDRYMAN IS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Wing Lee, proprietor of the Hop Lee Laundry on George Street, was found dead in his bed at 7.30 o'clock this morning (Monday) A post-mortem revealed he had died of natural causes.

He was 56 years old and had lived in Peterborough for more than 30 years. A Christian, he was a member of Murray Street Baptist Church and of L. J. Pettit's Bible Class. He was in good health when he retired last night, and was found dead in the morning by his cousin, with whom he lived. An insurance endowment that would have paid Lee $1,100 was due to mature to-day. Officers Archie Menzies and John Rogers investigated, and Dr. H. M. Yelland was called in. Dr. H. N. Young, city coroner, was notified and performed the post-mortem early this afternoon. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

SELWYN FACTORY FAVORS SYSTEM FOR WEEKLY PAY

SELWYN, April 4.— The annual spring meeting of the Selwyn cheese factory was held in the factory on Friday afternoon. The attendance of patrons was not as large as anticipated by the cheese maker, Rex. Wilson, but all who were present showed enthusiasm for the coming year.

President—Wellie Pearson.

Secretary-Treasurer — Clayton Fitzgerald.

All the salaries were retained at their former prices and it was decided to again pay the patrons every week for their milk, the same as last year.

W. J. Moore, cheese instructor, was present, and explained to the farmers the meaning and the work of the tester, a man appointed this year to do the testing in the factories that was formerly done by Mr. Moore. Jack Brethour is the man appointed for this year. The main object in having an extra man for this work is to give the cheese instructor more time for his many duties as inspector.

After all the items of business had been discussed the meeting was adjourned.

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Barbara Kingsley, pretty young society editor of th e Martinsville Post, has just "covered" another wedding. She is tired of the routine but Peter Baxter, managing editor, cheers her fading spirits.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 2

PETER WAS gone when Barbara entered the newspaper office, following the wedding. His assistant was reading the wire releases. He looked up lazily.

"The flower show layout you wanted for Sunday—the one you sent into the city for retouching—is coming down on the 7:15. I told Pike to pick it up but he's out on a job for the bos. Going in that direction? The conductor has the stuff."

'I'll get it, Barney."

It would be something to do. The rest of the town would be making merry at the wedding for a long time yet. She wished there was someone to whom she could talk. It was odd how the last two years had taken her away from the group who were dancing at Marie's wedding. If Natalie were around—

But Natalie Kendall, sparkling, wise, sophisticated, older by half a dozen years, was in New York. She was a fashion columnist on a smart Manhattan magazine. She had come from Martinsville and it was to Barbara whom she turned during her infrequent visits home.

Maybe Peter would come in, Barbara mused. She could say anything to him and know that he understood. He might not agree. Especially on this marriage question. He thought that it would be nice if she would marry him some day. He didn't set a time. Just any off day. It was too bad you couldn't love someone whom you liked as well as she liked Peter.

At seven o'clock she climbed into the rickety old roadster which she had bought with a couple of checks earned by stories written for a child's magazine. She left her hat in the office. She needed the wind in her hair tonight.

The train was on time, the pictures were delivered, and she was watching the last car swing around the bend, when she saw the usher whom she had met in the office running down the platform.

"I missed it!" he said, and put down his bag. Then his eyes brightened. "Hello! Did you miss it, too, and why didn't you stay for the supper?"

She let one answer take care of both questions. "I had to meet the train for a picture layout."

"Then maybe it was luck—my missing it!" He smiled and the dusty platform became bright and clean. "When does the next train go east tonight?"

"There aren't any more tonight unless you go to the Junction and catch the 10:21."

"Good! How far is the Junction, and how do I get there?"

"It's an hour's ride. Now hadn't you better be getting back to finish celebrating?"

She didn't want him to go. He reminded her of college proms, football games, campus strolls—so many things that were no longer on her calendar. Now she recorded births and the annual garden show and somebody's niece who was spending two weeks in Martinsville—

Then, because she was so honest, she admitted that it suddenly was important that she saw more of this man. It was absurd, of course. You couldn't look at a man for the third time in your life—and all on the same day at that—and think: "I'll never be busy again if you need me!" You couldn't—but you did.

"Are you free?" the man was asking, with that same eager grin.

She nodded, not quite believing.

"Good! Then why don't you and I get something to eat? I'd better introduce myself. I'm Garry Page."

Garry Page! Of course she knew that name. He was a special writer and columnist on a New York newspaper and sometimes his work was syndicated. Occasionally the Post carried it. Her eyes were puzzled, justnow.

"We didn't know you were coming!"

He threw back his head and laughed.

She went. "Your name wasn't with the ushers. I've copied the list 12 times—maybe 50 . . . Now I see why you dropped in at the office. But why didn't you let us know? The Post would have bought a bolt of bunting and hired a band."

"Bill Jameson, the bridegroom, and I were college roommaes. I begged off from duty today, and then Hank Lawrence—another sufferer in the old days—came down with mumps so I grabbed a plane and here I am." He looked up the street. "You and I have just three hours in which to get acquainted. Where shall we go?"

Three hours. Three hours out of forever, Barbara was saying to herself.

Aloud she asked: "Are you really hungry, after the wedding supper?"

He nodded gravely. "I'm starved! You don't get a thing to eat at a wedding supper but some chicken blanketed in cream. Do you know of a place where the steaks are thick and the biscuits are fluffy?"

"If you don't mind 'stuttering Mary'—my method of conveyance—I know a dining room by a brook."

They hadn't gone a mile before he was asking her questions about her paper; telling her of the small town sheet on which he used to work; reminiscing quietly until she felt that it was the most natural thing in the world that her path had joined his, however fleetingly, at the crossroads.

"Why didn't you go back to the wedding?" she asked presently.

"I said goodby once and I hate to repeat the word. Anyway, I like this better."

She laughed, for the car was limping a little now. But the night sang by, there was the smell of ripening apples on the wind, and the stars were a shining net to keep the moon from spilling. Garry Page was lean and long and young and humorous.

It would be a night to keep—to put away and take out sometimes after a while. But that was the very thing that Miss Abbie had told her she must not do. She must get out and live.

It was surprising how well two people could become acquainted over a small table, on a veranda by a brook, with a radio finding a song that an orchestra played 500 miles away—which made a nice conversational backdrop. It was surprising how many common likes and dislikes they shared. They both preferred creamed potatoes to mashed, the theater to the movies, sweet music to swing (with a few exceptions that belonged to Garry). They did not like turnips, thick china, the middle of July or loaves of sugar wrapped in paper. They discovered a strange affinity for Swinebourne's poems and Italian spaghetti. Garry confessed that he was trying to write a play.

And at 10:21 it would all be over forever! Garry would go away and find other girls who liked the things he did, and were at hand to do them with him. She would be just a girl from a little town who had sat with him while he waited for a train. She wondered if she would be lonesome tomorrow for a man she just had met.

She looked at her watch. Garry caught the message in her eyes before she spoke.

"Time to start to the Junction?" he asked.

They said little as the car swept through the night. The stars were gone now, and there were raindrops in the breeze. The road was dark. Barbara had a frantic sense that something was ending—something that had not even started. She was being idiotic and foolish!

"If ever you come to New York—" Garry was saying.

"That's the Junction," she answered, nodding her bright head toward a row of houses that nestled at the side of a great network of steel tracks.

"We seem to have company," Garry murmured. "I believe the whole wedding party is here. That's strange. I thought Bill and Marie were motoring east to catch the boat to France."

"So did I," Barbara said. "I wonder why they changed their plans."

The car swung up to the platform and Garry helped her out. He gave his strong, pigskin bag to a porter, and they sauntered together to the party that surrounded the bride and bridegroom.

"Garry! I thought you caught the early train!"

"Garry Page, do you call this cricket?"

"Well, you old son of a peacock! Where've you been hiding?"

The group closed around Garry, shutting him in with its lighthearted banter, proclaiming him as one of itself. Physically, it closed around Barbara, too, but she knew that to most of the group she was not present. She didn't belong to their play world.

Then she saw her cousin Julia. Julia's blue eyer were wide with amazement. Her red lips were drawn in a fierce line. Garry, the man who should have entertained her, had forsaken her for Barbara, and she would get even, her look said.

There were questions and answers going around. The bridegroom's car had been tampered with as part of a wedding joke. It wouldn't start.

Julia spoke clearly in the firts silence. "Garry, I didn't mean to desert you this afternoon.

Banish the Bugbear of Self-Consciousness

Don't Alienate Your Friends

Poor Connie. She's seized by such a panic of self-consciousness she rebuffs Jack's friendly greeting, offends him by her frigid nod.

If you're self-conscious, you probably feel that you're inferior to other people. Don't let yourself take that feeling seriously. There's hardly a famous person — movie star, writer, aviator, or diplomat—who hasn't had strong inferiority feelings to fight.

Watch sympathetically for self-consciousness in others. You'll be surprised at the number of your companions-in-misery. And in striving to put them at ease, you'll have taken a long step toward forgetting yourself.

Take stock of the little things that make you worth while; the way you cheered up a friend by describing an amusing incident no one else had seen; your vivid appreciation of a beautiful sunset, a lovely poem.

In our 32-page booklet a well-known psychologist gives all sorts of valuable hints on keeping your chin up, ousting every kind of inferiority complex.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of OVERCOMING SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS AND OTHER INFERIORITY COMPLEXES to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

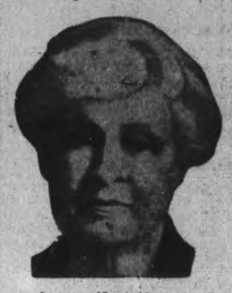
Most of the Misfit Marriages Are the Results of Young People Not Having Enough Experience With the Opposite Sex to Learn to Know Them.

LISTEN, girls! Have a new beau every day. Change the Boy Friend as often as you do your hat and your hair-do. Get acquainted with all the different styles and types of boys—tall ones and short ones, fat ones and thin ones, blondes and brunettes, good-lookers and homely ones, those who have a line and those who choke on their Adam's apple when they try to jolly a girl—to see which one you really like the best and which one blends the best with your own particular taste and disposition.



That is the advice that a distinguished professor gives to the girls of 'teen age in a coed university. And he further goes on to say that the more experience that young people have in love, the better their lives will be; that mothers shouldn't try to keep their young daughters from falling in love. They should encourage bread-and-butter romances and Mamie and Sadie having a fresh "pash" at least once a week.

Have a new beau every day. These are words of wisdom that I trust every girl who reads these lines will cut out and paste in her compact where it will be continually before her eyes, for the biggest mistake that a girl ever makes is in letting some boy monopolize her and segregate her from the crowd before she ever has a chance to look 'em over and see which one really hits her fancy.

Don't make that mistake. Don't tie yourself down to Tom before you have given Dick and Harry, Percival and Augustus a whirl. Play around with just as many lads as you can because that is the only way you can get to know anything about men, get wise to their little tricks and manners, and so be able to compare them and decide which is the most desirable. Or, at any rate, which one you want for keeps.

Most of the misfit marriages that end in divorce are the result of young people not having had enough experience with members of the opposite sex to be able to judge whether they were shoddy or all wool and a yard wide and guaranteed not to shrink or fade in the wash of everyday living. All boys and girls look alike to them, so they take the first one who is handsome and "amusing," as the saleslades say, and regret their bargain ever afterward. Don't do this. Shop around for a husband as carefully as you would for a dress that you expected to have to wear a long time and that you would still feel dressed up in as long as there was a rag of it left.

Experiment a lot with love before you go off the deep end with any man. There is nothing so tricky as heart disease. The first time you have an attack and find your pulses throbbing, your breath going short and you lose your appetite and like awake at night wondering if he got home safely or was run over by an automobile, you are sure that you have a fatal case that nothing but death will ever end.

But no casualty occurs. He goes off to school, or you go to visit Cousin Maria; another boy comes along and another after him, who rouses the same symptoms in you. But like cures like and you are miraculously saved for the time when you are past the calf-love stage and are capable of a deep and enduring passion. But you would have been sunk if you had married your first sweetheart.

So while you are young and unformed and your emotions haven't had time to jell, change your partners often, girls. Have a new beau every day! Don't go "steady," as the phrase goes, with any boy. Constancy at your age is just a quality of stickiness that you have in common with a porous plaster. Don't be afraid that if you give up one boy you won't get another. The reason they steer clear of you now is because they think you are bespoken.

Anyway you look at it "keeping company" is a racket in which men get all the percentage. It is bitterly unfair to girls. It forces a girl to give up all other men for one and cuts her off from any chance of marrying any one else, but it doesn't obligate the man to marry her. He can kiss and ride away whenever he likes and she is left flat. And the marvel is that girls are silly enough to enter into a game in which the cards are all stacked against them.

Don't do it, girls. Have a new beau every day! Change boy friends! Competition is the life of trade in love as well as business.

ALL TYPES OF MINDS

BRIDGE advertises the general type of mind you possess. Is yours over-bold, over-timid, over-hasty, over-slow, prone to resentfulness when you are bluffed, or likely to be frightened by fakers? Despite the way that psychic bidders have been shown up in recent years, there still are plenty of players who let such adventurers kid them out of games and slams.

After passes by East and South, West started the bidding with 1-Club. North doubled this and East redoubled. South put in a bid of 1-Spade, which West passed and North raised to 2-Spades, whereupon all passed.

The North-South cards will produce game in spades or in no trump, but their holders allowed themselves to be influenced by the bidding of the opponents. North should have injected a bid of 2-No Trumps instead of a simple raise to 2-Spades. South then would have had no hesitancy in raising to game. With the amount of honor strength held by North, it should have been apparent to him that if West had enough strength for an opening bid, East certainly did not have enough for a redouble.

East had plenty of nerve to make the psychic redouble he did, but in this case his courage was rewarded.

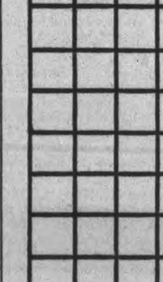
APRIL 4

By Fred Williams

Eight years ago (April 4, 1930) the people of Canada learned with sorrow of the passing on the 3rd in England, of a woman who had been one of the best cultural advertisers of this country in Europe, Madame Albani - Gye. She had not been in Canada for many years, but her home was always open to Canadians and many a young student got from her the inspiration which could only come from one who had herself risen from poverty. For Albania was, in very truth, a daughter of the French-Canadian countryside.



Fred Williams

On November 1, 1854, there was born to Joseph Lajeunnesse, of Chambly, Que., a few miles southwest of Montreal, a daughter, to whom was given the name Marie Louise Cecilia Emma. She early showed signs of musical talent, and as her parents, like most of their race, made sacrifices in order that their children might have a good education, she was sent to the famous Sacred Heart convent at Montreal where her talent was soon recognized. At the age of 15 she was the organist of the Church of the Sacred Heart, New York, and there the training of her soprano voice was really begun. She went to Europe where she studied under Deprez in Paris and Lamperti in Milan, and made her debut in opera at Messina, Italy, in 1870. Then she sang at Florence and Malta, and in 1872 made her first appearance in London, at Covent Garden theatre, in 'La Somnambula." At once she made a great success and for over 20 years was one of the stars of the operatic stage.

In addition, she sang at all the great English festivals and created many oratorios. She sang in Paris, Italy, Germany, Russia, Holland, Belgium, India, South Africa and Australia, to say nothing of the United States and her own home land.

Married in 1878 to Ernest Gye, a great impresario, Albani was always a living denial of the theory that it is not possible for a great artiste to be domesticated, for she was a good wife and mother as well as the idol for years of the musical world of the empire. She made a farewell tour of Canada in 1911, in which also she published her reminiscences under the title "Forty Years of Song."

In 1925 the King conferred upon her the Order of the British Empire, which made her Dame Albani.

BEDTIME STORY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Uncle Wiggily looked at himself in the mirror.

"My pink nose is twinkling just right," he said to himself, "but I think my whiskers need shaving. I must look nice when I go adventuring."

The rabbit gentleman looked in the bath room cabinet for his razor and shaving brush and got ready to lather his face. But, to his surprise, he couldn't see the razor.

"Yes, Mr. Longears, what is it?" asked the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Have you seen my razor, Nurse Jane?"

"Oh, your razor? Oh, yes, it's down here in the kitchen."

"What is my razor doing in your kitchen?" asked Mr. Longears.

"It isn't doing anything just now," said Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I was using it to chop up some carrots for soup. But I have finished now. I'll bring your razor up at once."

Hash Not Hurt

"Do you mean to tell me," asked Uncle Wiggily sort of stormy night like, "that you took my razor to make carrot harsh?

"Oh, it didn't harm the hash any," said Nurse Jane. "Besides, I didn't use the razor to make carrot hash, it was carrot soup."

"It's all the same," said the rabbit gentleman, shaking his pink nose. "I am sure you have made my razor so dull I cannot shave with it."

"Oh, I don't believe so," squeaked Nurse Jane, cheerful like. "But here it is and you can soon tell."

Nurse Jane crept up the back stairs to the bath room in the hollow stump bungalow and gave Mr. Longears the razor.

"There you are. Thanks a lot!" she

"Well both go the barber's."

squeaked, still cheerful and uncomprehending like.

"Um! Yes! We shall see," said Uncle Wiggily.

Not only did he see but he also felt. For when he had lathered his face and tried to shave his whiskers, he found the carrot-cutting had so dulled his razor it would not cut the hairs. It pulled and tweaked until Mr. Longears had to cry:

"Owchie! Scowchie!"

"What's the matter?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Oh, you wouldn't understand," said the rabbit gentleman resigned like and patient. "Well, what am I to do now?" he asked himself as he looked in the mirror again. "I must shave but I cannot with that dull razor. I think I must go to the barber's."

Visitor

He was just going to hop to the barber's when up the stairs came waddling Mr. Twistytail, the fat pig gentleman.

"Hello, Wiggy," greeted Mr. Twistytail.

"Hello, Twitsy!" said the rabbit.

"Can you give me a shave, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Mr. Twistytail. "I can't find my razor and I'm in a hurry."

"I never could shave you with my dull razor," said the rabbit.

"Try it!" grunted the pig. "My skin is tough. That's why they make footballs of pigskin. "Lather me up and try."

But when Uncle Wiggily tried to shave the pig with the dull razor, Mr. Twistytail yelled and squealed and howled until Nurse Jane was going to call the Police Dog.

"This settles it!" said Uncle Wiggily. "We'll both go to the barber's. Come along with me, Twisty." So the two animal gentlemen started for the barber's and something happened. I'll tell you about it in the next story which will be about Uncle Wiggily's charlotte russe.

But I hope the cheese knife doesn't shave all the warts off the dill pickle and make it look like a green sausage.

Nut Savory Macaroni

Two cups broken or elbow macaroni, 1 cup old Canadian cheese, 1 cup chopped broken walnuts, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ tablespoon minced onion. Boil macaroni in salted water to cover until tender. Arrange in greased casserole in alternate layers with cheese and nuts. Season tomatoes with salt and pepper, and add onion; pour over macaroni mixture, cover and bake in moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for about 40 minutes. If you wish to bake it longer add more tomatoes in the first place — longer baking blends the tomato and cheese into the macaroni more thoroughly.

The dish could be made ahead of time and reheated when needed—a good discovery for those of you who observe Lent.

Splendid Program For Visitors' Night At Zimbalist Violin Club

On Saturday evening the Zimbalist Violin Club Room, (Girl Guide Hall, Simcoe Street) was filled with appreciative visitors who listened to an hour of first rate musical entertainment given by the members of the club and assisting artists.

The program was under the direction of Roy Rome, A.C.C.M., L.C.C.M., and opened with an arrangement of 'God Save the King' by Mr. Rome, played by the Club ensemble. This group of young violinists, (all pupils of Roy Rome) play with remarkably firm, round, smooth tone, and fine interpretation, and if they continue to advance as rapidly in the coming months as they have since the New Year they will assuredly make another fine musical organization for Peterborough.

The Bach Minuet was joyfully played, while 'Morning Prayer' (Tschaikowsky) with muted strings was lovely in tonal expression and beauty. Robin Waite, though only nine years of age, made a splendid impression with his two solos, and Ken Reid's talk on the life of Mozart was very interesting, and listened to attentively by the audience.

A violin duet by Menzie McLaren and Roy Rome brought continued applause, and Joyce Cribbis played 'Royal March' as a piano solo so well that she responded with "Sunset on the St. Lawrence" as an encore. The violin ensemble played 'Musette' (C. Von Gluck) a dainty little number with lovely arranged harmony for the first, second, third and fourth violins; Anna McLeod, violin solo contribution, 'Adoration' (Borawski) was played with beautiful tone and fine interpretation, and the string quartet, composed of Ruth Fisher, Anna McLeod, Mary Jane Wharry and Roy Rome, with piano accompaniment by Miss Marguerite Rome, was well received. The program finished with two numbers by the ensemble, the magnificent "Ave Verum" by Mozart showing up all the rich tone and expression of the strings, and a happy and colorful number "Hunter's Song" by Schumann.

At the conclusion of the program, J. G. Wharry voiced a vote of thanks and appreciation on behalf of the parents to Mr. Rome and his sister for the splendid work they are doing with the young people in training them so carefully and splendidly in the development of their musical talents.

Dinners of the Week

(By MARY MOORE)

All These Meals Have Been Served, Eaten and Approved

SUNDAY

Roast Stuffed Fresh Shoulder of Pork
Moulds of Jellied Apple Sauce (see note)
Macedoine of Canned Corn Kernels and Fresh Peas (see note)
Pan Roasted Small Old or New Potatoes
Canned Peach De Luxe Dessert
Coffee

NOTE: Merely make apple sauce as you usually do—one pint. Soak one tablespoon gelatine in ¼ cup cold water for 5 minutes, then pour the hot apple sauce over it and stir until it is dissolved, and pour into moulds or custard cups or demi-tasses to set. When roast is served surround with these turned out apple sauce moulds—attractive and unusual. Adding a can of kernel corn to fresh boiled peas extends them and is a good flavor and color combination.

MONDAY

Cold Sliced Roast Pork
Assorted Relishes
Potatoes cubed in Cream Cheese or Potatoes au Gratin
Chopped Buttered Spinach
Fresh Fruit Cup
Buttered Crackers Coffee

TUESDAY

(Vegetarian Oven Dinner)
Nut Savory Macaroni (don't miss this one—it is a find)
Baked Split and Buttered Parsnips
Spinach Souffle or Buttered Canned Asparagus
New Maple Syrup Hot Johnny Cake
Coffee

Note: The above is a grand dinner, rather economical too. Don't overlook it.

TUESDAY

Tomato Bouillon
Stuffed Liver Rolls or Larded Whole Liver
Mashed Potatoes
Sliced Head Lettuce with French Dressing
Rhubarb Crisp Cream Coffee

THURSDAY (Hasty)

Sauteed Tissue thin Slices Back Bacon Scrambled Eggs

Canned Green Gage Plums
Buttered Toasted Crackers Coffee

FRIDAY

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Dear Friends:

Were you ever troubled about something and turned open the Bible at random, put your finger blindly on a certain place, and then looked to see if perhaps you got something to guide or encourage you. I know it sounds childish, but I have done it often, and it is surprising how often it works, although not every time.

So, yesterday, I was troubled in my mind. My faith was there alright, but it was not working on all six cylinders, in fact it was missing badly. I did not know why it was so low, but knew something was causing this, so I went to the Bible for help.

And the words I had put my finger on were: "Fear not." The words our Lord used to His disciples and those around Him so much, Fear Not. So I had a session with myself, I stood myself up against the wall, and went back over the years in retrospect. In this session I realized how my fears had brought certain things about to my hurt and detriment.

I knew also that when I had put fear from me, I had always got my desires. Now, no one knows better than me how hard it is not to fear certain things, for many's the time I have fought blind unreasoning fear in all its terrible forms.

I know what it can do to a person, taking all the courage out of one, making them cowardly, giving them a feeling of inferiority which is hard to combat. Why, I remember when I came to live in this town my knees would knock together if I went downtown alone, for fear someone would not like my clothes or something.

Now I can walk through the largest crowd and it doesn't bother me. But fear can creep up on you from so many angles, and still looking sternly at myself, I said, "Where's your faith? What have you done with it? Has God ever let you down yet? Hasn't he always opened another door for you if the one you had been using was closed? Shame on you for mislaying your faith like that."

And, right away, it seemed as if a heavy load had dropped from my shoulders, and faith began creeping through my veins again. Fear is truly like a magnet drawing what you fear towards you in the same way that faith brings things about.

It is in our thoughts, and the things which predominate there come to us. Why then do we not cultivate faith more, for there is no room for them both in our brain? Coleridge tells us this about fear:

"Like one that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows a frightful fiend
Doth close behind him tread."

Life is such a lonesome road at times, and fear is the worst fiend of all, because it weakens us where we should be strong, it keeps our desires from us, it ties our hands and stops our brain from working as it should. Let us try then, to cast the evil thing from us, and let faith comfort us as it was meant to do.

ROBERTA.

500 Mohawks Petition Throne Lands Sold To Belgians

Six Braves In Jail For Attempting To Use Rights Granted Fathers

OTTAWA, April 5—(CP).—A land controversy that has sent 500 Mohawk-Iroquois Indians of the Lake of the Two Mountain reserve, Quebec, 50 miles from Montreal, back to the start of Canada's history for evidence and to the throne with a petition has been revealed in a return filed by resources minister Crerar to questions asked in the Commons by W. A. Walsh (Con. Mount Royal).

Today six Indians are in jail, Mr. Walsh said, offences arising originally from the Indians' assertion of a right to exploit certain lands as their fathers had done, lands now said to be the property of Belgian settlers near Oka, Que. The Belgians title was upheld by a Privy Council decision of 1912 but disputed by the Indians because they say there exists a title granted by the Crown in perpetuity to the Indians.

It was learned the Department of Indian Affairs is making an effort to reach a settlement either by moving the Indians to other land in the vicinity or to another reserve. But 500 have refused to move, standing on what they say are their rights. About 15 years ago, the department persuaded about half the Indians to move to reserve near Georgian Bay, Ontario. But the rest refused to leave.

Mr. Walsh says that the Indians claim that drunken chiefs more than 100 years ago ceded the lands involved to the gentlemen of St. Sulpice, a religious order with a monastery at Oka. The Indians claim that the chiefs had no right to cede the land that in any event such action could not upset a royally granted title.

From the ceding of the land until 1936, when the religious order sold the land, the monks never restrained the Indians in the exercise of their presumed rights on the land, Mr. Walsh said.

Right to Sell Upheld

The Privy Council of 1912 upheld the right of the religious order to sell the land, the action arising from a transaction. But the Indians now claim that there exists proof of the original royal grant by the king of France, validated by George III. of England, and that this proof overrides the Privy Council decision.

In 1936 the Compagnie Immobilier pour Favoriser l'Agriculture (Real Estate Company to help Agriculture), Limited, Montreal, negotiated the sale of the lands by the religious order to Belgian settlers headed by Baron Louis Empain. Since the Belgians settled at Oka there has been trouble, with the Indians insistent on their right to use the lands.

The long file tabled in the Commons begins with a letter from Robert Moses, one of the Indians, who wrote "our titles are in the hands of notary Legault at Vaudreuil but Mr. Legault refuses to show them to us."

On Jan. 4, 1937, the chiefs of the Turtle, Wolf and Bear tribal clans addressed a joint letter to Prime Minister Mackenzie King and cited what they say was an order issued at Quebec, March 11, 1762, forbidding the whites from "taking advantage of our (Indian) simplicity."

An earlier document said to have been signed by the king of France at Fontainebleau, France, Aug. 29, 1680, was also said to exist.

The letter referred to the arrest of two Indians for cutting wood on the disputed land. The letter asked freedom for them and the writers offered "to proffer (to Mr. Mackenzie King) a belt of wampum to be kept in perpetual memory of that portion of our oration."

Chiefs Martin Martin and Simon Simon on April 22, 1937, wrote to Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir directing his attention to a petition sent by the Indians to Ottawa Nov. 16, 1936, "concerning the disturbance caused by the Belgian people who have defrauded our land and fuel. Your honor promised to defend us people of the Lake of the Two Mountains and so far nothing has been done for the good of the cause."

Letter To Governor

The chiefs cited the petition of Nov. 16, 1936, which said to the Governor-General "It will be quite easy for you to settle this the right way. It's up to you to settle this matter among peaceful people who have every right on their own land. We want you to see to this matter the first thing, as soon as you understand what we want."

On May 31, 1937, the head chief, the Bear Clan chief and the Wolf Clan chief wrote to his Excellency, Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Crerar and drew attention to a proclamation concerning the lands said to have been made by Sir Guy Carleton, Dec. 22, 1776.

On July 2, 1937, came the first complaint from the other side. R. Dourte wrote the Department of Indian Affairs complaining the Indians were mowing on town lots in Oka and doing other things to discomfit the settlers.

R. L. Calder, Montreal lawyer, on Sept. 17, 1937, wrote Mr. Crerar a copy of a petition to the King in which the Indians asked His Majesty's aid. The Indians were not Catholics and did not wish to follow French laws, the petition said.

"Therefore believing in the exalted office and power which Your Majesty exercises by divine right, we humbly approach Your Majesty for the enlistment of your aid, as a last resort, having failed elsewhere," the petition said.

On Nov. 17, 1737, the settlers alleged the Indians cut down 1,000 trees the settlers had planted at Oka.

Next letters in the file are from Royal Werry, Montreal lawyer, who has taken up the cudgels for the Indians "If this country were Ethiopia or Spain, one could understand your attitude in the treatment of these people," he wrote.

Mr. Werry wrote to Mr. Crerar last Dec. 24 pointing to the Privy Council decision and saying "the Dominion government should know that the Oka Indians have really no home in Oka." He asked the Dominion to find one for them.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, April 5

According to the lunar transits, this should be a very lively day, with the nergies fairly well stimulated for putting over important propositions. Employers and those in places of authority should be inclined to lend substantial support or encouragement. But be alert to plots, schemes, intrigues and false reports, both in business and private associations. Some surprising change or journey may prove advantageous.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for some surprising developments which will stimulate their affairs and possibly be of great encouragement in new undertakings. They should be able to obtain the solid support and co-operation either of employers or those in places of influence and financial stability. But be wary as to underhand factors, plots, intrigues or peculiar angles, as deceit and misrepresentations may menace both business and personal associations.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, constructive and ambitious, and have much originality and ingenuity. This may insure a life of romance and adventure as well as practical achievement.

The Crippling Effect Of Rheumatism

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease caused by an accumulation of uric acid in the blood and is greatly aggravated by cold and dampness. It generally leaves in its train distorted joints, crooked limbs, crippled hands, and the intense pain and agony is almost unbearable.

Burdock Blood Bitters by invigorating the digestive organs, and eliminating the uric acid from the system will help in giving you relief from this torturing trouble.

MR. HENRY THORNTON, Beeton, Ont., writes:—"I have been a well digger for the past fifteen years, and five years ago I got rheumatism in my left hip and knee from the dampness in the wells.

I tried everything I could think of, but nothing seemed to do me any good until our druggist advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, and it was only a short time until the rheumatism was completely out of my system."

His Majesty's Mail Arriving In The Northland

'Flying Postman' Important In Canada's Isolated Posts

Often Supplies Only Contact Between Northerners And Civilization

By FRANK F. MOYLE
(Copyright, by Central Press Canadian)

FORT SMITH, N.W.T., April 4.—Perhaps nowhere in all the civilized world is the periodic visit of the mailman so appreciated as here in this north country.

Here, above all places, the mailman comes into his own, whether he is flying the latest thing in aeroplanes, whether he is purser on a Mackenzie river tug, or whether he is a remnant of the old brigade, the men who mushed the 150 miles from post to post before the aeroplanes came.

Despite the comparative regularity of service the mail is still an event in the north country, and the Christmas mail the event of the year. On the arrival of every mail friendly crowds gather on the shore and exchange good natured banter with the flying postman. They know the difficulties of northern flying, they know the pilot realizes how much they want that mail, and if they think back they will remember occasions when the clouds closed in, the day lengthened towards sunset and just as everybody knew there would be no mail that day some pilot came droning in straining his eyes against the first driving snow flakes with his skiis all but brushing the snow from off the spruce tops. They can remember too the aeroplanes that came in when they had every excuse to "sit down" some place and wait, and it took the best part of next day to melt the ice from off the wings.

Carries General Orders

Besides mail and parcel service, the flying mailman, like the country mail driver, has orders for everything from a piece of mining machinery to a new baby carriage.

When people shut away from the society of all but a few of their next door neighbors haven't heard from their next of kin for weeks or even months, every mail is important, whether it is the last mail before freeze-up or break-up, or the first mail after. All their contacts with the outside world come in those canvas covered mail sacks, all the luxuries so dear to a woman's heart, and the gadgets that the men simply can't do without.

Every mail day all the post asks the radio operator "Has the aeroplane left yet?" "Have they left McMurray?" "Is the weather good at Ray" . . . or Providence . . . or Norman . . . or wherever the intervening point may be.

At the first faint hum of the distant motor men, women and children step out to watch as the aeroplane banks into the wind, and settles swiftly on to the ice, lurching in over the runway as the skiis hit the frozen drifts.

Gets Wide Welcome

Before pilot and mechanic can jockey her up on to the poles that keep the skiis from freezing to the snow, every able-bodied person in the post has the ship surrounded. 'Midst a medley of greetings, out comes the mail to be piled on the local postman's waiting toboggan, and the overflow pulled, carried and dragged by a variety of willing urchins. Then unless the short Arctic day is alread well spent, long before the mail is sorted the aeroplane is away again, the staccato blast of her motor dying to a faint moaning, and only the long pencil of her exhaust hanging in the sky to point which way another mailman went.

18,000,000 Tourists See Canada In 1937

Ottawa, April 4 (CP)

FIGURES compiled by the Department of Mines and Resources, announced today, put the tourist traffic to Canada from the United States in 1937 at 18,248,285 persons, a gain of 1,850,413 visitors over 1936.

Germans Feed Austrians

Strange and varied have been the sights witnessed by the poor people of the Heiligenstaedter Hof in Vienna. Back in 1934, when Engelbert Dollfuss was staging his putsch against Socialists, government forces fired on that section, then known as Karl Marx Hof. Now that their country has been taken over by Hitler, the citizens find German soldiers their neighbors, and at times their helpers as the picture shows. Members of the German army field kitchen are serving food to citizens who line up much as they did in the desperate days of the last war.

WARSAW

LARGE AUDIENCE W.M.S. PROGRAM

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, April 4.—A good number turned out on Wednesday evening to see the pictures, "The Man Who Played God," in the United Church Sunday School room, in aid of the W.M.S.

Mrs. Allan Taylor, president of W.M.S., led the opening devotions. The Rev. J. W. Wilkinson led the prayer and explained the pictures as they appeared. They were very interesting and those who attended were well repaid. Lenore McIlvena and Jean Payne sang, "Following Jesus." At the end there was another hymn. Mrs. Taylor thanked those who had come, and thanks were sent Rev. Mr. Kelly for the loan of the lantern. Mr. Wilkinson closed with prayer.

United Church W.A.

The United Church Women's Association met on Thursday afternoon, March 31, with a fine attendance, Mrs. Arthur Payne presiding. Mr. Wilkinson told that the convenor of the parsonage committee had been speaking to him, Bethel and Zion W.A. had decided they would help put electric lights in the parsonage and asked if the Warsaw W.A. would. It was voted upon and passed that Warsaw do its share.

Mrs. O. B. McIlvena sang, "Nailed to the Cross," accompanied by Mrs. Stuart Clysdale. Mrs. Charlotte Cooper read, "What Is You Life?" Mrs. Latta read the scripture. Mrs. David Tucker led in prayer. Mrs. Latta read "The Door of the Crucifixion," while Mrs. Clysdale played softly on the piano. Mr. Wilkinson led in prayer. Afterwards refreshments were served by Mrs. Thomas Clements, Mrs. David Tucker and Miss Clara McCracken and the usual happy social half-hour was spent.

CAMPBELLFORD

COOKING SCHOOL IS WELL ATTENDED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 4. — Nearly three hundred ladies sat with pencil in hand at the cooking school conducted by that widely known radio personage Mrs. H. M. Aitken on Friday afternoon. The School was sponsored in Campbellford by the Ward III Women's Association of St. John's United Church and despite a rather chilly March like day in April the attendance almost surpassed the expectations. Although the greater portion of the time was devoted to giving recipes and demonstrating the various methods of cookery at the conclusion of this part of the program a number of prizes were awarded. Before the announcement of the prize winners little Anne Palliser presented Mrs. Aitken with a pretty bouquet of dagfodil and snapdragons. Mrs. Fred Palliser was the most recently married bride present and was awarded a silver plate. Mrs. W. H. Ashton was the oldest married woman and Mrs. Cassan the oldest lady present each receiving prizes. Mrs. F. N. Brown moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Aitkens for the interesting and profitable afternoon afforded those present.

Repairs Under Way To Lock Number 12

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 4.—At least twenty-five men will find employment during the next few weeks with work begun on repairing and refacing the walls and approaches to Locke No. 12 South of Campbellford. Men were engaged in unloading equipment on Thursday preparatory to the work of applying pressure concrete. The S. E. Corporation of Montreal is handling the job and Fred McCourt, Vice President of the company told the Examiner this morning the work would not take more than six weeks.

Huge Federal Plan Of National Expansion Coming

Rogers Aims to Increase Income With More Work; Confident Insurance Scheme Will Be Put Across

OTTAWA, April 5—(CP)—Pending the report of the Rowell commission on Dominion-Provincial relations the Dominion government proposes to reserve its decision of the proposal of the National Employment Commission that it assume the whole cost of relief for employable persons.

Labor Minister Rogers made this statement in the House of Commons last night as he moved adoption of a resolution authorizing introduction of the annual bill to provide assistance for the relief of unemployment and agricultural distress.

The minister reviewed the proposals in the final report of the commission in detail and gave an outline of the unemployment problem and government policy regarding it.

On the 100 per cent relief cost proposal he said the government did not consider it wise to enter into piece-meal negotiations with the provinces until the Rowell Commission's findings on the whole picture is available.

While he confessed he was not satisfied with progress on the unemployment problem the minister believed great improvements had been brought about. It remained the country's most serious problem but there was ground for confidence.

Work Still Lagging.

The increase in unemployment in the past few months was not sufficient a reversal of the general upward trend which had been in progress for the past few years.

To illustrate the improvement, Mr. Rogers cited figures for the four economic zones, each of which was subject to different influences over a two-year period.

The total number of persons of all classifications receiving aid in January, 1936, showed reductions in three zones and increases in only one. The reduction in the Maritime provinces was 83 per cent., in the central provinces 49.7 per cent and in British Columbia, 32 per cent.

SHOTS STOP FOUR IN STOLEN AUTO

FORT ERIE, Ont., April 5. — (CP).— Three Windsor residents and Jack Donovan, 30, of Glace Bay, N.S., were held by police here to-day on vagrancy charges after a swift chase along the highway to Niagara Falls during which police bullets shattered the rear window of the men's car.

The trio, Philip Riley, 17, Chris Bomart, 30, and James Melouct, 19. Police at Tecumseh, near Windsor, from which the car in which the quartet was riding was believed to have been stolen, were advised. Police Chief A. E. Griffin of Fort Erie, said the men would be taken to Tecumseh to face charges there.

The chase got underway when Constables Kent and Warry spotted the pair at the Buffalo-Fort Erie dock. Riley, driving the alleged stolen machine, refused to stop and raced away toward Niagara Falls. The constables fired several warning shots in the air and when the car still failed to halt, Kent and Warry aimed at the machine. The rear window of the car was shattered before Riley brought it to a halt.

BOYCOTT BRITISH

YOKOHAMA, Japan, April 5—(CP-Havas).—Handbills were distributed along the waterfront here to-day calling upon longshoremen to refuse to handle cargo from British ships.

If all dock workers refused "to land a single piece of merchandise from Britain, which is Japan's real foe behind China," the leaflets said, it would go a long way toward the establishment of peace in the Far East.

Shipments of bicycles from Germany and Japan to the United States showed a marked decrease in the last year.

HARVEY STAUNTON DIES IN HOSPITAL FELL FROM BOX CAR

Falling from the top of a box car on the Quaker Oats siding shortly after 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, Harvey J. Staunton, 53 of 854 George Street, trainman on the Canadian National Shunter, apparently escaped with a broken finger, injuries to his wrist, and a few bruises on his face. Taken to Nicholls Hospital, however he collapsed and died about 8 o'clock, with no apparent indications of other injuries serious enough to cause death having been given.

Mr. Staunton was walking along the top of a car as a shunting engine with a string of freight cars was slowly moving along the siding just south of the Quaker Oats power house. It is not known just what happened, whether he took a weak spell, or stumbled but at all events he toppled to the ground. Apparently he was not badly hurt with the exception of a fractured index finger on his right hand and an injured wrist and he walked to an ambulance in which he was taken to Nicholls Hospital for examination and treatment. There he died less than four hours afterward.

Mishap 10 Years Ago

Singularly enough the fatal accident occurred almost on the tenth anniversary of an almost similar mishap in which Mr. Staunton was involved and which occurred almost at the same spot. On April 7, 1928, he was riding on a box car that formed part of a string the shunter was placing on a siding in the Quaker Oats yard, a short distance south of where yesterday's accident happened, when the car was derailed and rolled down an embankment almost into the river. On that occasion Mr. Staunton escaped with severe cuts on the face and bruises on the head.

PLAY WRITER DIES

SHOREHAM-ON-SEA, England, April 5—(AP).—Frederick Melville, 62, last of three brothers who wrote and produced much of England's contemporary melodrama and pantomime, died to-day.

The other brothers, Walter and Andrew, died within the past year. They were sons of Andrew Melville, for many years manager of the Standard Theatre. Frederick and Walter managed the famous London Lyceum for three decades.

The family connection with the stage goes back to the 18th century.

Saved Brother's Life

Quick action on part of 18-year-old Connie Earl is credited with saving the life of her elder brother, Grier, when she diverted the attention of an infuriated bull which was goring him, long enough to allow the young man to drag himself to safety. The young man escaped with only a few bruises. "He (the bull) didn't seem to get his horns working properly," he commented to the Examiner on Monday. Grier Earl is shown at TOP examining the pitchfork which his sister Connie, also shown here, used to prod the bull and force it away from her brother. "It's good and sharp," said Grier, "and when she leans on a pitchfork it's something." Not in the least afraid of the bull, Grier posed beside it for the picture BELOW. But not seen in the picture are the chains which held the animal in its stall, nor the noose that forced its head into this position.

DISTRIBUTION UP

HALIFAX—(CP). — Quantity of coal distributed for consumption in Nova Scotia during the year ended November 30, 1937, was 2,293,827 tons of 2,240 pounds, according to a department of mines report before the Provincial Legislature. It was an increase of 246,268 tons over the previous year.

Ontario Government Is Asked To Push Road To Port Perry

Stop Signs Banished To End Black Eyes

York, April 5.

"I WALKED into a 'stop sign,' will soon disappear as an excuse for black eyes in the Jane street district of York Township.

A resolution sponsored in York Township Council by Deputy Reeve Charles Cashman today ordered the removal of the signs, and the posts holding them, from the curb to the boulevard on Jane street. According to the Deputy Reeve there was "more truth than fiction" in the excuse. "On dark nights, people are always walking into them," he said.

Regret Expressed That No Appropriation Available This Year

An appeal to the Ontario government to give priority in road construction in this district to the building of the Peterborough-Port Perry link in the Montreal to Sarnia highway was embodied in a resolution passed by the council last night on Alderman Dutton's motion.

Regret that no appropriation was made this year for construction work on this highway was expressed in the resolution which also urged its early completion.

"Peterboro is the largest city on this highway," Ald. Dutton said, "and unless we go after it with renewed vigor we are not going to get far. Mr. Elliott told us a survey of the route was to be made when the snow disappeared, but that detail should not take long. The route has been surveyed once or twice, and the Central Ontario Highway Association believes that only a new entrance into Peterborough needs to be resurveyed now. In the meantime there is no appropriation for construction work this year, and we feel that the government should provide an annual grant for this Peterborough-Port Perry link until it is completed. No city will benefit more than Peterboro from this highway, but I am afraid that most of our people have not fully realized its importance. It means that we have to go after this work harder than ever."

BELIEVE ROBBERY PLOTTED AHEAD IN TEXAS MURDER

EL PASO, Texas, April 5—(AP).—A hint the [illegible] murders of a California [illegible] and her daughter on [illegible] Sesquite Plains was the [illegible] of a robber planned here [illegible] day from Sheriff Chis Fox [illegible] searched for two men and two women suspects.

The victims, Mrs. Weston G. Frome, 46, and her 23-year-old daughter Nancy were found mutilated and clubbed to death near Van Horn, Texas, Sunday.

El Paso officers entered the investigation Fox said, "since there is some feeling [illegible] certain events leading up to the deaths of Mrs. Frome and Nancy originated in this city."

Fox did not elaborate, but other authorities [illegible] a theory that four persons were involved in the crime.

Search for the two men and two women suspects followed reports by E. M. Wells, division highway engineer at Pecos, that he had seen the Frome automobile near Balmorhea with four women in it. Later two soldiers said they saw two men in the machine.

The car was found abandoned near Balmorhea, 200 miles east of here, Thursday. Bodies of Mrs. Frome and Nancy were found about 50 miles west on the road to El Paso.

Descriptions Differ

Officers said neither Mrs. Frome nor Nancy answered the description of the women seen in the car by Wells and the soldiers.

District Attorney Roy D. Jackson of El Paso and Sheriff Albert Anderson of Van Horn held to the belief the murders were committed for money.

"I believe the slayers were disappointed in not finding more money, tried to find more, and when they found no more, tortured the women in an attempt to make them talk," Jackson said.

Roy Chitwood, district attorney's investigator at El Paso, said Dr. W. W. Waite's autopsy report showed conclusively the two women had not been ravished.

Their nearly nude bodies were found on the desert covered with a light blanket. Each woman had been shot, with a different calibre bullet, behind the ear.

Four Staunton Brothers Have Met With Tragic Deaths – Fifth Hurt In Car Crash

THE death of Harvey Staunton on Monday night following what had appeared to be a minor accident added another link to the chain of tragedies that have befallen his family through the years.

A fatal jinx would appear to hang over the heads of the male members of his family, for of the five brothers, four of them have met violent death and the one surviving has come close to death in a motor accident. One brother, Ernest Staunton, died in the fire at the Quaker Oats company here in 1916. His body was never recovered from the ruins after the million dollar blaze. Clarence Staunton, another brother, was instantly killed when he fell from the top of a smokestack while employed in the United States as a steeplejack. Another brother, Will Staunton, was killed when he plunged through a trap door in an elevator at Port Arthur. Wilfrid Staunton, only surviving brother, was seriously injured in a motor accident in California.

Col. Hunter Argues M.L.A. Means Nothing Abroad

"Almost Have to Explain Whole Canadian System"; Conant, Cross Opposed—Frost Fears Confusion

TORONTO, April 5—(CP)—Col. Fraser Hunter (Lib., Toronto-St. Patrick) won another round today in his fight for legislative dignity. The legal bills committee approved his bill that members should be called M.P. instead of M.P.P. or M.L.A.

The colonel, who saw extensive service with the British army, declared that elsewhere in the Empire members of legislatures comparable to Canada's provincial assemblies are designated as M.P.'s. His bill, given second reading in the House last week, was opposed today by Attorney-General Conant, Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, and L. M. Frost, (Con., Victoria).

Everyone all over the world knew what M.P. meant in a British country, Col. Hunter argued. But when a member of the Ontario Legislature went abroad and presented his car he almost had to explain the whole Canadian parliamentary system before anyone could understand the meaning of M.L.A.

Passage of the bill would create confusion, Mr. Frost feared. Also the public might regard it as ridiculous.

Before becoming law, the bill must ride safely through committee of the whole House, receive third reading and royal assent.

HAMILTON TO SEEK SOURCE OF SUPPLY FOR DRUG ADDICTS

HAMILTON, April 5 (CP)—Indications that a check-up will be made here on the source of supply of drugs to addicts were seen in magistrate's court today when David Watson, [illegible]g and William McKay, Vancouver, appeared for sentence on vagrancy charges. Before the vagrancy counts came up for disposition, the two men were arraigned on attempted suicide charges to which they pleaded not guilty. They were acquitted on these counts and were remanded until Thursday for sentence on the vagrancy charges.

Evidence with respect to drugs came out during their trial on the attempted suicide charges. Crown witnesses said the two had slashed their wrists in the cells of the police station last Tuesday after they had been remanded for sentence on vagrancy charges. The wounds were caused by an instrument resembling a safety razor blade, medical witnesses said.

In their defence accused declared they had no intention of taking their lives but had gashed their wrists in an effort to get a "shot" from a physician. Both claimed they had asked for a doctor from the time they had been placed in the cells the night before.

"When a man is sick from drugs, he doesn't know what he is doing," said Watson.

13TH BABY ARRIVES IN DIONNE FAMILY MAKING 4TH SON

CALLANDER, Ont., April 5 (C. P.). — The quintuplets have a new baby brother. A boy arrived last night at the lonely Dionne farmhouse, the 12th living child of Oliva and Elzire Dionne.

Mrs. Dionne, 29-year-old farm girl who became mother of the most famous babies in the world on May 28, 1934, gave birth to a 7½-pound son, the fourth brother of the quints and the 13th child the Dionnes have had. One child died in infancy.

The newest Dionne was born in the same humble home that welcomed the five little sisters nearly four years ago. The house, 2½ miles from Callandar, and the Dafoe Hospital, where the quintuplets live across the road, have become the Mecca of tourists from all over the continent during the summer months. In the winter, off-season for tourists, the Dionne homestead is little more than a snow-covered spot in Northern Ontario's vastness.

The coming of the youngster was surrounded with even more secrecy than the arrival of Oliva Dionne, Jr., born July 9, 1936. Oliva's arrival was predicted by gossip columnists long before.

But nothing heralded the birth of the new youngster. He came into the world under a blanket of Dionne reticence that enveloped the whole North Bay district and the Dionne homestead neighborhood.

Mrs. Dionne, almost a recluse since tourists began flocking to see her daughters three years and more ago, was seen even less outside her five-room residence during the past few months.

A Difficult Birth.

Dr. A. E. I. Joyal of North Bay, attended Mrs. Dionne, assisted by Miss Clare Tremblay and Miss Jacqueline Noel, both former nurses to the quintuplets.

Dr. Joyal, who spent several hours at the Dionne home, said: "This was a difficult birth. It was a breach birth." When he returned to his North Bay office he reported Mrs. Dionne and the baby getting along nicely.

The youngster's arrival showed this lineup of the Dionne children, whose parents were married Sept. 15, 1925 when Mrs. Dionne, then Elzire Legros, was only 17.

Ernest, 12; Rose, 11; Tharese, 9; Pauline, 7; Daniel., 6; Oliva, Jr., 1½, and the quints, Yvonne, Emilie, Marie, Annette and Cecile, who will be four next month.

Rebel Armies Cut Catalonia From Loyalist Spain

Franco's Columns Now Move On Barcelona And Valencia After Reaching Coast

HENDAYE, France, April 5 (AP) —Spanish Insurgent armies, driving to win the civil war this spring, cut Catalonia from the rest of government Spain to accomplish their first great objective and swept on today toward Barcelona, their enemy's provisional capital. A secondary advance was moving toward Valencia.

Communications between these two major coastal cities remaining to the government were severed yesterday when Insurgents reached Tortosa, looking down upon the Mediterranean. Machine guns and field artillery raked the road from Tortosa, rendering useless the last highway link between Catalonia and the rest of government Spain, which includes Madrid and Valencia. General Franco's troops were prepared to occupy Tortosa itself.

An insurgent communique announced their troops had pushed six miles to the north, east and south of captured Lerida on the central sector of the Catalan front. Government troops were said to be in full retreat, presumably to take a stand in fortifications stretching between Balaguer and Borjoas Blancas, approximately in the centre of Catalonia.

Deed To Aid Friend Costs Citizen $41

Cooksville, April 5.

TO act the Good Samaritan is apparently going to cost something to Rodger Barr Jr., of Burnhamthorpe, who voluntarily undertook to gravel and improve a Toronto Township road in order that a doctor could reach a sick neighbor. When his claim for $41 was submitted to Council today, Reeve E. D. Maguire pointed out that the municipality was not obliged to keep the road open.

"Then," retorted Barr, "I suppose men will have to die for the lack of medical attention."

$3 HOUSEHOLD RADIO LICENSE FIRST INTENDED

2,141 Protests Received Since Jump, Says Murray

OTTAWA, April 5 (C.P.).—Original recommendation of Major Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, was for a $3 household radio licence fee instead of the $2.50 individual set fee which became effective on April 1.

This was revealed to-day in Major Murray's evidence before the House Committee on Radio. He read extracts from private and confidential letters he had written Transport Minister Howe recommending measures for financing the Corporation's development program.

It was also suggested that the Corporation be given the $1,000,000 collected in licence fees before creation of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission in 1932.

Later the recommendation was altered to increase the fees from $2 a year to $2.50, and that the Government lend the Corporation $500,000 more to enable it to finance expansion plans for 1938-39 which include establishment of new 50-kilowatt stations in the Maritime Provinces and Western Canada.

Since increase in the fees was announced the Corporation has received 2,141 letters from protesting listeners and 203 letters supporting the increase, Major Murray said. That referred only to letters received by the Corporation and not those addressed to the Government.

200 Names on One Protest.

"I received one telegram of protest from British Columbia with 200 names signed to it," observed J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South).

The letters for and against the increase were divided among the provinces as follows:

Alberta, 176 for and 43 against; British Columbia, none for and 27 against; Manitoba, two and five; New Brunswick, two and three; Nova Scotia, two and nine; Ontario, 12 and 41; Quebec, five and five; Saskatchewan, four and eight; and Prince Edward Island, no letters.

To Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East) Major Murray said the Board of Governors looked upon the $1,000,000 paid for licence fees from 1922 to 1932, before nationalization of broadcasting, remained a trust and property of Canadian listeners. It felt that money should be made available for capital costs of expansion.

The witness said even if that money were made available it would not solve the entire financial problem and an increase in licence fees would have been necessary in any event.

TWO WHITBY MEN KILLED IN SMASH

WHITBY, Ont., April 5 (CP).—An inquest will be held into the death of two Whitby residents last night when the car they were riding in crashed into the rear of a transport trailer parked on the highway running through Whitby, 30 miles east of Toronto.

Ernest Sleightholm, 29, and Jack Hutchison, 26, their heads crushed by the terrific impact, were found dead in the front seat of their car by Constable John Thomas.

The Hutchison car was believed to have been following another car and to have hit the left rear corner of the trailer when it turned out to pass the machine in front. Hutchison apparently did not see the parked truck in time to apply the brakes.

Sleightholm was one of the outstanding players on Whitby's intermediate Ontario Hockey Association team and had been prominent in the town's sporting circles for many years. Hutchison, eldest son of County School Inspector R. A. Hutchison, was a graduate of University of Toronto.

Labor Election Move Soundly Defeated

Conservatives Stand Behind Chamberlain, 359 to 152, As Premier Fights Any Vote With Arms Drive On

LONDON, April 5,—(CP)—The government's huge majority in parliament brought the 13th foreign policy debate in the House of Commons in nine weeks to a close last night by overwhelmingly defeating a Labor demand that the government go to the country for approval of its decisions to stay clear of the Spanish civil war and to seek an agreement with Fascist Italy.

The vote was 359-152 after the House provided these highlights:

Dominions Secretary Malcolm MacDonald declared he believed "the great majority of our fellow citizens in the Dominions agree with the policy being pursued by this government."

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House: "This is no time to disturb the country by a general election when it is in the throes of its armaments program."

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor frontbencher and former Mines Secretary, slapped the face of Commander Robert Tatton Bower, Conservative, a former Navy heavyweight boxer because Mr. Shinwell resented a remark. The incident was closed when both apologized.

For eight hours the House wrangled over Europe—particularly the Spanish civil war. Labor insisted that the government had forsaken its 1936 election pledges and was "drifting toward war."

"Liberty in Europe is being murdered," declared Arthur Greenwood who opened for Labor. "The Prime Minister quite suitably is the undertaker, waiting to bury the corpse.

4 MEN KILLED AS BLAST RIPS NEW ELEVATOR

Flames Sear 19 Others In New Orleans Tower

NEW ORLEANS, April 5 (AP).—A thunderous blast which sent a white hot sheet of flame roaring through a work tower of the New Orleans public grain elevator yesterday brought death to four men and serious injury to 19 others.

In all 60 men were trapped by the explosion and fire which followed.

The dead:

Andrew Reich, 45-year-old conveyor belt operator.

Arthur E. DeFraites, 50, Federal grain inspector.

George Herrie, 60, grain spout operator.

Physicians held little hope for Adolph Vorbusch, who was hurled 50 feet through an open window to the top of a grain bin.

Cause of the explosion had not been officially determined. Assistant Elevator Superintendent Y. W. Cahall said it undoubtedly was due to spontaneous combustion.

2 TORONTO HOMES ARE DYNAMITED

TORONTO, April 5 (C.P.). — Believed by police to be the work of a gang of terrorists, two homes in widely-separated parts of the city were damaged early to-day by dynamite explosions. No one was injured.

The first explosion blasted the verandah and shattered windows at the home of A. R. Quirk, Toronto barrister, on 40 Burnside Drive, in Toronto's west-central section. An hour later a dynamite blast was discharged between two houses on Caledonia Road, in York Township, several miles away.

Police found bits of a cigar box and part of a fuse outside the Quirk home. They said several sticks of dynamite evidently were placed in the box and had been left on the concrete railing of the verandah. A cardboard box was supposed to have contained the dynamite used in the blast between 352 and 354 Caledonia Road.

Mario Faveri, his wife and five children, 354 Caledonia Road, were awakened by the blast which shook the house. Occupying the lower part of the other house was Alex. Attebelli, while Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tait and their one child were in the upstairs section.

Family Have No Clues.

The blast at the Quirk home awakened the lawyer, his wife, and their three children, Glenna 15 Keith 12, and Richard 6. The family was asleep on the second floor of their two-storey home.

Quirk said afterwards he thought it "was the furnace," which had been causing him trouble. He told police he knew of no reason "for anyone trying to blow up my home." Other members of the family were able to shed no light on the attack.

The first explosion was heard at the London and Markham Streets Police Station, 1¼ miles distant. Debris of the verandah and of the concrete railing was strewn about neighboring lawns.

Police could not say if there was any connection between the bombings here and two recent similar attacks in Hamilton, Ont. In one Hamilton bombing the front verandah of the home of Rocco Perri, self-styled "King of the Bootleggers," was blown to bits. Perri was out at the time.

11TH VICTIM DIES IN SERUM CASE

ORLANDO, Fla., April 5 (AP)—Mrs. T. L. Bates, of Groveland, Fla., who becam gravely ill last Friday after receiving injections of an anti-cancer serum, died at a hospital here last night.

Her death brought to 11 the number of persons who have died since last Tuesday from symptoms doctors said resembled tetanus. All had been administered the serum from a shipment, the coroner said physicians informed him, that was received here by Dr. T. A. Neal from a Philadelphia, Pa., laboratory.

Mrs. Bates complained of symptoms similar to those of other patients. She was given anti-tetanus treatment.

Dr. Horace A. Day, president of the Orange County Medical Society, said laboratory experiments with two bottles of the serum obtained from Dr. Neal showed presence of tetanus toxin.

Mrs. Bates had obtained some of the serum from Dr. Neal and had it injected by a Groveland physician last Tuesday and Wednesday, Dr. Day said.

Dr. J. N. Patterson of Jacksonville, director of the state board of health laboratory, planned to perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Bates.

Deaths so far have included nine women and two men.

TEXTILES REFUSE FRESH CONTRACT

MONTREAL, April 5 (CP)—Dominion Textile Company, Limited, has refused to renew its contract with the National Catholic Federation of Textile Workers, it was announced yesterday. The agreement was reached after a month-long walkout of 10,000 textile workers in the province last August.

The decision brought protest from the union which has telegraphed Premier Duplessis at Quebec. J. A. Chapentier, president of the National Catholic Syndicates, and Albert Cote, head of the federation, will seek federal intervention in an interview today at Ottawa with Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe.

Company officers said they planned to re-institute the system of work councils in each of the different mills which was in effect at several shops prior to signing of the agreement with the federation Dec. 20 last. Renewal of the contract, they said, was unacceptable because of the working conditions laid down.

The federation claims re-establishmen of work councils is an attempt to destroy the union in the company's shops. Spokesmen described work councils as "shop unions," and in their telegram to Premier Duplessis feared "destruction of the Catholic unions in the textile industry."

Company spokesmen said they were not considering an attempt to sign any definite agreement which might be considered as a substitution for a collective labor contract.

"I was getting mine from medical men," replied McKay.

"Who are they?" inquired the Crown.

"I refuse to answer that question," said McKay.

Mr. Ballard suggested that McKay be committed for contempt of court until he answered the question, eventually, McKay gave the names of two doctors from whom, he said, he had been taking a "reduction cure." He was in the habit of taking from four to six grains of heroin a day at a cost of $3, he said.

Magistrate H. A. Birbidge commented that Canada should have legislation similar to the prevention of crime act which is in force in England whereby offenders might be committed for lengthy terms following their fourth offence.

HOUSE KILLS IDEA ONTARIO PAY HALF EDUCATION COSTS

TORONTO, April 5—(CP)—The Ontario legislature today considers the most contentious piece of legislation of the present session, a bill to validate new Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission contracts with three Quebec power companies. Lively debate was expected.

George Henry, former premier and Conservative member for York East, will open debate on the measure, sponsored by W. L. Houck (Lib.-Niagara Falls), vice-chairman of the commission. Leopold Macaulay, Conservative House leader, has opposed passage of the bill until a legislative committee of inquiry, to open in May, inquires into the circumstances surrounding negotiation of the agreements.

The bill, if passed, will validate agreements put into force last December which took the place of contracts drawn up prior to 1934 and voided by the 19th legislature in 1935. A lower purchase price than contracted for under the old agreements is provided for under the new contracts. Certain controversial clauses also were removed.

Much To Do Yet.

Protracted debate on the measure may postpone prorogation, scheduled for Friday. A division appeared probable. Considerable minor legislation remains to be disposed of and estimates for the new fiscal year which opened April 1 also have to be approved.

[illegible] division, the House yesterday defeated a motion by Mr. Henry that the government assume 50 per cent of the costs of secondary education. Most of the sitting was devoted to the Conservative motion, which Premier Hepburn declared was introduced for no other purpose than to embarrass the government."

HOUSE LEADER IS PRAISED BY ROWE

TORONTO, April 5.—Members of the Conservative Opposition and of the Legislature Press Gallery last night were the guests of Hon. Earl Rowe, leader of the Conservative Party in Ontario, and Mrs. Rowe, at a dinner held at the Albany Club.

Mr. Rowe, in a brief address of welcome, paid special tribute to the zeal and loyalty shown by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Conservative House leader, and Hon. George S. Henry, former leader, since the time he (Mr. Rowe) was appointed to the leadership, and particularly during the current session.

"No man could be more loyal to the fundamental principles of the Conservative Party than Mr. Henry," said Mr. Rowe.

The leader was critical in the only direct political reference he made, of the laissez faire attitude of the King Government in Imperial relations. The Conservative Party, he said, was the only party that maintained close Imperial relationship, that stood for the development of Canada's resources for the people, and, when others disagreed with it, refrained from calling them all "hypocrites."

Among other speakers were: Colonel T. L. Kidd, Conservative Whip; Mr. Macaulay, Mr. Henry, W. D. Black, Colonel T. L. Kennedy, Frank Spence, G. C. Elgie and George Doucett.

Two were blamed on lightning, 42 were incendiary. The remainder were attributed to burning buildings, sawmills, railways and unknown causes.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

Keen demand for May wheat future and top grade cash wheat punctuated a quiet grain exchange session to-day and gave leadership to higher prices elsewhere. Mid-session losses were retrieved and prices closed 2 higher to ¼ cent lower, May $1.21⅝, July $1.08⅞ and October 87⅛ to ¼ cents.

The May future dropped ¾ earlier and the October to a seasonal low. Scattered liquidation was in line with Liverpool which at one time slumped to levels comparable only with those of May and June, 1936.

However, the tight Canadian old-crop wheat situation, especially for Grades Nos. 1 and 2, prompted buyers to meet higher-price demands. These grades advanced with the May future and went one cent better—an improvement in spreads to 26½ and 15½ cents, respectively.

Moths Threaten Famed Pea Soup

MONTREAL, April 4—(CP). — Quebec's pea soup—it "soupe aux pois" on the menu—must be protected, so Agriculture Minister Bona Dussault has gone to bat to rid the province of the pea moth.

The tourist's trip to Quebec isn't complete without thick French pea soup, and each year the pea crop has become more important. Lately, though, the pea moth has been causing damage in the principal growing districts, with the result that Mr. Dussault has issued an edict against the insect, called "laspeyresia nigricana stph" by the entomologists.

Pea growers must burn all traces of the current years crop before September 1, and notify the agriculture minister if they find trace of the pea moth.

Necessity Of An Addition To Nicholls Hospital Is Explained To Auxiliary

Dr. J. M. McCulloch declares Three And Five Patients Often Refused Daily

That the accommodation at Nicholls Hospital falls far short of its requirements was very clearly shown by Dr. J. M. McCulloch of the medical staff and member of the Hospital Board, to a large general meeting of the Hospital Women's Auxiliary in George Street United Church Monday afternoon.

"Sickness is a seasonal affair, and there must be beds enough to take care of patients at the peak load of illness," he said. On some days from three to five patients have to be refused admission at Nicholls during the busy season. In a large modern hospital, if seventy-five per cent. of the beds are occupied it is considered as full, and thus in a smaller hospital the percentage should obviously be lower, he said.

"The original Nicholls Hospital 40 or 50 years ago was really a glorified boarding house with operating theatres attached," Dr. McCulloch stated. Now, housed in inadequate space are the added features of a modern hospital, such as separate maternity and children's wards, laboratory, X-ray, sterilizing, pathological and metabolism departments and others. In many cases machines have to be housed in some corner and carried to the patient when needed. There should be a proper room to which the patient could be taken instead.

The hospital is the responsibility of the Protestant taxpayers who need to be convinced of how great is the necessity for a much larger building.

Dr. McCulloch mentioned that his personal opinion is that the present site is excellent. There is the value of the present south wing, and also the lovely view is in its favor. Speaking of the splendid training school for nurses, the doctor suggested the ladies help to make the nurses' stay more enjoyable by bringing them more in touch with the social and home life of the city. (Evidence that this has already been taken up by the Auxiliary was shown in a later report by Mrs. I. T. Lillico, of a large party for the first year nurses at the home of Mrs. Graham, when members of the Auxiliary Board were hostesses. A party for second year nurses is planned for the near future).

Doing Valuable Work.

Dr. McCulloch paid tribute to the work being done by the Hospital Women's Auxiliary, "the thoroughness of the way it is carried on, through the systematic methods of your excellent president, and of no small importance is the interested attitude of the public created by the Auxiliary," he said.

E. F. Mason, chairman of the Nicholls Hospital Trust, also addressed the meeting and showed plans for the new hospital, saying it was hoped to have them more complete shortly. Mr. Mason praised the work of the Auxiliary, mentioning its unusually large organization and splendid results.

Mrs. S. J. Graham, the president, presided throughout the meeting. Routine reports were heard from the secretary, Mrs. J. J. Turner, and the treasurer, Mrs. W. Tinker. Mrs. F. M. Dela Fosse, for the Life Membership Committee, reported 30 paid-up members. A letter was read by Miss E. Morrow from Miss E. Walsh, recently appointed superintendent at the Renfrew Hospital, thanking for a gift of flowers found on arrival. Mrs. R. Ross, as convenor, gave an excellent report of sewing done by the ladies for the hospital, and Mrs. J. Comstock reported visits to the patients with gifts. A Good Samaritan cupboard, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. W. Belleghem, is now installed at the hospital, it was reported by Mrs. J. G. Wharry for that committee. Two layettes have been handed out since the last meeting, and a generous donation of clothes for the cupboard received from Mrs. F. M. Seymour.

Hospital Day.

Mention was made by the president of Hospital Day, May 12 (Florence Nightingale's birthday), when the hospital will be open to the public at certain hours, and tea will be served. Also a large "Penny Sale" is to be held by the Auxiliary about the end of May, of which details will be announced later.

Out-of-town members of Auxiliary present included four ladies from Keene, where there are twenty-eight members, two from Bridgenorth and three visitors from Millbrook.

Heads Stores

Announcement was made today of the appointment of J. William Horsey as executive vice-president in charge of operations of Dominion Stores Limited. Mr. Horsey is a Canadian, born of Canadian parents in Buffalo, New York, where his first experience in the food industry was in his father's grocery store. His career in the industry since that time has been one of steady advancement. In taking over his new post he is relinquishing the important position of president of Standard Brands Limited, distributors in Canada of Fleischmann, E. W. Gillett, Chase & Sanborn, and Royal Baking Powder products.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL SETS 51 MILL RATE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 5.—A fifty-one mill take rate for the year was decided on at the meeting of the Council on Monday, after a 6-2 vote carried the motion of Reeve Charles Calver, despite much opposition voiced by Deputy Reeve Locke and Councillor Macmillan. Mayor F. P. Long was strongly in favor of the motion to reduce this year's levy and told members of the Council it was about time something was done to relieve the tax-payers of this municipality.

"If we're unable to pass along the benefits of such agreements (the contract signed by the Water and Light Commission with the Hydro to whom they will supply power for the next three years to give an annual income of $10,000) to the ratepayers, there is little use of our making them. There's another tax sale this year, and if we keep a 53-mill levy much longer half the property in the corporation will soon be owned by the town."

The Mayor's effort to set a 50-mill rate, which would be brought down another mill by the government subsidy found little favor with the balance of council, while the proposition of Councillor Macmillan to adopt what he termed a "pay as you go" policy, was only supported by the deputy reeve. The vote was polled and the members supporting Reeve Calver's motion which will give a 50-mill rate when the government subsidy is deducted were the mayor and Councillors Battisby, Donald and Dorie. Against the motion were Deputy-reeve Locke and Councillor Macmillan.

On motion of Deputy-reeve Locke and Councill Burgiss, the Salvation Army were granted permisison to hold a tag day on May 28.

Council granted Gerald Hay permission to obtain a license to operate the dance hall until 11.30 each evening during the summer ,and a motion by Councillor Macmillan to have both the dance hall and Parish Hall on Rear street come under the same by-law found no seconder.

Tax Collections

The report of the tax collector, J. C. Birmingham revealed that he had collected $523.60 on 1938 taxes in March, and $717.12 on the 1937 roll during the same month. The total arrears collected during the month were $604.66. Relief Officer J. Lewis Hay stated that although the same number of citizens were receiving relief as last year, the number had remained constant since the first of the year and had brought the costs about $450 above the same three months last year.

The question of a parking lot on the west side of the town was again discussed, and Councillor Dorie claimed the majority of residents on the west side were not in favor of proposed lot, despite the fact that merchants were for it one hundred per cent.

A motion was passed proposing that the council go in a body to view the site back of the armouries.

Councillor J. R. Battisby was appointed to act as valuator at the proposed tax sale which is being held on April 7. It was decided to call a special meeting to discuss the matter of making an agreement with the Ontario Government re taking over that part of Highway No. 30 which enters the town on the west side on which it known as Hastings Road and Sebastopol street. Council felt that a fence should be placed along the steep embankment which skirts the road at that part of the town, and thought an agreement could be reached with the Department of Highways to do this work.

Arthur Messenger was appointed caretaker of the Cenotaph at a salary of $75, and A. H. McKeel addressed the Council requesting that the flags at the Cenotaph be placed at half mast any time a veteran of the World War died in the town or township. He stated the flags should be raised by the caretaker on all special occasions. Regarding the book truck which he had recently made and which will be presented to Christie Street Hospital, Mr. McKeel invited all the members of the council to form a part of the delegation which will take part in the presentation, and suggested that the council should contribute a number of books to be forwarded to the hospital at the same time. Councillor Macmillan told the council that something should be done to prevent people from operating junk yards in the residential parts of the town, and pointed out there were already two of these on Rear street and that a new one had just been opened on Queen street. The matter was left in the hands of the Legal committee to investigate and bring in a by-law at the next meeting.

PERMISSION GIVEN FOR GAS STATION BY CITY COUNCIL

Permission to build a gasoline service station and garage on the east side of George Street, between Lansdowne and Prince Streets, was given by the Council last night to N. Williamson, and at the same time it was decided to ask the Board of Health to consider the advisability of requiring Dinty's Inn to provide sanitary conveniences for the people who frequent the south end hot dog stand during the summer months.

The Council devoted considerable time to this question, especially in its aspect of the complaints made by Harry Sowden, who told the Council he had been enduring for years a nuisance caused by many of the people driving up to Dinty's Inn, especially in the late hours of night. His annoyance would be aggravated, he wrote, if his house was to be placed between a hot dog stand and a service station garage.

Fatal To Settle Dispute.

Alderman Bradburn reported for the special committee that tried to adjust the dispute between Mr. Williamson and Mr. Sowden that mediation had failed, and said the committee agreed Mr. Sowden had a just cause for grievance. It transpired in the rather long discussion Monday night that indecencies on the lot between the Sowden house and Dinty's Inn, and the noisy shouting, banging of cars and loud laughter comprised an old complaint which the Council declared should receive attention.

Alderman Juby's motion granting permission to build the garage was seconded by Alderman Cotton and supported by Aldermen Dutton, McCannan and Glover. It seemed that the Council was about to issue an immediate threat to cancel the Dinty's Inn license if accommodation was not provided for the people who go there during the spring to autumn season. The objection was not raised against the management of the hot dog stand but against the actions of many persons who congregate or call there.

If one "eating house" stand was required to install sanitary conveniences, what about all the others in the city? It was remarked that they cut in on the business of the restaurant interests of the city, who are compelled to furnish adequate accommodation for the public. Finally the discussion turned to the Board of Health as an agency for dealing with the problem Harry Sowden had raised, and it was remarked that if sanitary conveniences were required of all the so-called-eating houses at the hot dog stands and the uptown lunch counters few of them would survive.

Dry, Hacking Coughs A Menace To Health

That dry, hacking cough that sticks to you in spite of everything you have done to relieve it is a source of danger, and the longer the cough sticks the more menace it is to your health.

Don't neglect the hacking cough. Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helps to stimulate, soothe and heal the bronchial tubes, allay irritation, subdue inflammation, loosen the phlegm and mucous, and aid nature to dislodge the morbid accumulations.

Mr. Alexander A. Sohm, 84-1st Ave., North Bay, Ont., writes:—"I had a very severe head cold accompanied by a dry, hacking cough. I tried various medicines to get rid of it, but they were useless until a friend told me to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. After using one bottle the cold was considerably relieved, and the dry, hacking cough had entirely disappeared."

Not A Peace Sign

When nations come to agreements there is apparently no guarantee that such agreements mean anything. Under the Treaty of London there was a clause which said that the signatory powers would not build battleships larger than 35,000-tons, and there was an annex to the clause which said nations could do so if others powers started to increase beyond the 35,000-ton limit.

Japan will furnish no indication of what she intends to do, so London and Washington have exchanged notes to the effect that they are no longer bound by the limit of treaty. It looks as though the limit might be increased to 40,000 or 45,000-tons. Washington is reported to be considering getting plans ready for a super-dreadnaught which will cost $100,000,000. It will be of no immediate use because such a vessel would take almost five years to complete.

There is one thing worth noting in this mad development, and that is that United States expresses no alarm because Britain may start building larger warships, and London is not in the least disturbed because tonnage may be heavily increased in the future warships of United States. The London Times suggests that because United States may go into the field of larger craft is no reason why Britain should do the same thing, adding: "To public opinion in England the possibility of war with America ceased long ago to be even conceivable.."

But allowing for all that, there is the stubborn fact that the invasion of the field of armament beyond the 35,000-ton limit is plain evidence that suspicion and fear between nations is going to live for a long time to come. These super giants take years to be brought to completion, so there can be no fixed hope that in the intervening years nations are likely to come to their senses and see the folly of the thing which they are doing in the mad race for armaments.

Sister To The Rescue

There is something to be said for Connie Earl, 18 years old, who lives on the 14th concession of Manvers township. A bull had attacked her elder brother Grier; had tossed him and was proceeding to gore and trample him when the girl used a pitchfork to divert the animal's attention. It seems that a good stiff jab in the neck was sufficient to do that, and that gave the brother time to escape.

Possibly it had been necessary for the young man to enter the bull's enclosure a good many times when attending to the stock. The animal may have had a good reputation; may never have shown any inclination before to make an attack. But that makes no difference. The makings of that attack have always been in that bull, and in every other bull, and the attack generally comes at the most unexpected time and for no known reason. There is tremendous hitting power in the head and neck of a bull even without horns, and the manner in which a bull will often trample his victim adds to the seriousness of his method of attack. A girl who knew enough to rush in there with a pitchfork and use it effectively to take the bull's attention off his victim did well indeed. We would say she is a sister worth having.

Wherein We Agree

In the Examiner of March 17 there was a phrase used in the news columns of the paper in connection with the publication of a photograph: "Irish as Paddy's Pig." The claim has been made that such a phrase should not have been used, and that it was offensive to people of Irish descent. The Examiner believes the objection is well taken, and agrees that the phrase is one which should not have been admitted to our columns. For that reason we have no hestitation in frankly apologizing for the incident.

The Examiner also thanks those who have drawn our attention to the phrase. By so doing they have been assisting in turning out the kind of paper they desire to read. A newspaper is at all times willing to receive such suggestions from its readers, more so when such suggestions are offered in sincerity and where they are based on some point where they believe their paper has erred.

The Muskrats Fight

Those who look upon the muskrat as a quiet animal who attends to its own business might form a different conclusion if they saw some of the marks on the pelts which are now being taken. A trapper was showing the Examiner a string of eighteen or so, and several of them were punctured and had not healed on the inside.

These marks were in some cases about the size of a quarter, and the explanation is that rats had been fighting among themselves, as the experienced man knows how to set his traps so there will be no injury to the fur.

The muskrat is provided with a fine set of teeth for securing what it needs to eat, and these same teeth are capable of inflicting a serious wound when they are used for biting. The condition of the injured pelts shows that when the bite of the rat was well placed on the hide of another rat it went right through the skin and took the piece out. Apparently these "little beavers" as they are sometimes called have considerable trouble in their own world, evidence of which comes to the surface when their hides are being prepared for the market.

May Serve A Purpose

If the "hypocrites" blast of Premier Hepburn, directed toward certain of the ministers of the gospel of Ontario did nothing else it provided the gentlemen with something about which to preach on the following Sunday. We have noticed a number of reports of sermons. Some of the pulpiteers were content to rebuke the Premier for his unkind remarks and let it go at that. Others took the saying of the Premier to their studies and cut it into pieces to see if there were truth in it. Some of them found there was and openly declared that if games of chance were used for the financing of the Lord's work then the term hypocrites was quite right when the ministers of such churches took it upon themselves to protest against sweepstakes.

So in the end the ill-chosen remark may serve its purpose. The bingo game came in for a rattling; the draw for the fancy quilt was smitten hip and thigh, and anything which smacked and savored of taking a chance was well lambasted. In the pulpits which took that attitude there was a regular field day which resembled somewhat the spring housecleaning.

Forced To Decline

There are a number of firms which supply features for newspapers, such as comic strips, stories and special articles. Today there came in the office mail an invitation to attend a party given by the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate. In fairly big letters which we can read without specs we find it is to be a Cocktail Party and the duration of the affair is from four to seven on the 27th of the present month. The people who contribute to the syndicate number something like 75. We find too the event is to be held on the ninth floor of the News building in New York city, and close scrutiny finds in one corner the words: "P.S. Tea will be served too!"

After having had opportunity to read of what happens to some of the folk who attend cocktail parties, we are left in sort of a fog as to whether to hasten off to New York for this event. We have always understood that in a general way one should always accept proferred hospitality. If one does not do so then there is the possibility that hospitality will cease to be extended and the individual will be branded as an old stick who does not know a good time when it is shoved at him.

But these people do not say anything about getting to New York and back home again. Going that far is different from climbing over the fence and dropping into a neighbor's kitchen. And there is more to consider. If one were to go to such a place he might feel he had to demonstrate that he knew what a cocktail party was like; he might feel he had to show those 75 people in New York and all their friends just how a real old cock tailer should act. And as there are three hours during which the demonstration would have to be made the effects might become disastrous. Nor are we much taken with being nine floors up when all this is going on. After testing cocktails of unknown potency for three hours we fear to think one might wish to go to a window and stick the head out for a little fresh air and for one who is accustomed day after day doing his work but one floor removed from the good old ground that might not be a good plan. Also the 27th of the month is near the end, and in only a day or so the landlord will be looking around to see if any of the arrears can be negotiated. So our present inclination is that we will not be present.

A Farmer And His Costs

Would it profit a farmer to make use of a cost-finding system? We notice where that question was debated at a young people's meeting in a neighboring county. There was not much reported regarding the arguments advanced, but it was stated the debate resulted in a draw and no decision was given. That leaves it an open question as far as the young people of that district are concerned.

Cost finding was much advocated some years ago. We believe Prof. Archie Leich, then on the staff of the O.A.C. in Guelph, started it, and he was an able exponent of the idea. There were a good many farmers who tried it; how many continued we do not know. We recall hearing the experience of one Wellington county farmer who had decided to give it a fair trial. His own experience is related:

"Among other places I considered it well to apply the plan was on the production of wheat. I generally had 20 acres in fall wheat. So I put down all the items of cost which went into that field. I also charged those 20 acres with their share of the taxes on the property and there was included 5 per cent. on the value of the land because I considered I was entitled to a 5 per cent. return as I was paying that rate on the unpaid balance of a mortgage. I was careful to put down the time spent on the land at just about what it was costing me as I was not trying to run up the figures. I wanted accurate information. I was using a little fertilizer then as well as regular barn-yard stuff. I included time for fertilizing, plowing, rolling, drilling and cutting; the cost of twine, etc.; the charge of threshing was put in just as near as I could make it. That year I had to get repairs for the binder and I put in just what I estimated should be charged against a single year in the lifetime of the machine. When I had my wheat in the bin I was then able to tell what it had cost per bushel. My cost price for wheat that year had been 87 cents per bushel. I thought I should get at least 95 cents for what it had cost me 87 cents to produce, because there is a far greater mark-up on goods that I have to buy.

"Wheat was a cash crop with me, so I decided to sell when I needed the money. I took it to the city and they offered me 84 cents. I had all my figures in my pocket and I knew what I should be getting, but what was the result? I could have taken the 84 cents or turned back and gone home with my load. It was then I began to realize it was not much use for a farmer to begin keeping books unless the result was to show him that he was losing money on certain crops and that he would be wise to discontinue them. I am certain every implement dealer with whom I do business knows his cost price and to that he adds a profit, and that is the basis on which I do business with him. I have no quarrel with him because he could not carry on his establishment on any other basis. But it is a hard one for the farmer to face. He can honesty search and find when it comes to known costs of producing anything but he is up against chance work when he tries to sell in such a way that he will be sure to recover those costs."

Figures secured from careful surveys in Western Canada have put the cost of producing grain at several points over the dollar mark, and the usually accepted figure is $1.08 per bushel. If there is a high price for wheat the farmer may make some money; if there is a low price he will undoubtedly lose. He is not in a position to apply his known costs to the article he is offering for sale. He suffers from being in that position because it is contrary to all the known and recognized laws of good business.

SCHEMER

¶ John Dugal is a clever jay, and he shows that in every way, he must think awful quick; he knows just how to shape himself, and when to have abounding health, and when to threaten sick.

¶ Three days ago when he came home, he managed just one plaintive groan, as though it hurt his pride; his wife inquired just what was wrong, he said he didn't feel too strong, a pain camped in his side.

¶ The next day on his nerves were slack, he must have somehow sprained his back, he couldn't lift much weight; when he got up it hurt him so, that he could hardly start and go, nor could he stand up straight.

¶ The next night on when going to bed, he said he felt about half dead, perhaps it was his heart; a doctor wouldn't do no good, he'd fight it out as best he could, unless he came apart.

¶ He limped when he went out to walk, he limped the whole way down the block, he might well tumble down; but when John Dugal got away, he went like any other day, and stepped it off down town.

¶ But he's recovered quite a lot, he has no spells of cold or hot, of aches he has not one; the house was cleaned when he was sick, and then John Dugal got up quick—when it was nearly done.

From Official Parliamentary Reports

(Dealing with the application of a company to rebuild the bridge which recently collapsed at Niagara).

Mr. HEAPS: No. He submitted balance sheets for the ten previous years of the whole operations of the corporation, nine-tenths of which had reference to utilities owned on the United States side.

Mr. EDWARDS: There was painting.

Mr. HEAPS: He made some statement to that effect; but there was no itemized statement showing how the $65,000 was made up, and I think other members of the railway committee will bear me out that in giving the committee of the whole the figures I gave of $273,000 of income and $65,000 of expenditure, I gave the only figures that, as I remember, Mr. Robertson submitted. There was one other figure he gave which strengthened the argument of those who opposed the bridge. He said there was two per cent. placed in a depreciation account each year. The bridge having been in existence for forty years, with two per cent. placed in a depreciation account for forty years, the bridge would have been debt free.

Mr. EDWARDS: No, no. What about upkeep?

Mr. HEAPS: Hon. members to my right, if they have any business acumen, and I believe they have—

Mr. WERMENLINGER: I ask the hon. gentleman if he ever handled a private business in his life; if so, how can he come to those conclusions?

Mr. HEAPS: I may not have handled one of my own; but I have handled public utilities, and I know a good deal more about them than some of those who are interrupting. The cost of painting a bridge is not capital expenditure, and anybody who has anything to do with business ought to know that. Painting is purely maintenance and comes out of operating revenue, and if a bridge requires painting every one or two years, that is not capital expenditure, and cannot be reckoned as part of the capital expenditure of the utility. The same applies to maintenance charges; they are not capital expenditure, as the hon. member should know. They represent part of the operation costs of the bridge; indeed, they are part of the $65,000, part of the annual expenditure of the bridge, and if two per cent. were put in each year, as I said a moment ago, which caused the hon. gentlemen to my right to become so excited—

Mr. EDWARDS: It was such a foolish statement; that is why.

Mr. HEAPS: The statement was made by Mr. Robertson, K.C., counsel for the private corporation. I am merely repeating what he said.

Mr. WERMENLINGER: I was a member of that committee, and everybody was speaking at the same time.

Mr. HEAPS: Unfortunately there was no printed record of the proceedings, but it was stated that two per cent. was set aside for sinking fund purposes. What I claim is that if two per cent. were set aside each year by way of amortization and put in reserve for the purpose of a sinking fund, at the end of forty years the bridge would be paid for and there would be no bonded indebtedness.

Mr. TAYLOR: (Nanaimo): Two per cent. for forty years would not represent more than seventy per cent.

Mr. HEAPS: Two per cent. each year amortized over a period of forty years would be, as far as I understand arithmetic, approximately one hundred cents on the dollar, and not seventy, as the hon. member states.

Mr. EDWARDS: Seventy per cent. is about right.

Mr. BENNETT: Two per cent. of the bonds, not two per cent capital.

Mr. HEAPS: Well, if it is two per cent. of the bonds, that is eighty per cent.

Mr. ROWE (Dufferin-Simcoe): That is near enough.

Mr. HEAPS: I do not wish to continue the discussion on this point because the facts are obvious even to my hon. friends. The issue is not whether the income was $273,000 and the expenditure was $65,000 a year. The question is whether there should be a bridge there owned in part by the province of Ontario, or whether we should allow a private corporation to construct a bridge which will be owned in perpetuity by a United States company whose head office is in that country. That is my main reason for supporting the present bill. I saw the old bridge a few weeks ago down in the Niagara river, and I think it was not a bad place for it to be. It is unfortunate for the people who owned the bridge that it is where it is; but so far as the people of Ontario are concerned, it would be very desirable from a purely Canadian standpoint, as a "Canada first" policy, may I say, to have the people of Canada own that part of the bridge which is located in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. BENNETT: Why does the hon. member not put that in the statute?

Mr. HARRIS: I am glad to see the hon. member for Winnipeg North enrolled in the ranks of the "Canada first" party.

BREAK 'EM, BOYS!

(Detroit Free Press)

EMILY POST finally broke down the other day and admitted that it is O. K. to put crackers in the soup if only a few are put in at a time.

This probably will not interest confirmed cracker soakers, who are persons of individuality and strength of character, but such a ruling from the throne will be a boon to those timid people who are more afraid of disregarding a rule of etiquette, made by Heaven knows whom than they are of smashing the moral law.

For the first time in years a lot of folks will now know how soup, and particularly oyster soup, tastes when consumed as the cook and nature intended.

That spot of jelly on the tablecloth did a lot for Emily and humanity.

WITH CARS IN FRONT.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

FOR OUR PART, far more mental anguish is caused by the abominable practice of creating multiple-word titles.

"Thirty-two-year-old Service Station Operator Norman Ford is a recent specimen. A Toronto dignitary has been described as Chaplain Past Master Right Worshipful So-and-So." The newscaster of a Toronto paper told us the other evening about "Red-Headed, short of temper Mrs. Kenny." Another one had news about "Toronto Liberal Member of Parliament Who-zis" and only last evening an unoffending member of the Legislature was described as "Provincial Opposition House Leader Leopold Macaulay." It is like a train with the cars in front of the locomotive.

CHANGE OUR WAYS

Editor Examiner:

Sir: The crushing burden on ratepayers of Toronto and in the country generally is convincing evidence that our present system of taxation is fundamentally wrong. A public revenue is necessary and many believe that the method of raising it is of little moment. The average citizen could carry with ease twenty pounds if put upon his shoulders. How far could he go if ten pounds were strapped to each foot? Instead of devising new extensions of the present system, sound judgment suggests a radical reform in the incidence of taxation.

Mr. Justice Turgeon in his report on the Textile Industries emphasises the fact, upon which all economists are agreed, that taxes upon manufactures are added to the cost of goods and paid in full by ultimate consumers; proving that hard times, business crises, unemployment, etc., are the direct results of taxing labor-products. They also constitute violations of the property-rights of individuals.

When the diverse origin and nature of private and of public property rights are recognised and implemented in our legislation, we shall enjoy peace and prosperity, but never until then.

RE. CHEMONG FLOATING BRIDGE

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Once again the above bridge has been wrecked. This is almost an annual occurrence and again the taxpayers of Peterborough County will be called upon to provide funds to drag back and repair this most unsightly structure that disfigures a beautiful lake. Sufficient money has already been spent to build a concrete four-lane highway around the head of the lake to the village of Ennismore. However a four-lane highway is not necessary but instead a good county road from Fowlers Corners on Highway No. 7, to Ennismore could be built at reasonable cost and a permanent year round road would then be provided instead of the bridge that is not used four or five months every year.

When it is realized that even with poor township roads around the head of Chemong Lake to travel on it only takes thirteen or fourteen minutes longer to reach the village of Ennismore than by crossing the floating bridge. With a good county road the time could be reduced to six or seven minutes. In view of this actual fact can there be further justification for additional expenditure on Chemang bridge?

There is another angle that should not be overlooked. During the present year the Trans-Canada airlines will be opened and as far as can be ascertained at the moment the Malton airport will be the only stop in the Province of Ontario. However feeder lines will be established from the larger cities. Peterborough should and no doubt will establish a feeder line. Chemong Lake only six miles away would make an ideal landing field for seaplanes. The lake runs in the required direction for prevailing winds. However heavily laden transport planes require from two to three miles to take off safely and with the floating bridge as an obstruction this could not be done.

The Peterborough Council has already rejected a suggestion that the City of Peterborough assist in financing the bridge but have indicated that they would be willing to help in construction of a road.

Why not let this old dilapidated eye sore go now and begin at once and build a good road that would be an added attraction for tourists many of whom would not cross the floating bridge under any circumstances.

ENNISMORE TAXPAYER.

WHAT IS COMING NEXT?

Editor Examiner:

Sir: His difficulties have driven Mr. Roosevelt to the most extraordinary measure that has ever been put upon the statute books of the U. S. A. We may well all ask "what next?" It is called the agricultural adjustment act of 1938 and applies Fascist control not to the production of farm produce but to the sale of it. First of all it is to be decided by the government what farm prices in comparison with other commodity prices will be fair to the farmer. The required quantity of produce to produce those prices is ascertained. Then the whole surplus produced must be put in government storage under severe penalties (as in Russia). It is pretended that the surplus will be used up in lean years and not be hang-overs. But experience does not show that and it looks like a desperate attempt to do the impossible. If it can succeed however as it then might do, by putting every thing under government control as in Italy and Germany we might understand it but that this Fascist measure should be applied to farmers only looks pretty one-sided and hopeless. What will be the next step?

The Craze For New Armouries

(From the Bowmanville Statesman.)

IF IT WAS NOT so ludicrous it would be almost amusing to read that the Town Council of Port Hope will communicate with the Department of National Defense pointing out the desirability of establishing the headquarters of the Midland Regiment in that town and erecting a modern armoury building in Port Hope. This request is made when one realizes that seven miles away at Cobourg there is a huge armoury, and that the present headquarters of the Midland Regiment, of which Durham is a part, is located there.

The serious part of this request is the everlasting cry of the taxpayer for reduced taxation, and at the same time needless applications of this type being forwarded to the government to spend money. Port Hope, nor Bowmanville for that matter, is in any more need of an armoury building than is the smallest village in Durham County. One has only to look around at the armouries at present in the County and see what services they render. In Orono, Blackstock and Millbrook ther are armouries that are used for banquets, badminton, dances and band practices. In Cobourg the armoury is used for something along the same line including a centenary celebration.

It seems to us that what Port Hope really wants is a nice building where badminton may be played, community dances, banquets and political meetings held, and that the expense of such a building be borne by the already overburdened taxpayers of Canada as a whole. Bowmanville could just as easily claim a right to an armoury. But we swallow our ambitions and pride and instead of putting the country to the useless expense of building an armoury in town our military headquarters are located in a second story flat over a pool room at a nominal rent. Fortunately our town council is not the type that wants to spend money on every little popular whim or luxury that comes along.

Just so long as citizens and town councils act like indulgent children with the "givemes" and continue to petition governments for armouries and other public buildings which are really not needed just so long will taxation in Canada continue at its unwarranted high level.

If Port Hope wants a place to play badminton, or hold dances and pink teas, why doesn't the town do the same as Bowmanville did, provide its own quarters and not expect the federal government to foot the bill?

MRS. ARMSTRONG HEADS HAVELOCK W.I. THIRD TIME

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, April 5.—The Havelock Branch of the Women's Institute returned Mrs. John Armstrong to the office of president for her third successive year at the annual election of officers held yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber.

The meeting opened as usual with the Institute Ode and prayer, the members responding to the roll-call by paying their yearly fee.

Reports were then received from the various officers and committees. The treasurer, Miss Ina Morrison, reported a bank balance of $102.16. Relief report presented by Mrs. Charles Taylor showed cash expenditure of $52.27. Sick committee report was received from Mrs. Colquhoun and Mrs. Watson; Property Committee report from Mrs. Jones; Institute Birthday Party Committee, Mrs. Iles; and Cemetery Fund Committee, Mrs. J. Armstrong.

Mrs. Armstrong thanked the members for their co-operation during the past two years. She reported that about eighty books had been sorted from the library and sent to South Lake, and that there were now about 375 books in first-class condition on the library shelves.

The secretary, Mrs. Clare Price, reported a membership of 51, with an average attendance of 32 for the twelve meetings last year. Papers were given during this time on the following subjects: Peace, Canadianization, Legislation, Confederation, Health and Child Welfare, Historical Research, Canadian Industries, and Education. A delegate was sent to the Toronto Conference and a car load of members attended the officers' rally in Lakefield.

The Institute catered the Albion Club banquet in October and held their annual Hallowe'en masquerade dance. They also sponsored a tag day in the interests of the Children's Shelter, Peterborough, and made donations to the Crippled Children's Hospital. A box was also sent to the drought-stricken area in the West.

The Institute is now undertaking the task of having the Maple Grove Cemetery systematically cared for. They are co-operating with the owner, John Ruttan, in this, and have communicated with each plot owner asking for a subscription of one dollar each year. This will pay for the upkeep of their plot for one season. Very favorable replies have already been received from many of the owners, and everything points to the success of their new endeavor.

Mrs. A. Anderson then took the chair for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. John Armstrong; first vice-president, Mrs. Robert McCutcheon; second vice-president, Mrs. Harry Pollock; secretary, Mrs. Clare Price; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Little; district director, Miss Liza Wright; directors, Mrs. Joseph Hoffman, Mrs. A. Anderson, and Mrs. P. Colquhoun; auditors, Mrs. S. J. W. Clarke, and Mrs. George Chiles; press reporter, Miss Ina Morrison.

After Mrs. Armstrong resumed the chair, a lengthy discussion was held concerning the co-operative program for the new year. The Institute decided on the needlecraft course.

It was decided that they continue supplying milk to the school until the first of May.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting under the convenorship of Mrs. Thompson.

Spanish Truckers Worse Than Bombs Will Rogers' Son Is Convinced

New York, April 5 (CP)

WILL Rogers, Jr., son of the late humorist, returned from the Spanish battlefront today with the comment that bombs falling in Barcelona were not so dangerous to life as "wildeyed Spanish truck drivers."

Rogers arrived on the H.M.S. Queen Mary after several weeks covering the war for the newspaper he owns, the Beverly Hills, Calif. Citizen.

"I was in Barcelona at the height of the bombing by insurgent planes," he said. "The detonations were terrific. The planes flew so high and so fast that no one saw them and no warning was given until the bombs began to fall.

"I never saw so many American-built trucks as there were in Barcelona. Those wild Spanish drivers came roaring down the streets day and night, and you had to keep out ofthe way — or else."

OBITUARY

MISS EDITH GARDNER

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 5.—The citizens of Norwood and vicinity were greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death of Miss Edith Mae Gardner, elder daughter of Mrs. Joseph Gardner and the late Joseph Gardner of Norwood in Calgary on Monday, March 28, following two days' illness.

Miss Gardner who was thirty-five years of age spent practically her entire life in this community and had won a host of friends through her cheery and happy disposition and the many acts of kindness she did in her quiet way.

Miss Gardner was a member of the United Church and willing helper in the Evening Auxiliary despite that poor health, often forced her to be inactive.

Miss Gardner went to Calgary last fall with the hope that the change in climate and altitude would be beneficial to her health. This hope was fully realized by the fact that her condition was wonderfully improved up to two days before her death when stricken by the flu from which she was unable to rally.

The remains arrived on the noon train Friday and the funeral held from the family residence Saturday afternoon with Rev. A. S. Cleland, pastor of the United Church in charge. The large gathering of friends and acquaintances bore mute testimony to the esteem in which she was held.

Those surviving besides her sorrowing mother are one sister, Mrs. John McConnell (Ruby) of Norwood and two brothers Dr. G. H. Gardner (Gerald) of Havelock and Evan J. Gardner of Deseronto. A brother Ross predeceased her nine years ago and her father three years ago.

The pall-bearers were six cousins, Messrs. George Humphries and Percy, Howard, Francis, Warden and Maitland Gardner. Interment was made in the Norwood Cemetery.

Out of town friends were present from Calgary, Peterborough, Trenton and Havelock. The entire community sympathize with the family in this hour of their bereavement.

THREE INJURED AS BUS HITS CAR

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 5.—Three persons sustained minor injuries when the automobile in which they were riding was struck in the rear by a Collacutt coach and turned over twice in the ditch two miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 on Saturday afternoon.

The automobile driven by George Garrison, Bancroft, was making a left-hand turn off the highway into a private driveway and directly in front of the bus that was following. The bus was driven by P. E. Neill of Gananoque.

The injured persons, all occupants of the lighter motor car, were Vera and Bella Garrison, relatives of the driver, and Gordon Vivian, all of Bancroft. Fortunately only minor injuries were sustained.

Garrison assured Provincial Constable Everett Smith, who investigated, he had extended his hand, indicating he was about to make the left-hand turn, and in warning to the following traffic. Neill in charge of the bus stated the driver of the automobile had not given sufficient warning of his intentions and gave the driver of the bus, that was about to pass the Garrison car, no chance to protect or avoid the crash. The automobile was badly damaged about the body, fenders and top. The occupants were extremely fortunate in escaping with minor injuries as the car turned over twice in the south ditch after being struck in the rear.

Australia reports that its employment is back to pre-depression levels.

CANADIAN LUMBER IS DUMPED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP).—United States Government tariff experts, opening hearings today on a revised reciprocal trade agreement with Canada, heard testimony that Canadian lumber producers were undermining domestic prices by "dumping lumber in Atlantic seaboard markets.

Witnesses representing United States lumber interests demanded parity in British markets as the price for any further tariff concessions to Canada.

Other witnesses representing the livestock industry opposed further concessions, asserting livestock producers were "in no mood" to accept a reduction in duties.

Assails Methods Used

Col. W. B. Greeley of Seattle, Wash., Secretary of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, told the Committee for Reciprocity Information that merchandising methods employed in Eastern United States markets by British Columbia lumber producers "would not be tolerated in Canada."

Colonel Greeley said Canadian producers, because of lower production costs and lower freight rates were able consistently to undersell American producers. American manufacturers, he said, were restricted by law to use American vessels while the Canadians were able to charter tramp steamers at favorable terms which virtually discounted the present duty on lumber.

Greely said the west coast lumber industry believed in the principle of reciprocal trade, but added 'a fair equalization of trade requires reasonable protection in the domestic market."

Hepburn Right On C.I.O. Issue Conservative Member Declares

"Holly" Acres Scores Conservative Board Of Strategy In Last Election

TORONTO, April 5. — Expressing his entire agreement with Premier Hepburn's stand on the C.I.O. issue, A. H. Acres, Conservative M.L.A. for Carleton, last night strongly condemned the advice tendered his Leader, Hon. Earl Rowe, by the Conservative Strategy Committee.

Mr. Acres was speaking at a well-attended meeting of Ward Five Conservative Club, held in Euclid Avenue Orange Hall.

"Hepburn is right on the C.I.O.," said Mr. Acres. "I can't imagine who gave the advice to Earl Rowe on that issue. I just can't understand it. As I see it, this man Lewis has no right sending his agents into our Province. Surely we have Canadians who are capable of planning the laws necessary to our welfare.

"I am not in favor of sit-down strikes," he continued. "I am in favor of employees meeting their employers and solving their common problems together. I am an employer of labor and I think that is the way to do business. I do believe we should reorganize our Government and our monetary system so that people can own their own homes and regain their self-respect.

"Unless we have a reorganization, no country of eleven million people can ever pay the Dominion, Provincial and municipal debts and still own their own little homes. We are hampered to-day by a terrific burden of indebtedness and we need a reorganization of our monetary system to cure it. I am not advocating repudiation, but rather a re-establishment of our credit.

"What we need now is leadership," asserted Mr. Acres. "I don't congratulate the Conservative Party on the leadership it has had for a number of years. If I were the Leader of a party, I wouldn't withdraw a statement even if I got thrown out of the House — if I knew I was right."

Mr. Acres said he had challenged the Prime Minister when he said he didn't know about the proposed renewal of the power contracts last August. "I knew about them in August, and if he didn't he is dumber than I take him to be," he declared. "I was told that they were already renewed or as good as renewed. I was also told that stock in some of the companies was remaining in trust until the controversy had blown over.

"Neither the Premier nor Mr. Macaulay wants Mr. Roebuck on the committee. Hepburn is afraid to put Roebuck on the committee."

MRS. ARMSTRONG HEADS HAVELOCK W.I. THIRD TIME

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, April 5.—The Havelock Branch of the Women's Institute returned Mrs. John Armstrong to the office of president for her third successive year at the annual election of officers held yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber.

The meeting opened as usual with the Institute Ode and prayer, the members responding to the roll-call by paying their yearly fee.

Reports were then received from the various officers and committees. The treasurer, Miss Ina Morrison, reported a bank balance of $102.16. Relief report presented by Mrs. Charles Taylor showed cash expenditure of $52.27. Sick committee report was received from Mrs. Colquhoun and Mrs. Watson; Property Committee report from Mrs. Jones; Institute Birthday Party Committee, Mrs. Iles; and Cemetery Fund Committee, Mrs. J. Armstrong.

Mrs. Armstrong thanked the members for their co-operation during the past two years. She reported that about eighty books had been sorted from the library and sent to South Lake, and that there were now about 375 books in first-class condition on the library shelves.

The secretary, Mrs. Clare Price, reported a membership of 51, with an average attendance of 32 for the twelve meetings last year. Papers were given during this time on the following subjects: Peace, Canadianization, Legislation, Confederation, Health and Child Welfare, Historical Research, Canadian Industries, and Education. A delegate was sent to the Toronto Conference and a car load of members attended the officers' rally in Lakefield.

The Institute catered the Albion Club banquet in October and held their annual Hallowe'en masquerade dance. They also sponsored a tag day in the interests of the Children's Shelter, Peterborough, and made donations to the Crippled Children's Hospital. A bale was also sent to the drought-stricken area in the West.

The Institute is now undertaking the task of having the Maple Grove Cemetery systematically cared for. They are co-operating with the owner, John Ruttan, in this, and have communicated with each plot owner asking for a subscription of one dollar each year. This will pay for the upkeep of their plot for one season. Very favorable replies have already been received from many of the owners, and everything points to the success of their new endeavor.

Mrs. A. Anderson then took the chair for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. John Armstrong; first vice-president, Mrs. Robert McCutcheon; second vice-president, Mrs. Harry Pollock; secretary, Mrs. Clare Price; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Little; district director, Miss Liza Wright; directors, Mrs. Joseph Hoffman, Mrs. A. Anderson, and Mrs. P. Colquhoun; auditors, Mrs. S. J. W. Clarke, and Mrs. George Chiles; press reporter, Miss Ina Morrison.

After Mrs. Armstrong resumed the chair, a lengthy discussion was held concerning the co-operative program for the new year. The Institute decided on the needlecraft course.

It was decided that they continue supplying milk to the school until the first of May.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting under the convenorship of Mrs. Thompson.

Candid Camera Shots

Candid camera shots clicked at random in Peterborough the other afternoon are shown here. The unsuspecting victims were intent on other things when the Examiner photographer "shot" them. If persons whose pictures appear here come into Examiner office and identify themselves they will each be given an enlargement of their photograph. And to other Peterborough residents; who knows, you may be the next victim.

Spanish Truckers Worse Than Bombs Will Rogers' Son Is Convinced

New York, April 5 (CP)

WILL Rogers, Jr., son of the late humorist, returned from the Spanish battlefront today with the comment that bombs falling in Barcelona were not so dangerous to life as "wildeyed Spanish truck drivers."

Rogers arrived on the H.M.S. Queen Mary after several weeks covering the war for the newspaper he owns, the Beverly Hills, Calif. Citizen.

"I was in Barcelona at the height of the bombing by insurgent planes," he said. "The detonations were terrific. The planes flew so high and so fast that no one saw them and no warning was given until the bombs began to fall.

"I never saw so many American-built trucks as there were in Barcelona. Those wild Spanish drivers came roaring down the streets day and night, and you had to keep out ofthe way — or else."

OBITUARY

MISS EDITH GARDNER

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 5.—The citizens of Norwood and vicinity were greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death of Miss Edith Mae Gardner, elder daughter of Mrs. Joseph Gardner and the late Joseph Gardner of Norwood in Calgary on Monday, March 28, following two days' illness.

Miss Gardner who was thirty-five years of age spent practically her entire life in this community and had won a host of friends through her cheery and happy disposition and the many acts of kindness she did in her quiet way.

Miss Gardner was a member of the United Church and willing helper in the Evening Auxiliary despite that poor health, often forced her to be inactive.

Miss Gardner went to Calgary last fall with the hope that the change in climate and altitude would be beneficial to her health. This hope was fully realized by the fact that her condition was wonderfully improved up to two days before her death when stricken by the flu from which she was unable to rally.

The remains arrived on the noon train Friday and the funeral held from the family residence Saturday afternoon with Rev. A. S. Cleland, pastor of the United Church in charge. The large gathering of friends and acquaintances bore mute testimony to the esteem in which she was held.

Those surviving besides her sorrowing mother are one sister, Mrs. John McConnell (Ruby) of Norwood and two brothers Dr. G. H. Gardner (Gerald) of Havelock and Evan J. Gardner of Deseronto. A brother Ross predeceased her nine years ago and her father three years ago.

The pall-bearers were six cousins, Messrs. George Humphries and Percy, Howard, Francis, Warden and Maitland Gardner. Interment was made in the Norwood Cemetery.

Out of town friends were present from Calgary, Peterborough, Trenton and Havelock. The entire community sympathize with the family in this hour of their bereavement.

THREE INJURED AS BUS HITS CAR

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 5.—Three persons sustained minor injuries when the automobile in which they were riding was struck in the rear by a Collacutt coach and turned over twice in the ditch two miles west of Belleville on Highway No. 2 on Saturday afternoon.

The automobile driven by George Garrison, Bancroft, was making a left-hand turn off the highway into a private driveway and directly in front of the bus that was following. The bus was driven by P. E. Neill of Gananoque.

The injured persons, all occupants of the lighter motor car, were Vera and Bella Garrison, relatives of the driver, and Gordon Vivian, all of Bancroft. Fortunately only minor injuries were sustained.

Garrison assured Provincial Constable Everett Smith, who investigated, he had extended his hand, indicating he was about to make the left-hand turn, and in warning to the following traffic. Neill in charge of the bus stated the driver of the automobile had not given sufficient warning of his intentions and gave the driver of the bus, that was about to pass the Garrison car, no chance to protect or avoid the crash. The automobile was badly damaged about the body, fenders and top. The occupants were extremely fortunate in escaping with minor injuries as the car turned over twice in the south ditch after being struck in the rear.

Australia reports that its employment is back to pre-depression levels.

CANADIAN LUMBER IS DUMPED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP).—United States Government tariff experts, opening hearings today on a revised reciprocal trade agreement with Canada, heard testimony that Canadian lumber producers were undermining domestic prices by "dumping lumber in Atlantic seaboard markets.

Witnesses representing United States lumber interests demanded parity in British markets as the price for any further tariff concessions to Canada.

Other witnesses representing the livestock industry opposed further concessions, asserting livestock producers were "in no mood" to accept a reduction in duties.

Assails Methods Used

Col. W. B. Greeley of Seattle, Wash., Secretary of the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, told the Committee for Reciprocity Information that merchandising methods employed in Eastern United States markets by British Columbia lumber producers "would not be tolerated in Canada."

Colonel Greeley said Canadian producers, because of lower production costs and lower freight rates were able consistently to undersell American producers. American manufacturers, he said, were restricted by law to use American vessels while the Canadians were able to charter tramp steamers at favorable terms which virtually discounted the present duty on lumber.

Greely said the west coast lumber industry believed in the principle of reciprocal trade, but added 'a fair equalization of trade requires reasonable protection in the domestic market."

TORONTO, April 5. — Expressing his entire agreement with Premier Hepburn's stand on the C.I.O. issue, A. H. Acres, Conservative M.L.A. for Carleton, last night strongly condemned the advice tendered his Leader, Hon. Earl Rowe, by the Conservative Strategy Committee.

Mr. Acres was speaking at a well-attended meeting of Ward Five Conservative Club, held in Euclid Avenue Orange Hall.

"Hepburn is right on the C.I.O.," said Mr. Acres. "I can't imagine who gave the advice to Earl Rowe on that issue. I just can't understand it. As I see it, this man Lewis has no right sending his agents into our Province. Surely we have Canadians who are capable of planning the laws necessary to our welfare.

"I am not in favor of sit-down strikes," he continued. "I am in favor of employees meeting their employers and solving their common problems together. I am an employer of labor and I think that is the way to do business. I do believe we should reorganize our Government and our monetary system so that people can own their own homes and regain their self-respect.

"Unless we have a reorganization, no country of eleven million people can ever pay the Dominion, Provincial and municipal debts and still own their own little homes. We are hampered to-day by a terrific burden of indebtedness and we need a reorganization of our monetary system to cure it. I am not advocating repudiation, but rather a re-establishment of our credit.

"What we need now is leadership," asserted Mr. Acres. "I don't congratulate the Conservative Party on the leadership it has had for a number of years. If I were the Leader of a party, I wouldn't withdraw a statement even if I got thrown out of the House — if I knew I was right."

Mr. Acres said he had challenged the Prime Minister when he said he didn't know about the proposed renewal of the power contracts last August. "I knew about them in August, and if he didn't he is dumber than I take him to be," he declared. "I was told that they were already renewed or as good as renewed. I was also told that stock in some of the companies was remaining in trust until the controversy had blown over.

"Neither the Premier nor Mr. Macaulay wants Mr. Roebuck on the committee. Hepburn is afraid to put Roebuck on the committee."

HENRY PICKARD WINS $5,000 AUGUSTA GOLF TOURNAMENT

Walter Johnson, The Greatest According To Playboy Schacht

No Pitcher Of Present Day Had The Speed Of Famous Big Train

NEW YORK, April 5 (AP)—Al Schacht, the baseball clown, is back from his annual tour of the training camps, and he still hasn't spotted that rookie pitcher he's always looking for who can throw a ball like Walter Johnson used to.

Every spring when Al makes the rounds he keeps watching the young pitchers, searching for that easy, flowing motion that made Johnson his idol.

Al, who was on the Washington club many a year with the big Swede, clowns practically all the time except when he gets around to the subject of Johnson. Then he gets serious.

"Why do people keep talking about who was the greatest pitcher when anybody with any sense knows there was never one even close to Walter?" he asks. "Ask any man who ever tried to hit that fast ball of his. They'll tell you.

"When I look at some of these guys they call fast-ball pitchers these days it hands me a laugh. Why, Johnson threw a ball harder when he was loafing along behind a one-run lead than anybody else ever has, and that includes Lefty Grove at his best. His fall ball was the nearest thing to poetry you'll ever see on a ball field."

None of which is news. Everybody has heard that Johnson could blaze them across so fast that on dull, cloudy days the batters didn't like to get within bat-length of the plate. But as time passes the phenomenal speed of Johnson becomes only a legend to a new generation, so it is fun and a little exciting to hear Schacht bring it back to life.

"Some days when Walter really felt like throwing that onion it was plain murder for the opposing team. They would just stand back and wave their bats until everybody, even Walter, was laughing. On days when Johnson was due to pitch for us you could count on two or three members of the other team reporting sick. They didn't like to face him and you couldn't blame 'em.

"Funniest thing that ever happened was one day when our regular catcher got a split finger about the middle of a game and we put in a young fellow named Rip Williams to catch Johnson. Walt was pretty fast that day, and Billy Evans was calling strikes behind the plate.

"The first one went over Williams' shoulder and hit Evans an awful thump on his protector. An umpire in those days wasn't armored up like he is now. The second pitch also went right past Williams and cracked Evans square on the shin. So help me, Billy grabbed his shin and turned around and bawled out that the game was called on account of darkness. I'll swear he made it stick, too, and the sun wasn't even down."

SEALS REPRESENT WESTERN CANADA IN JUNIOR HOCKEY

WINNIPEG, April 5 (CP)—Manitoba will represent Western Canada in the Canadian junior hockey final for the third time in four years following St. Boniface Seals' 6-5 victory over Edmonton Athletic Club here last night.

Chased to the final whistle by a gallant Edmonton team, Seals edged out a narrow win in the fourth game of a three-of-five series. They took the first two by scores of 7-3 and 8-3 but lost the third 3-1 when the Alberta champions climbed spectacularly out of a slump.

The Manitobans will meet the winner of the Oshawa Generals-Perth Blue Wings series for the Memorial Cup, won last year by Winnipeg Monarchs. Seals dethroned Monarchs in the provincial final a month ago. In 1935 another Monarch club won the national championship.

TRAYNOR PLANS ON NEW SQUAD FOR PITTSBURG

Finding the key men of the Pirates is like looking for a needle in a haystack. Competition for a half-dozen jobs is the reason. Manager Pie Traynor has let it be known he is rebuilding, and no man's position is safe.

Ray Berres is battling Al Todd for the catching assignment. Gus Suhr finds Woody Jensen, former outfielder, contesting his hold on first base. Lee Handley has been moved over to third to compete with Bill Brubaker and Ross Young is being tried at second. Rookie Johnny Rizzo is struggling with John Dickshot for an outfield job beside the Waner brothers. Outfielder Morris Sands, from Tulsa, has been so hot in training camp that Traynor may keep him with the club.

Newcomers Threaten

Rookies are competing with regulars for mound work. Young Truett Sewell, 16-game winner from Buffalo, is one of the likelier flingers. Marvin Duke, who has been up before, is back again with a record of winning 21 games for Montreal, and has looked impressive in training. Kenneth Heintzleman, southpaw who joined the club toward the end of last season, is favored by all who have seen him perform.

Youth seems to hold the key of Pirate success. Two of the men who were up last year, John Dickshot and Russ Bauers, can do much toward making or breaking the ball club. If Dickshot recovers his batting eye, the outfield problem will be solved. Bauers had a fine year last year, and if he is the 20-game winner he promised to become, the Pirates will be in the flag fight all the way.

Handly And Brubaker

Brubaker falls into the same class as Dickshot. The Los Angeles youngster disappointed with the bat, though he showed flashy form afield. Something of the same nature must be said of Lee Handley, the American Legion grad who started out last year like a house afire, but subsided when the campaign reached its acute stage. Improvement by Dickshot, Brubaker and Handley would increase vastly the Pirates' chances. The Handley-Brubaker duel for the third base job has developed into a training camp epic. Great things are expected of Floyd (Pep) Young, 20-year-old infielder.

Though Berres has been making a spirited bid for the catching job since he came up last fall from Louisville, Al Todd's bat is so highly respected he may start again, though Traynor has not comitted himself. Certainly Berres' work behind the bat leaves nothing to be desired. The catching assignment gives Pie a tough decision.

Success of the team rests largely with the young blood on the club. If it boils up right, the Bucs will be bad news.

CANADA TO STAR AT EMPIRE SHOW

GLASGOW, April 5—(CP).—Canada will play a conspicuous role in the United Kingdom's greatest exhibition since Wembley, 1924-25, which opens its Empire display May 3, backed by a guarantee fund of $3,750,000.

The Canadian pavilion covers 24,000 square feet. It is built of Canadian lumber on a framework of British steel. Flanking the entrance are two eight-foot figures of Canadian youth. Surmounting the pavilion is a 100-foot tower.

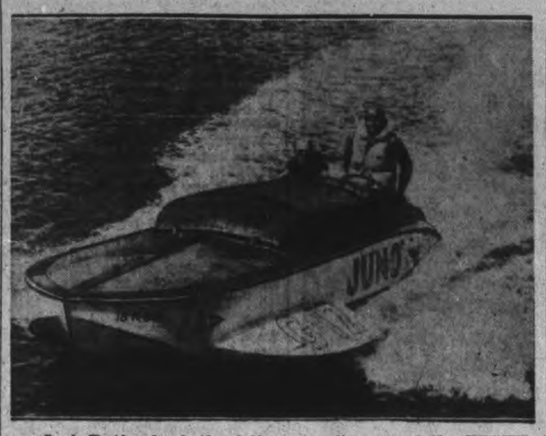
A feature of Canada's display will be the largest illuminated map in the Empire. By pressing on buttons visitors will be able to light up such features of Canadian life and developments as mines, outposts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, airports and cities.

Thirty-five panels in black and white, formnig a balcony round the interior of the building, will illustrate Canadian buildings of public and historic interest and a dozen dioramas will tell the story of Canadian industry, sport and education. The Canadian railways and manufacturers throughout the Dominion will also contribute to the exposition.

Effective Goals

It was only his fourth score of the season but to Alex Levinsky, ABOVE, Chicago Black Hawks' defenceman, it probably seemed as good as 50. In the third and deciding game of the series with New York Americans for the right to advance into the Stanley Cup finals, he registered the second goal in the Hawks' 3-2 victory.

Meant For Bullet – Breaks Record



Jack Rutherfurd, the fellow standing up at the RIGHT, is feeling pretty good after breaking the world's hydroplane speedboat record in his Gold Cup boat, Juno, at Miami. He first attained a speed of 88.670 m.p.h. to break the mark he set last year at Washington, and then came back to shatter it again by scudding over the waves at 89.776 m.p.h. The Juno was originally built for a Chinese suicide squadron, with the idea of carrying a projectile and hurling itself against a large vessel and destroying it, the driver sacrificing his life. When the persons who ordered the boat failed to produce the money, the boat was converted into a racing craft.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

IN NO layer of life is the nickname so common and popular as in sports. Probably a couple or three reasons for this, one being that the husky athletes prefer mannish handles like Butch, Bud, Chuck Slim, etc., to the monickers pinned on 'em by well-meaning but misguided parents; and another being that a short sobriquet is much more to the point when the urge is toward speed. For instance, a puckist tearing goalward, looking for a pass, is more inclined to yell: "Over here, Fat," than "Over here, Clarence!" Or a ball player calling for a fielder to take a fly as several dash toward it, has but time to bellow: "Hank," and might find it too late to ayert a collision if he roared out: "Wellington!" Anyway, we thought of all this when seeing where some N.H.L. stars' names are unfamiliar, owing to the usage of nicknames. Like Dit (Aubrey) Clapper, Bucko (Wilfred) MacDonald, Hooley (Reginald) Smith, Red (Mervyn) Dutton. And so on.

* * * * * * *

AND IT occurred to us that local fans might be interested in knowing some of the Peterborough athletes' names, guys who hide behind applied appellations, as it were. There is Clinton (Mick) Magee, Robert (Red) Creighton, Nelson (Pete) King, Harold (Shrimp) McDougall, Harvey (Barney) Barnes, Norman (Bill) Calladine, Harry (Bun) Kingdon, and a raft of others in rugby, lacrosse, ball, hockey, softball, basketball, boxing, etc. A few girl athletes, too, but only a few. And any number of names for chaps like Ned, Mac, Ted, Toby, Al, Les, Gus, Gee, and whatnot. As well as the more colorful handles like Moon, High-Pockets, Honey, Mouse, Dasher, Doc, Josh, Seven-Hook, Shiner, Pinky, Blimp, and the rest. Even hits coaches at times at witness William (Pick) Hines of the local puckists, and George (Knotty) Lee, former local ball skipper.

* * * * * * *

MANAGER STEPHENSON of the Lindsay Supremes' girl softballers is interested in entering the local district league this year. If his squad can get home games on the Scugog diamond and provided the lack of daylight saving there doesn't ball up things. The Supremes feel they would not be supreme in this circuit without bolstering a bit, but will do that little thing if they enter. We imagine the Keene, C.G.E. and Westclox outfits would spread the "Welcome" mat to the Lindsay lasses, as they want no part of Cobourg this season and might experience a bit of difficulty lining up a good fourth squad in their loop. However, more about it when the green buds start coming out and the red flannels coming off.

* * * * * * *

USED TO be tougher to get three ball imports by the O.B.A.A. than 'tis to wangle a tough teamster through the Pearly Gates. But since they dropped that first "A" from the title—meaning no more so-called amateurism—it is a pipe to pass a flock of players. For instance, the Niagara Falls' gang got five imports at the first executive meeting this year, and one was from Saskatchewan and two from the States! Stratford also got five tourists okayed and other spots got three and four—as many as they asked for, practically. Two ex-Napanee guys were moved to Toronto, Blazetich and Jeffers. Deadey comes here from Kirkland Lake. Utronki, who once resided here, was passed from St. Catharines to Merritton. Ken Long got his transfer from Peterborough to Toronto. And Bill Schultz got the nod from Kitchener to Brantford.

* * * * * * *

SCHULTZ CAME here from Kitchener and stayed a couple of years, returning not so long ago. And now moves to Brantford. Saw this item in the Kitchener sheet the other day: "Bill Schultz, who used to do some first-basing for Waterloo intermediates and Kitchener juniors, before moving to Peterborough several years ago, is a candidate this year for the initial sack assignment with the Brantford seniors." Bill came out with the senior Petes a couple of seasons ago but didn't show senior calibre. He played a bit of intermediate hockey here, too, and then went out with the Senior City Leaguers. He also managed the C.G.E. gal softballers a year.

BILL GAYNON, the Falls' sports editor, rambled up and down the hotel lobbies the night before the O.B.A. annual and got a flock of flashes of delegates heaving the bull about. A few might be of interest here. Says he: "Bill Smith admitting he had been in the dark for years on the amateur question but knew his Sports Federation was a cure-all for present ills . . . . Max Swanston telling Jim Corcoran that his town was outlucked in hockey with the Falls, and Jimmy refuting it . . . . Bill Smith and Bob Elliott matching wits while debating amendments, both showing quite a batting average . . . . Peck Ward proving the ideal host in Rooms 406 and 407 . . . ." He mentions Swanston re-election to the executive, Ernie Gibbard's defeat for an office, and runs a picture of half a dozen of the big shots at the banquet table, R. A. Elliott being included.

AND THE Oshawa Generals go marching on, meeting Perth next in Eastern Canada junior finals. Ought to win out and continue along the trail toward the Memorial Cup. A number of the Generals are known to local players, having been beaten by the Colts several times a few years back when in junior "B" competition. Fellows like Forster, McTavish, Shortt, Krantz, Daniels and Dafoe, the latter from Port Perry. They've gone quite a piece since, owing to better competition, artificial ice and also several star imports like Taylor, Tonn and Knipfel. With artificial ice, our Colts could be up there in junior "A" hockey within a couple of years, too.

* * * * * * *

AS FOR basketball, there is a City Cage League final tomorrow night at eight at the "Y" between C.G.E. and St. Paul's. The latter are down 13 points now and it looks like curtains for them, but they'll make it a real battle, nevertheless. St. Paul's are awaiting the Brampton-Welland winner in O.C.B.A. playdowns for their next church contest, and it sort of looks like Brampton, who took a 39-29 win last Saturday. There will be two girls' playoff games at the Y.W.C.A. this Friday night, too, juniors at 7.30 and seniors at 8.15 o'clock.

* * * * * * *

HITHER AND yawn: Church Puck Loop may have to change the time and place for their annual banquet, as St. Paul's ladies, owing to changes in the water system at that church, had to cancel plans to cater for this supper . . . . A sudden-death hockey playoff is likely to be held in Oshawa tomorrow e'en between Belleville and Oshawa . . . . Harvey Staunton, who died in an accident last night, was a former rugby and basketball player here . . . . St. Catherines' senior ballsters start indoor training already, two nights a week, under Manager Bill Corbett . . . . Cornwall seniors lost their first to Quebec, 6-3 . . . . Kingston's junior "B" outfit took a 10-5 victory over Barrie last eve to win the O.H.A. title; our hearty congratulations . . . . While Orangeville defeated Aurora to win the junior "C" crown . . . . Elora nosed out Powassan yesterday in the first of the intermediate "B" finals . . . . No word yet on the next P.C.I. cage playdown game . . . . Toronto Leafs ought to cop tonight's Stanley Cup tilt with the Hawks handily . . . . O.A.S.A. is likely to join the new Sports Federation when the softballers convene in Sarnia on Good Friday . . . . Supposed to be a Toronto ballster living in Campbellford now . . . . Gotta scram now as the gee at the next desk is crooning in a mellow voice about love and spring—and his voice is so mellow it's rotten!

HAWKS LABELLED THE UNDER-DOGS MAY UPSET LEAFS

TORONTO, April 5 (CP) — The spirit with which Bill Stewart has imbued his Chicago Black Hawks, admittedly not a great hockey team as far as playing polish is concerned, gets its greatest test tonight against the National League champions, Dick Irvin's Toronto Maple Leafs.

Black Hawks, bones aching and bodies tired after strenous playoffs against Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans, move into the last act of the playoff drama, opening of a best-of-five series against Leafs for the Stanley Cup. Hawks, as they have been all season, will be decided underdogs.

That is all right with Stewart, a first-year coach making a grand job out of Hawks. First Canadiens were called to eliminate the "Harmony Boys," then Americans got the call and both fell before Hawks.

Toronto All Set

Leafs are set. A week's rest at their Preston training quarters has fitted them physically after the brawling of the Boston series—a Leaf triumph in three straight. Harvey Jackson's sprained left hand has mended, the bruises around Jimmy Fowler's eyes have gone and it won't be lack of condition if they are beaten.

Overconfidence may unsettle Leafs, young and proud now they are champions. That and the possibility of staleness are the only worries of Coach Dick Irvin, who will lead Leafs down from their quiet training scene an hour or so before game time. "The boys are fidgety at the waiting," Irvin reported.

Colorful as Leafs are with their dashing youth and incessant speed, there is color, too, in the Hawk team Stewart has assembled from last season's pathetic squad, some major-league castoffs and the old guard—Mush March, Paul Thompson, Johnny Gottselig and Doc Romnes.

These were the four who played prominent parts in 1933-34 when Tommy Gorman, now manager of Montreal Maroons, and Lionel Conacher led Hawks to the Stanley Cup. These are the four Stewart will rely on most with burly Earl Seibert if and when the going gets tough againts Toronto.

"When the chips are down you use your best men as long as they're willing and able—and mine are," said Stewart. The quartet carried the bulk of the third-period forward line work against Americans. They will be called on to do the same against Toronto if the necessity arises.

Confident Of Battle

Confidently Stewart declares: "I'm sure we'll give them a good battle. In a short series anything can happen; the breaks can decide it. The club's spirit is very good."

He emphasizes the part about club spirit. That's what Stewart, acknowledged to be a great handler of athletes, believes has played a major part in Chicago's success.

It may be that they'll need more than spirit to beat Leafs but one way or the other—win or lose—Stewart is satisfied with what the team has done in a climb from third place in the American section to a place in the cup final. The Hawks are a "happy family" now, Stewart intends that things won't change.

Plymouth, Mass., Veteran Returns 285 Card, Three Under Par

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oprl 5 (A.P.).—Henry Picard, son of Old Plymouth in Massachusetts, gave a thoroughbred exhibition of front-running on Monday to win the $5,000 Augusta national golf tournament over a star-studded field that includes Robert Tyre Jones Jr., retired world champion.

Taking the lead after fifty-four holes, and with a half-dozen distinct threats close on his heels, the 30-year-old professional gave par a two-stroke lacing on his final round to take first place and $1,500 with a total of 285, three under par and two blows ahead of his nearest opposition.

Pickard fired a great 32 on the first nine and then settled down to a stretch of pars after going over at the start of the "stretch" nine.

Lighthorse Harry Cooper and Ralph Guldahl, the national open champion, both of Chicago, finished in a tie for second place. Their final-round 71's, a stroke under the standard figures for the course, gave them totals of 287.

Paul Runyan of White Plains, N.Y., took fourth place with an even par aggregate of 288. He was a stroke in front of Byron Nelson, the young Reading, Pa., professional.

Jones, making what has become his long competitive appearance annually in the "masters" tournament, finished in a tie for sixteenth place at 297.

C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, London, Ont., former Canadian and United States amateur champion, shot 71 for 308, and Stanley Horne of Ottawa, only Canadian pro in the tourney, also fired a 71 for 296.

TOTAL COLLECTABLE

HALIFAX—(CP)—Total land tax in Nova Scotia collectable during the year ending November 30, 1937, was $80,315, according to the report of the provincial lands and forests department. All land holders of the province holding areas of 1,000 acres or more are required to pay the tax of one per cent on the valuation of the property.

The youth was playing with the cartridge when it suddenly exploded. Two fingers of his left hand were blown off.

Rothschild Charges Playoff System Cost Falcons Allan Cup Chance

SUDBURY, April 5 (C.P.). — Sammy Rothschild, coach of Falconbridge Falcons' senior hockey team, charged on Monday the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's system of playoffs cost Falcons their chance for the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian senior amateur hockey championship.

Falcons were eliminated in the Eastern Canada semi-final by Cornwall Fliers on Saturday after beating Toronto Goodyears and Chatham Maroons.

"I don't see why the C.A.H.A. had to leave the playdown schedule to the last minute," Rothschild said. "It should be set out at the first of the year how the playoffs will run so we could know what to expect. If we had beaten Cornwall and gone on to take Quebec, we would have had to take every senior team in Eastern Canada, but Moncton and Halifax to reach the Allan Cup final. You can't say that's fair."

Rothschild said his team was just as good as Cornwall "if we both started from scratch."

SYRACUSE WINS SECTION TITLE IN INTERNATIONAL PUCK LOOP

POWERS' STARS RIDE THE CREST TO BEAT DUKES

CLEVELAND, April 5 (CP).—Unpredictable as only a farm team of Toronto Maple Leafs could be, Syracuse Stars rode today on a crest of four straight playoff victories that meant the elimination of Pittsburgh Hornets and Cleveland Barons from the International-American Hockey League post-season series.

Stars copied to perfection the style of their parent Leafs, who stunned a hockey world in knocking off Boston Bruins in three straight games for the National Hockey League championship, by completing the elimination of Barons with a 3-2 victory last night. It was nearly 132 minutes after the start of the game that Maxie Bennett scored the winning goal in the fourth overtime period.

Thus the defending champion Stars, who finished third in their section in back of the leading Barons and the second-place Hornets qualified to meet either Providence Reds or Philadelphia Ramblers for the league title. The game was played at Cleveland and was only the second defeat of the season on home ice for the Barons.

Stars, who won the first game of the best-of-three game series 6-3 on Sunday night, were led by Jack Thompson with two goals. The Cleveland marksmen were Phil Hergesheimer and Les Cunningham. Church Shannon came in for an assist on one of Thompson's tallies and on the winning goal scored by Bennett.

After a scoreless first period, Hergesheimer gave Barons the lead at 7:59 in the second session when he converted a relay in which Les and Bill Cunningham and Lorne Duguid figured. Thompson scored his first goal shortly after the half-way mark on a pass from Fox and Cunningham, aided by Bill Cunningham and Duguid, sent Barons ahead again late in the period.

Shannon set up Thompson with a perfect goal-mouth pass for the tying goal near the mid-section of the last period and then the teams settled down to await the breaks in the overtime sessions. It finally came at 12:41 in the fourth extra period when Bennett wafted a long shot that eluded Goalie Maurice Roberts.

Quebec—Quebec; Ontario—Cornwall.
West—
Ontario—Port Arthur; British Columbia—Trail.

FLYERS MEET 6-3 SETBACK AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, April 5 (CP).—Quebec Aces, in a free-scoring contest with Cornwall, smothered Don Penniston's Flyers 6-3 last night to take the first game of their best-of-three Eastern Canadian Allan Cup final. Cornwall scored first, but Quebec knotted the count, and Blond Jack O'Connell, veteran Ace winger, drilled the winning goal in the second period.

Flyers sped to a skating advantage over the big Quebec Province champions in the first and third periods, but in the second Aces turned on a high-geared, systematized offensive that rolled up four goals and left the lighter Ontario club badly disorganized. The first period ended with the teams tied, 1-1, and Flyers outscored the winners by 2-1 in the third.

Play Again Wednesday.

Second game of the round will be played Wednesday in Ottawa, where Cornwall won its way into Allan up semi-finals Saturday by downing the powerful Falconbridge Falcons. Quebec entered the current round by knocking off Moncton Maroons, Maritime champions.

Strength all through the lineup won for Aces, who met Don Penniston's fleet forwards at the blue line most of the night and drove back to give Lloyd Perras a trying time in Flyers' net. Big Jack O'Connell was the only member of the winning team to score twice.

KINGSTON WINS ONTARIO TITLE

MIDLAND, April 5. — Burying Barrie Colts under a hail of rubber, Kingston Red Indians swept to the Junior B hockey championship by winning 10-5 here last night, for their third straight victory and a clean sweep of the title series.

The Limestone crew sped to a wide margin in the opening period, and at no time did Barrie seriously threaten to make it even close. The Indians led 5-1 in the first, stretched it to 7-2 through the middle stanza, and kept even at 10-5 during the final canto.

Tiny (Artso) Partis, play-making centre of the Kingston squad, scintilated throughout the contest, opening up the way for his mates to score and topping it off with a beautiful solo tally in the closing period.

Hewitt, Limestoner goal-minder, piled up the desperate Barrie rushes in sensational style, but was effectively aided by the fast back-checking of his supporting cast. D. Crawford on the defence, Knott and Carr-Harris of the forward lines were other standouts in the Kingston victory.

Dyte, Raney and Scott played dashing hockey for the Barrie team, but the Colts showed to poor advantage against their speedier and classier rivals. Scott counted twice during the last stand of the Barrie team, but Kingston ended the game as it began, on Goodfellow's goal.

CARL VOSS REGISTERS ONLY CHICAGO GOAL
KELLY NETS LEAFS' SECOND GOAL AGAINST BRUINS

Here are a couple of goal scoring efforts in the N.H.L. playoffs. UPPER: Five New York American players can be seen to only one Chicago Black Hawk, but that didn't stop the puck from ending up in the Amerks' nets. It can be seen high in the rigging after Voss (14) planted it behind Earl Robertson, sprawled on the ice, after taking Roger Jenkins' pass. The other players are Ching Johnson, extreme LEFT; Gallagher (5), Johnny Sorrell (14) for Amerks, and Hooley Smith, facing camera. LOWER: Pep Kelly has just counted the second Maple Leaf goal in the final game with Boston. No. 16 is Pep and he has banged home the rebound after Tiny Thompson, sprawled on the ice, had knocked out a shot by George Parsons, seen wheeling around at the RIGHT. The Bruins shown are Clapper (5) and Sands (4). The puck is behind one of the bars of the goal.

Baseball Briefs

(By The Associated Press).

Winter Haven, Fla.—The report that Pitcher Paul Dean had signed a contract with St. Louis Cardinal Boss Branch Rickey was the chief item of news today as the Gashouse gang checked in for a game with their Columbus farm. The Cards, it is said, got waivers on their pitching problem child so he could attempt a comeback with one of their minor league "branches."

Bisbee, Ariz. — Varying problems are concerning Manager Charley Grimm of Chicago Cubs and Manager Jimmy Dykes of Chicago White Sox. Grimm is weighing the merits of the idea of giving Right-hander Clay Bryant confidence by starting him in the opener April 19 against Cincinnati. Dykes has enough to think about without looking that far ahead.

Bryan, Tex. — It was Cleveland's turn to be the "home" team in its long series with New York Giants today, and for that Bill Terry was thankful. The Giants supplied the baseballs for yesterday's exhibition at Austin, and 23 of them were hit into the crowd. To make matters worse, the Giants lost the game as well.

Lakeland, Fla.—Though his infected hand still is in bandages, Shortstop Billy Rogell stoutly maintains he'll be in the Detroit Tiger line-up on opening day. "That is," he adds, "unless somebody shoots me in the meantime."

Winslow, Ariz. — Though Pittsburgh Pirates are on an 11-game winning streak, they're itching for tougher competition. To-day's game was their sixth straight with a semi-pro outfit, which led Skipper Pie Traynor to observe that "eight straight games with the White Sox starting Thursday should be just what the doctor ordered."

ORANGEVILLE CAPTURES TITLE

TORONTO, April 5.—The long uphill fight of the scrappy gang of kids wearing the green-and-white sweaters of the Orangeville O.H.A. junior "C" hockey team ended in a blaze of glory Monday night when those battling youngsters again came from behind to beat Aurora 2 to 1 after ten minutes of overtime in the third game of the series at Maple Leaf Gardens.

From the start of the championship round the Orangeville team were behind when they dropped the first game of the series 4 to 3. Then last Saturday at the Gardens they were forced to come from behind once more and overcome a two-goal lead to win out by the same score as the first game.

But their efforts last night capped anything they have done previously when they once more overtook their rivals and then won out in overtime. Two thousand and thirty-nine rabidly cheering fans saw the game, and judging by the wild demonstration which greeted the final bell it is safe to say that more than half rooted for Orangeville.

Hal Headley And Bill Kilmer Among Owners For The Derby

Former Offers Menow, Latter Goes For Nedayr In 3-Year-Old Test

NEW YORK, April 5 (AP)—Two horsemen of the old school, Hal Price Headley and Willie Sharpe Kilmer, present a widely different pair of outstanding candidates for the May 7 running of the $50,000 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Headley, a hardboot from Lexington, Ky., offers the front-running Menow as his threat to the United States best three-year-olds. Kilmer, Binghamton, N.Y., publisher, challenges with Nedayr, a son of Neddie that appears to do his fastest running in the home stretch.

Although he has been one of America's leading owners and breeders for many years, Headley has yet to send out a derby winner. Kilmer has not seen his colors borne to the front in the blue grass classic since Exterminator won in 1916.

Neither Menow nor Nedayr has started this year but off their two-year-old form and fine trials they rate right behind Stagehand and Fighting Fox in pre-race calculations. Some argue they should be placed ahead of the Fox.

Menow was the undisputed two-year-old champion of 1937. He started six times, won three, placed second twice and earned $65,825. He e stablished a world record of 1:15 1-5 for 6½ furlongs down a straightaway in the Belmont Futurity.

"Menow is doing very well indeed," said his trainer, Duval Headley. "We consider his chances for the Derby very good. The leg he injured in Maryland last fall is in fine condition. He has been breezing well and recently went six furlongs in 1:14 4-5."

Nedayr came along last year to win the Pimlico Futurity and Walden Handicap after most of the top-notch two-year-olds were in winter quarters. Altogether he started nine times, won three, was second twice and third one to earn $38,695.

He has not missed a day of training this winter at Remlik Hall, and he has grown considerably, standing just under 16 hands and weighing over 1,000 pounds.

"I believe Nedayr's chances are as good as any," said his trainer, W. A. Crawford.

HOUSTON, Tex.—New York Yankees were still shellshocked today. They couldn't believe any club could hand them the beating they absorbed yesterday from New Orleans.

TWO NEW FIREMEN BEEN APPOINTED IN PAST MONTH

Two changes in the personnel of the fire department last month were reported by Chief Gimblett in his March review to the council last night.

Bud Miller Cruikshanks was appointed to the vacancy created by the promotion of Archie McDonald as fire prevention inspector. Mr. Cruikshanks is 5 feet 9½ inches in height, weighs 163 pounds, was born in Peterborough twenty-seven years ago and is married. Joseph Finnie, fireman for thirteen years, resigned to take up farming.

"I was sorry to see him go as I considered him one of my best men,"' Chief Gimblett commented in his report. "I have appointed William D. Sorrie in the place of Finnie. He is married, 5 feet 9½ inches, weighs 194 pounds, 27 years old and born in Scotland."

There were 45 fire alarms in March and the loss for the month totalled $2,278.30 of which $1,078.80 was on buildings. The number of inspections made during the month was 591.

March Relief Costs

The city's relief accounts for March totalled $13,024.13, of which provisions amounted to $7,062.59; milk, $893.65; fuel, $1,873.29; clothing, $628.06; medicine, $26.55; rent, $1,900.87; doctors, $639.10.

The number of families on relief last month was 431, and the total number of persons 1,835 of whom 39 were single men and 42 single women. There were 382 orders for rent, 322 for clothing, 198 for medical attendance, 48 for medicine, 23 for dental service, 8 for mattresses, 3 for ambulances, 1 funeral, meal tickets 200, 1,449 orders for provisions, 342 for milk and 607 for fuel.

Two Parks Assumed

The Nicholls Oval and Inverlea Park were accepted from the Nicholls Park Trustees for the general use of the people of Peterborough. The will of Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls creating the gift of parks to the city was dated 1868, fifty years ago. Only Jackson Park remains under the supervision of the trustees who are planning certain improvements with the intention of eventually presenting it outright to the city.

Another bylaw ratified the sale of a lot on the west side of Rogers street to William Tinker for $100. The deed of the property restricted to $3,000 the value of a house that might be erected on it. Alderman McCannan reported that Mr. Tinker had already begun building a house on the lot.

ATLANTIC AIR RATES

It is estimated that when regular trans-Atlantic aeroplane service is established, one-way fare will be approximately $400.

Oil Negotiator

Francis W. Rickett, negotiator of the famous Ethiopian oil deal, is reported to be negotiating with President Cardenas of Mexico, for the purchas of Mexican petroleum expropriated by Cardenas. It was reported that Rickett, along with Bernard Smith, New York broker, had offered to buy 25,000,000 barrels of Mexican oil, which is more than half the annual production of Mexico. President Cardenas was said to have demanded $5,000,000 before completing the deal.

Sacrifice of liberty is not the way to peace."

No Weakness in Policy.

Mr. Macdonald concluded for the government. He said Britain's policy certainly "is not dictated by any weakness." If the government's efforts toward "appeasement and our endeavor at peace-making fail, and this country is drawn into war, we can make a contribution in that war which will be decisive."

"We have to be careful especially to preserve our cooperation and our unity with the peoples of the Dominions who expect the same freedom as we do in the conduct of their affairs," he said. He quoted General Hertzog, Prime Minister of South Africa, as stating that Mr. Chamberlain had South Africa's support in policy and methods of carrying it out.

Forecasting the result of the censure vote, Mr. Chamberlain early in the session declared the Opposition "may be thankful they are going to get off with a sound beating to-night and will not yet have to suffer an even more resounding defeat in the country."

With Soviet Ambassador Maisky one of his audience, Mr. Chamberlain said the government's foreign policy had won approval of practically "the whole world, with the exception of Russia."

Abandonment of non-intervention in the civil war would lead to war, Mr. Chamberlain said.

OBITUARY

ORLEY BENNETT
(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, April 5.—A very impressive memorial service was held in Trinity United Church at 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, 3rd, for Orley Bennett, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Bennett of Madoc.

Orley, who was 15 years old, had been ill for nearly a week of typhoid fever but his death on Tuesday, about noon, came as a distinct shock to all his friends. The funeral, which was private, was held on Thursday, from the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Spry, and interment at Lakeview cemetery.

Orley was a first form high school student and one of this year's high school team. He was a member of Trinity United church.

Besides his sorrowing parents, he leaves one sister, Loreen.

JAMES W. RUSSELL.

HAVELOCK, April 5.—The funeral of the late James W. Russell, of Belmont township, was held from his residence Monday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. S. A. Kemp, interment taking place at Maple Grove cemetery, where graveside service was held by members of the Havelock Masonic Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 435.

The late Mr. Russell was very well known in this district, always having taken an active part in the affairs of the township, iff which he was reeve during years 1908-9-10, and a councillor for several years prior to that. Of late he has been a valuable board member of the Belmont Municipal Telephone System, also acting as secretary-treasurer.

MRS. ISAAC McINROY
(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, April 5.—The death of Lena McGregor, wife of Isaac McInroy, came as a distinct shock to this community on Saturday. Although little hope was held for her recovery when she was admitted to Nicholls Hospital at Peterborough on March 18, her many friends here could hardly believe she would be taken away so soon.

The late Mrs. McInroy was only forty-eight years old. She was of a very cheerful nature and seldom was there a sick room she did not visit. She was a very kind neighbor, always willing to give a helping hand in time of need. A valued member of Springbrook Women's Institute also of Springbrook Ladies' Aid. And her sudden passing has cast a gloom over the entire district

She leaves to mourn her loving husband, one son Clifford of Peterborough, five daughters, Daisy (Mrs. Jack Bailey), Bernice (Mrs. Arthur Knott), Marjorie (Mrs. George Hewitt), and Helen, all of Peterborough, and little Dorothy, age 11 years.

A former minister of education, Mr. Henry said education was not getting its share of Ontario's increased revenue. In 1933, he said, 38.7 per cent of available revenue was spent on education but it dropped to 27 per cent last year. He argued the one-mill subsidy to municipalities should state specifically a part was to be used for educational purposes.

Plan Amazes Hepburn.

The Premier was "amazed" that Mr. Henry should sponsor the momotion. When he was Premier, the first thing he did "when he got in a corner" was to reduce grants for educational purposes. Mr. Hepburn added: "We are not going to be badgered and harrassed into accepting a resolution of this kind."

Hon. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, said it was "utterly impossible" to accept the motion at present. To pay 50 per cent. of educational costs would require additional expenditure of $34,500,000, and though he felt an increase was desirable, money for the increase was not available.

In a speedy sitting, the House gave third reading to a long list of bills, including one to incorporate the Grand River Conservative Commission. Under the bill, the commission is granted wide powers to construct flood-control works in the Western Ontario area drained by the river.

Second reading was given a bill to amend the Rural Power District Service Hydro Charge Act. The measure was forecast in Premier Hepburn's budget address. Sponsor of the bill, Mr. Houck, said 45,000 farmers now used Hydro, and it was felt another 50,000 could be served. The bill gave needed help to the farmer.

HUGE FEDERAL

The increase in the prairie provinces was 49.7 per cent.

Less Aid Required

Material aid, exclusive of agricultural aid, showed reductions in all areas except the prairie provinces, the Dominion reduction being 38.7 per cent. For the zones the reductions were: British Columbia 29.7 per cent, central Canada 45.1 per cent, Maritimes 78.4 per cent.

Agricultural aid, due to the western drought showed an increase for the Dominion of 29 per cent. The net increase in the prairie provinces was 83.2 per cent but the other areas showed the following reductions: British Columbia 44.9 per cent, central Canada 88.1 per cent, Maritimes 97.1 per cent.

From these figures Mr. Rogers concluded the Maritimes had returned to almost normal economic conditions, the relief problem had been reduced by one third in British Columbia and one half in the central provinces of Ontario and Quebec.

"We should not feel that we are not making progress with respect to employment simply because there is a continuance of those receiving agricultural relief in the drought areas," he said.

Alex Edwards (Con. Waterloo South) asked if the minister did not know there had been a sharp curtailment in industrial activity. Mr. Rogers said he knew employment in border cities had been affected by the recession in the United States. Mr. Edwards said he had been speaking of central Ontario and knew nothing about border cities.

"I agree," said Mr. Rogers, "but while I think we should avoid undue optimism we should also avoid undue pessimism."

New Dominion Program

The Dominion government had in view a broad program of national development and conservation, said the minister. It had never accepted the belief unemployment could be cured by any special device or by expenditures on special works. It had in mind plans which would enlarge the national income and lead to the absorption of all the people into gainful occupations.

In part these plans involved cooperation with the provincial governments but to a large measure they related to matters under federal jurisdiction.

Mr. Rogers expressed his confidence the provinces would eventually see the wisdom of a national system of unemployment insurance. With that would come a national employment service . The present service had fallen below desirable standards in some provinces.

The national employment commission had suggested that a national employment service might be inaugurated in advance of unemployment insurance but the government did not consider it advisable to deal with this matter of a piecemeal basis.

Some of the provinces were willing to turn over employment services to the Dominion but no such intimation had come from the big industrial provinces.

Hon. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) suggested the government taken over the whole cost of unemployment relief from the provinces and municipalities. This would permit a lowering of taxes on real estate and remove the chief obstacle to revival of the building industry.

Rap At Commissions

J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, said some more effective methods of dealing with public business than by royal commissions would have to be found. He complained of the time lost waiting for commissions to report while nothing was done for unemployment.

The government, he said, should spend $100,000,000 on slum clearance and housing. It could raise $50,000,000 by higher income taxes and the other $50,000,000 by an issue of new money.

The House passed a supply bill containing $36,717,000 in further supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ended last March 31. Another bill granting $39,057,000 as part of the estimates for the present fiscal year also was passed through all stages.

Today the House will consider changes in the electoral law and three resolutions sponsored by Hon. C. G. Power, minister of pensions and national health, will be taken up.

Aid to Tourist Industry.

Labor Minister Rogers instanced assistance to Canada's $300,000,000-a-year tourist industry.

He said: "My own feeling has been from my 2½ years in office, that we should concentrate not on relief works as such, merely to provide employment, but rather to concentrate on such projects that will develop this country, conserve its resources, and make possible a permanent absorption of our people in gainful occupation."

The minister reviewed the recommendations of the National Employment Commission.

In its final report, the commission pointed to the tourist industry as an ideal repository for governmental assistance with a view to providing employment. The minister said he agreed with this recommendation, and the Government proposed taking concrete steps along this line.

He defined the Government's broad, general policy as having the object of developing and conserving the resources of the country. There were means of developing the country which not only would provide a temporary alleviation for unemployment but make it possible for Canada to increase its national income.

More Youths Training.

The Government was working on a broad program of national development and conservation, he said. In part this program involved cooperation with Provincial Governments but not wholly. The program included projects which were not concerned primarily with the provision of employment, but designed to "develop this country, conserve its resources and make possible employment and the permanent occupation of our people in gainful occupations."

Mr. Rogers referred to the youth training plan which he credited with giving "new hope and a stronger morale to thousands of young people from one end of this country to the other." This was a recommendation of the National Employment Commission, although the Government did not go as far as it suggested co-operation of the provinces, all of them coming within its scope.

There was no doubt that in recent months there had been an exodus of trained mechanics to Great Britain, Mr. Rogers told J. R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport), but it must be remembered Canada drew the bulk of its mechanics from Great Britain.

The first responsibility for apprenticeship rested on industry, Mr. Rogers continued. Secondly, it was the obligation of finances which controlled wages and industrial conditions generally.

widely known in Peterborough particularly from his connection with veterans' organizations. He enlisted in August, 1914 at the outbreak of the war with the 14th, and anxious to join a kilted unit transferred to the 15th Battalion, the first contingent unit of the 48th Battalion. He saw service at the front with that battalion and after being invalided home in January 1917 he became interested in the G. W. V. A. and was president of the Peterborough branch of that organization for a number of years during the period when it was very active in securing club rooms and in fighting the battles of the returned soldiers. Mr. Staunton returned to the employ of the C. N. R. shortly after his return from overseas and had been a member of the yard engine crew for a long time. Altogether he was with the Company about 28 years.

Mr. Staunton was born in Orillia in 1885 and came to Peterborough three years afterward. In his early days he was known as an expert roller skater and as a capable rugby and basketball player. He was a member of The Red Patch club and had a host of friends in that and other veteran organizations as well as throughout the city and district generally.

Surviving are his widow whom he married in 1917, and two sons William and Harvey Jr. at home. One brother Wilfred Staunton of Los. Angeles Cal., and four sisters, Miss Maud Staunton, Peterborough, Mrs. Sam Touchburn, Lakefield, Mrs. James Archer of Campbellford and Mrs. T. W. Wood of Orillia are also left to mourn his passing. A brother Clarence was burned to death in the fire that destroyed the Quaker Oats plant.

An inquest into the circumstances of Mr. Staunton's death will be held, Coroner Dr. Herb. Young announced last night.

MALCOLM McINTYRE APPOINTED TO VACANCY ON CITY COUNCIL

Special Committee Is Named To Ask The City Trust For Interview "On City Business"

Alderman Gordon Charges Legislature Members Canvassed By Brokers

Malcolm McIntyre was appointed alderman of the city council last night to complete the one-year term of W. F. Huycke, K.C., who resigned to become city solicitor.

Regarded as the dean of the council because of his long service, Mr. McIntyre retired late in 1937 before the expiration of the two years for which he was elected.

"He had a year to go anyway," Alderman Wilson remarked. "He is just coming back."

The appointment of Mr. McIntyre was moved by Alderman Stocker and seconded by Alderman Cotton in the second reading of the bylaw which had been prepared by City Solicitor Huycke, with a blank space for whomever the council designated, in anticipation of immediate action to fill the vacancy.

Alderman Glover enquired whether Mr. McIntyre would accept the position, and both Alderman Stocker and Wilson intimated that he had expressed his willingness to resume his seat in the aldermanic circle.

City's Condolence

A resolution by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman Glover, instructed City Clerk Armstrong to convey to the family of the late Joseph Crowe the council's sympathy in their bereavement by his death on Sunday with an expression of the high regard in which he was held by the members of the council.

To Interview Commission

Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Cotton and Glover were named as a special committee to ask the City Trust Commission for an interview "on city business." That broad phase actually embraced the special purpose of requesting the Commission to consider the possibility of making a grant from its surplus this year.

The motion developed out of Alderman Gordon's reference to the hearing of the city's bill recently by the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature.

Alderman Gordon said the members of the Committee had been canvassed by brokers of Bay Street and other financial interests with the result that the ratepayers of Peterborough were deprived of the assistance of two mills off their tax rate for at least ten years.

"There is no political responsibility in the action of the committee because there were as many Grits as Tories vigorously opposing it," Ald. Gordon stated. "Somebody should give Premier Hepburn the advice to get rid of the chairman of the committee (David Croll) or he will find himself lacking in support from Peterborough and the other cities that wanted to make use of accumulated surplus funds such as we have. The only move we can make now is to get rid of the City Trust, and let the city treasurer and the finance committee handle our debentures the way they do in other cities. This is the only city that has such a Commission. Since 1903 they have spent $15,475 in the money paid to them with $25,000 secretarial expense and $3,730 solicitor's fees, amounting to $44,705. They are dealing in millions of dollars of bonds. Last month they sold $110,000 of 5 per cent bonds and bought 3¼ per cent Quebec bonds and took the difference in cash. They borrowed $20,000 from the bank and they have no authority to do that. I think we ought to submit a bylaw to the ratepayers on the question whether they want the City Trust retained, and get them abolished.

No County Surplus

Peterborough county has no reserve because their council levies every year for what they need. I went back eighteen years and I couldn't find where there was any money they credited to the city."

Ald. Gordon said that a lot of the responsibility for what happened to the private bill lay at the door of Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission "and his father-in-law Mr. Eastwood." When Mr. Matthews appeared before the council he suggested the Utilities Commission would consider one-third of the amount that might be obtained from the City Trust, Ald. Gordon said.

Alderman Glover followed Ald. Gordon in a belief comment on the City Trust topic. "I was surprised at the objection of the Utilities Commission before the committee in Toronto, and I was rather disappointed at the result because I was hopeful we might get some respite this year, because we could use some money for a parking space or a market. The Utilities told us they would apply for one-third of the money we might get. I have been wondering whether there was any way we could talk it over with the City Trust and see if we could get anything from them. I think the Mayor and Alderman Cotton should try to talk it over with them.

Should Buy Property

"I'll do anything to get a central lot for the people of Peterborough," Alderman Cotton declared. "The property we have in mind would make the finest parking space in the city, and we shouldn't lose any time in trying to get it because the need is constantly growing."

"No one in this council disagrees with that opinion," Alderman Gordon commented.

The conversation briefly strayed to several other secondary subjects, and Alderman Glover brought it back again to his proposal that the council ask for an interview with the City Trust. He urged that Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Cotton ask for an interview with the purpose of getting some of the surplus to apply on one or other of the projects the council wishes to proceed with.

Alderman Bradburn suggested that if any money could be obtained from the City Trust it might be applied to the retiring of some of the high priced debentures.

Alderman Gordon moved, seconded by Alderban Stocker, that Ald. Glover be added to the sub-committee.

New M.L.A. Youngest By Two Days

Toronto, April 5.

EVERY seat in the Ontario Legislature was filled yesterday for the first time since the session opened, when Charles O. Fairbank, victorious Liberal candidates in the East Lambton by-election, was formally introduced to the House.

Premier Hepburn revealed that Mr. Fairbank was not only the newest, but the youngest, member of the House, having been born on June 6, 1904, two days after R. D. Arnott, former "Boy Mayor" of Belleville and Conservative member for Hastings West, saw light of day.

TWO FINGERS LOST BY EMILY YOUTH SHELL EXPLODES

LINDSAY, April 5.—Elmer O'Neill, aged 17 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Neill, Emily, is in the Ross Hospital with two fingers blown off as the result of an explosion at his home.

The youth had found a cartridge and was experimenting with it when it exploded, blowing off two fingers on his right hand.

Howard Nugent, of Ops, figured in a motor accident on the week-end. Accompanied by a party of friends, he was driving in the vicinity of the Janetville Presbyterian church when his car swerved and upset in the ditch filed with water. The car windows were broken and the water poured into the car, soaking the passengers. Miss Muriel Nugent sustained a bad gash in the hand, but the other occupants escaped uninjured.

An inquest has been ordered at Beaverton in connection with the death of W. E. Heppinstall, of Washago. The man was found dead along the C.P.R. track near Rama.

Man Given Month Stealing Umbrella

William Saunders, Sault Ste. Marie Indian, who pleaded guilty the other day to stealing an umbrella from the Canadian Department Store, was sentenced by Magistrate Langley this morning to a month in the county jail.

Sentence had been deferred until this morning at the request of the police, who wanted to investigate the record of the accused.

This morning it was revealed that Saunders, who had just got out of jail after serving a sentence on a liquor charge, when he and the umbrella became tangled up, had been previously sentenced to a month at Huntsville, Ont., on a theft charge.

SENATOR FALLIS DEFENDS DROUGHT STRICKEN AREA

Knowledge gained during the period when she was a resident of Saskatchewan enabled Senator Iva Campbell Fallis of Peterborough to make an effective reply in the Senate the other day to a statement from Senator Casgrain that sections of Saskatchewan, a particular section of Saskatchewan would never be of any use.

Senator Fallis took exception to the remark. "May I crave the indulgence of the House," said said "to answer one remark of the honorable senator who has just spoken. He said that in the area for which assistance is being asked there never were crops and never will be. It was my good fortune to live in that district for eight years and during those eight years we never had a crop failure. On the contrary there were marvellous crops and money was made; and hundreds of thousands of dollars of that money was sent to Ontario and Quebec to buy manufactured goods and helped to keep the industrial life of Eastern Canada going."

"I left that district in 1920. I may say the people along the Soo line between Moose Jaw and Weyburn have had one misfortune after another during the last seven years. It has not always been drought.

In 1935 there was a marvellous crop but when the wheat was filling there were a few warm, misty days and rust developed and destroyed the crop. But it is a mistake to say that wealth never came out of that country."

"I am in constant touch with people living in that district. Today they are encouraged as they have not been for five years, because the whole country is saturated with moisture. They have had snow and rain and floods. They think this is going to be the big year for that country and that they will be able to recoup their losses, pay their debts and repay some of the advances which have been made to them."

"My only regret is that in listening to the statement of the honorable leader of the House I learned that seed is to be given for only 250 acres. I know landowners out there who have 800 acres ready for wheat The land is in perfect condition and I do not think the money could be better spent than in helping people who for the last six or seven years have shown fortitude and courage by carrying on year after year. Now, when there is a prospect of a crop, we should not grudge them a little seed to enable them to live and to repay this country many times over."

DRIVING LICENSE IS SUSPENDED

TORONTO, April 5 (C.P.). — Wilfred Roger, of Peterborough, was sent to jail for five days, was fined $20.00, and costs, or 10 days, and had his driving licence cancelled for 30 days. Magistrate Tinker convicted him of reckless driving.

A. Dudley told His Worship he was making a left-hand turn when Rogers passed a red signal light and almost collided with his car.

"I had to swing wide to avoid him and tried to stop him but could not," swore Dudley. "I followed him to Danforth and Logan Avenues, where he went through the red light. I picked up an officer and we caught him."

P.C. John Coffey swore his attention was attracted to Rogers when he saw his car go through the red light.

"Mr. Dudley picked me up and we chased Rogers for about three miles. I found he had been drinking."

On a second charge of consuming, Rogers was convicted but remanded for sentence.

MICHIGAN POWER STRIKE EASES UP

DETROIT, April 5 (AP).—The Consumers' Power Company exercised full control today over its plants—an authority seized previously by committee for industrial organization union strikers — and mediators undertook to clear up loose ends remaining from the strike settlement.

Strikers relinquished possession of 13 power plants in large Michigan cities yesterday upon accepting a compromise which revived for four months an expired agreement with the company, but there still remained for solution the puzzle presented by three unions' claims to bargaining rights.

This puzzle was turned over to the National Labor Relations Board, which attended 10½ hours of continuous conference under Governor Frank Murphy's guidance which eventually brought forth the agreement. Plants were returned to company control almost directly. Strikers had seized them Friday but continued operations to consumers.

BIRDS FLY 50 M.P.H.

Sanderlings, small shore birds, have been clocked at more than 50 miles per hour.

Atop Box Car

Harvey Staunton, 53, of 854 George street, tumbled from a box car to his death on Monday afternoon shortly after four o'clock. By a strange quirk of coincidence Gil Downer, amateur camera enthusiast, happened to take a picture of him aboard the train only a short time before he met his death. Mr. Downer was trying for cloud and smoke effects with a valuable miniature camera, a Leica, and was using infra-red film. He caught the accident victim on top of the train, outlined against the clouds.

Adequate Police Protection Sought In North Monaghan

Compulsory Garbage Collection Also Sought In Suburban Area District

Adequate police protection within the township was requested by the North Monaghan Ratepayers' Association in a resolution to the council at Monday night's meeting in May's School. If no action is taken before the next meeting of the association on the first Monday in May at Confederation School, some other procedure will be taken. It was stated that North Monaghan has a population of nearly 3,500 and the statutes require a municipality of 1,000 persons to provide for a police constable.

The necessity of appointing a policeman in North Monaghan has been increasing of late, and the ratepayers of the suburban area feel that something should be done at once.

Another resolution asks the council for compulsory collection of garbage, with the cost to be applied on the taxes. Many residents have a voluntary system for which they pay ten cents a week or 40 cents a month, but others refuse to adopt it. The consensus of the meeting affirmed that garbage within the surburban section should be collected regularly from all the homes, and for sanitary effects it should apply to all the homes.

Sanding of the streets during the winter as part of the snow removal contracts was proposed in a resolution which will also be forwarded to the council, and it was also suggested that the sidewalks be inspected for repairs, and that the outer "combing" in some stretches of sidewalk be cut off to provide natural drainage.

THOMAS SADLER IS BURIED IN LINDSAY

LINDSAY, April 5. — Conducted by the Lindsay Lodge, I.O.O.F., the funeral of Thomas Sadler was held on Monday afternoon to Riverside Cemetery. Mr. Sadler died here on Saturday morning in his 73rd year, after residing in Lindsay all his life.

In his youth, Mr. Sadler was one of Lindsay's foremost athletes, excelling in hockey, lacrosse, and curling. He was a member of the first hockey team ever organized here, when there were only two teams in Canada—the other being at Ottawa.

For many years he worked in his father's flour mill, and after serving overseas in the Great War, he was appointed captain on a Government boat on the Great Lakes. He was a veteran of the local Oddfellows' Lodge and a member of the Canadian Legion and St. Paul's Anglican Church. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Fred Northery of Temiskaming, and three sisters, Mrs. A. B. Gordon and Mrs. W. D. Lummis of Toronto and Mrs. Adam Clarke of Winnipeg.

Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. A. J. Goldring, were held at the family residence, William Street.

UNLUCKY DAY

GLACE BAY, N.S.—(CP).—It was an unlucky day for Dan McLeod. First of all he was sentenced to two months in jail for breaking 14 windows. Then a court officer remembered McLeod had been convicted of a similar offence last January and had failed to make good the damage. Another two months was added.

ANOTHER FINE.

That Charlote street crap game, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. This morning Wm. Miller, the tenant of 169 Charlotte street, who on Saturday had pleaded guilty to knowingly permitting a portion of the premises to be used as a disorderly house and was fined $25 and $1.75 costs. "You should have put these people out when you found what they were doing," the Magistrate remarked. "I fined the keeper of the game $100," he added.

LINDSAY YOUTH FINED.

L. J. Evanesse of Lindsay, who had pleaded not guilty on Saturday last to a charge of stealing the use of a car belonging to Albert Bruce this morning changed his plea to guilty. "I made a fool of myself," he told the Magistrate, "and if I come back to Peterborough again I will try to act as a gentleman." Chief Constable Newhall explained that the Lindsay youth had been with the owner of the car and when the latter went into a house, Evanesse had driven off with the machine intending to drive round until the owner came out. It was a flagrant case, he said. Magistrate Langley imposed a fine of $10 and $3.25 costs.

Malcolm McIntyre informed The Examiner today he was accepting his appointment as alderman by the Council Monday night for the rest of the year. "Some of the north-end ratepayers have been asking me to go back, and when I was telephoned from the City Hall I decided to accept it," he said. "I have always tried to do my bit and play the game, that is why I am willing to carry on for the year."

PRESENTS THE EVIDENCE.

Carrying a broken pike pole and a tattered lifebuoy, Fred Tuggey held them up to his former associates of the City Council last night as evidence of the necessity of providing new life-saving equipment at the corner of Dublin and Waterford Street, overlooking the bay above the Quaker Oats dam. Alderman McCannan, chairman of the property committee, said that an appropriation had been included in his estimates for new equipment and that its purchase would be attended to.

NOT ACCEPTING COSTS.

Alderman Gordon informed the council last night that he disclaimed any right to the costs assessed to the city in the judgment of the Ontario Municipal Board relating to the fixed assessment of the De Laval Company. The Board's formal order had not been given, he said, and in the meantime it was announced that F. D. Kerr, K.C., would appeal the Municipal Board's judgment. Ald. Gordon stated to City Clerk Armstrong that no change could be made with respect to the company's assessment until the final order of the Board had been received.

Reporter As Exhibited By Chairman As Proof Folk Not All Millionaires

FASHIONABLE Forest Hill Village, Toronto suburb, which is seeking status as a city, proved yesterday it has a population not entirely made up of millionaires.

During discussion by the Ontario Legislature Private Bills Committee of Forest Hill's application to be incorporated as a city, A. L. Elliott (Lib., Peterborough), asked if it were true that Forest Hill's population consisted entirely of millionaires or if "ordinary people" also lived there.

"Well," returned Chairman David A. Croll (Lib., Windsor-Walkerville), "the best example I know of is—stand up, Cragg."

Kenneth Cragg, no millionaire, but a reporter for The Globe and Mail, stood up. A citizen of Forest Hill, he was reporting the committee meeting.

HALF-WAY MARK IS NEARLY REACHED IN Y.M. CAMPAIGN

With a report of $4,128 or 48 per cent. of the objective of $8,500, the Y.M.C.A. campaign at its first report Monday evening got away to a most encouraging start. So cheering indeed was the report that the chairman, J. G. Wharry, is confident the campaign can reach its objective by the time of the next report on Wednesday. "To do this would be to set a new record for fast work and an example to the rest of the country—thus giving Peterborough new prominence," said the chairman.

An enthusiastic group of workers sat down to supper served by the Ladies' Auxiliary and interspersed with rousing song. Rev. G. S. Easton asked the blessing and Mac Gordon sang two fine songs.

Four young men, Sam Rogow, Paul Hickey, Roland Rennie and Grant Morrow, told in brief enthusiastic and graphic form what they got from their association with the "Y." As the chairman remarked, "Here is a cross section of the youth of Peterborough."

The reports showed that the Blue Rooster division led by J. A. McKone had obtained 69 per cent. of their quota. The Red Roosters directed by K. N. Kingston had obtained 50 per cent. Both these divisions assured the chairman they would be 100 per cent. complete by Wednesday.

Jack Richardson's team reported 82 per cent. of its quota to secure the flag for the high team, and Chief George Gimblett reported the highest amount of subscriptions. Paige Rowell's team was also one of the leaders. The largest amount of "new money" was signed up by R. Simmons' team.

The special names report presented by R. L. Dobbin showed that they had signed up 36 per cent. of their objective but they were positive they too would reach their quota.

Nelson McEwen of the National Council Y.M.C.A. congratulated the teams on their fine progress and said he was sure the citizens of Peterborough would continue their usual fine co-operation to carry the campaign through to a successful conclusion.

Ministerial Association Affirms Its Opposition To Legalized Sweepstakes

Rev. M. C. Parr Is Elected President Of The Peterborough Association

Rev. M. C. Parr was elected president at the Monday meeting of the Peterborough Ministerial Association. The other officers are: Vice-president, Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe; second vice-president, Rev. G. H. Johnston of Omemee; secretary, Rev. F. W. Cralk; treasurer, Rev. R. T. F. Brain.

A resolution was adopted by the association affirming its opposition to the measure to legalize sweepstakes for hospitals on the following grounds:—

(1) That government sanction would make gambling respectable and thus increase scope of evil; (2) that the Canadian Hospital Council has declared its opposition after full consideration; (3) that gambling is economically and morally unsound; (4) that the sweepstakes measure is likely to introduce a gambling profession which will make no contribution to the social well being; and that copies of this resolution be sent to the Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the leader of the opposition the Hon. R. B. Bennett and to the local member of the federal house, J. J. Duffus.

Some discussion of the operation of pin games and slot machines in the city resulted in a resolution petitioning the city council to cancel the existing licenses on their expiration or to charge a fee high enough to make their operation unprofitable. It was stated that these games involving an increasing element of gambling are operated contrary to law, and that they have become a decided evil.

Sunday operation of this gambling game in several parts of the city stirred the association into sharper action, and a committee was appointed to wait on the city council at its next meeting, presenting the association's resolution.

It was also decided to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the translation of the Bible into English by holding a special service under the auspices of the association. The association will be guests of the Kiwanis Club at their meeting on Thursday April 14, preceding Good Friday, and will assist in providing the program.

THREE YOUTHS GET MONTH IN JAIL ON THEFT COUNTS

John Fair, 19, and Joseph Fair, 17, farm laborers and brothers living near Ida, and Sidney Mitchell, 23, auto mechanic, of Mount Pleasant were sentenced to one month in the county jail by Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning when they pleaded guilty to stealing four automobile rims, tires and tubes from Albert Bowles of North Monaghan on or about March 24.

The three youths were arrested yesterday at their homes by Provincial Constable David Silvester, who has been working on the case since the theft was reported nearly two weeks ago.

After pleading guilty, Mitchell said that the Fair boys had asked him to go to Peterborough with them. They had engine trouble several times on the way and finally decided to return home. When they got near the Bowles' place, John Fair had asked him to accompany him until he got a tire, and they had started out acros sa field. Mitchell said that when he realized where the tires were to be obtained, he immediately returned to the car. He admitted having been in court here before for driving without a license and for having knocked down a couple of women with his car and to having been convicted and fined in Port Hope for stealing a couple of blankets.

John Fair, in his statement, confirmed Mitchell's story as to what had happened. He told the magistrate that the tires had been taken to his home and also admitted that last Saturday he was convicted of stealing a quantity of gas and of having been allowed to go on suspended sentence. His younger brother said that he had been involved with John in the theft of gasoline.

Crown Attorney McElderry stated that four tires had been taken off Bowles car which was in a driving shed on his farm. A spare tire and three of those in use had been taken off, but the boys had been unable to get the fourth tire off the machine One of the stolen tires was put on a car owned by the Fair brothers, and the other three were hid beneath the straw in a barn.

Magistrate Langley said that he did not regard the case as one that justified suspended sentence. Entering a man's premises at night and taking the tires off his car was desperado stuff and he had accordingly decided to inflict a penalty of 6 months imprisonment.

European situation. Professor R. K. Arnold, who was scheduled at the first of the series, has since that time cancelled all his extra mural lectures and the Y's Men's Club was fortunate in securing Dr. Lange to give

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Barbara Kingsley, pretty young society editor of the Martinsville Post, has just "covered" another wedding. She is tired of the routine but Peter Baxter, managing editor, cheers her fading spirits. Garry Page, New York newspaper man in town for the wedding, misses his train back and Barbara, at the train to pick up pictures, offers to drive him to the Junction to catch the last train that night. They have dinner and, at the Junction, run into the wedding party, including Barbara's proud cousin, Julia.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 3

I came back to look for you but you had disappeared. I hope my cousin was kind to you."

Barbara's cheeks burned darkly. So Julia would save her pride by having them believe she had neglected Garry! Or maybe she had—

GARRY PAGE'S answer to Julia Kingsley released a cold little fear that had blown against Barbara's heart. After all, the man was leaving, anyway, and it was ridiculous to be glad that he said:

"Don't feel apologetic, Miss Kingsley. You were kindness itself. But I had a train to catch. I think we even said goodbye, didn't we?"

Somebody had a movie camera. He urged the group to move directly under the single lamppost.

"Stand back, everyone! We want the whole wedding party. Garry, it's great we caught you!"

Garry's hand tightened on Barbara's arm, but she released herself and held out her hand.

"My exit line. Goodbye—and good luck!" she said.

"It was a glorious evening. Thanks a lot. If ever you come to New York—" He was still talking as she hurried away.

She was in her car, heading down the road. She wanted to be safely away before the others left. She remembered that they would pass her, because her car was so slow and theirs were so fast, and turned down a side road to wait. Her car was limping more painfully. When she stopped to wait until the wedding party had passed, she couldn't start the motor again. Far down the road the last taillight of the wedding party flashed.

She couldn't walk home and she couldn't wait until a car passed. Now the rain was beginning and the green lace dress felt thin. She rummaged around and found an old gray raincoat.

Down the road a light shone. Maybe someone in that house had a car and gasoline, if gasoline was what she needed. She remembered that she had forgotten to have her tank filled that day. The people, however, did not have gasoline. Their own car was not at home.

She would call Peter. She could see him, sitting at his desk, a green eye-shade over his eyes, reading proof on tomorrow's editorial page. Or he might be reading a book, or writing on one. He had been trying to whip some chapters into shape for a long time. His big shoulders would be hunched over the desk, and his eyes would be narrowed and keen.

"May I use your telephone?" Barbara asked the woman at the farmhouse. It was a few seconds before she heard Peter's voice. The familiar tones were warm and comforting.

"Peter?"

"Yes, Babbs. What's up?"

"I'm out of gas, half a mile from the Junction—"

"Honey, when will you learn that a car can't run on imagination? Hold everything and I'll be right along! Oh, by the way there's a telegram for you. Just came. I'll bring it."

"No, Peter, read it to me now, Please."

"As you say, Nut!" She could hear him tearing open the yellow envelope. "Ready, Barbara?"

"Ready!"

Peter read: "Vacancy open on children's magazine. Believe you could handle it. Will you consider?" It was signed: Natalie Kendall.

Barbara was so quiet when Peter finished reading that he inquired anxiously: "Barbara, are you all right?"

"Oh, Peter, I'm grand! I'm fine and splendid and, oh, Peter, isn't it wonderful?"

"It is." Even across the miles of distance she caught the unhappiness in his tones. Then he spoke more lightly: "But where do we get another society editor?"

"I haven't gone yet," she carolled happily.

Somehow, just the knowledge that she could go if she would needed to be enjoyed by itself for a moment. Then she remembered swiftly that Peter loved her. He would want her to stay. But she didn't love him—not in that breathless way that one woman loved one man— a way that shut the rest of the world away forever and forever. No, it would be better for Peter if she left. He might not think so now but he would understand later.

Aloud she said: "Hurry, Peter. I want to touch the telegram." It would not be a tangible message until she held the yellow paper in her hand.

Although the woman in the farmhouse wanted her to wait in the lap-bright shelter of the comfortable living room, she shook her head. She must be alone for a little while to enjoy her news. Out in the wet darkness she looked at the black sky, and breathed a little prayer. Two good things had come today. A boy with rough, light hair and a smile that she would remember for a long time had passed her way. And the job of which she had dreamed had fallen into her lap. Maybe there were reasons that the job would not materialize. She was afraid to hope too far. Maybe the young man was gone forever. But things could happen! That meant much.

She was sitting by the side of the road, in the car, when Peter's long roadster swung down the main thoroughfare. She began to press the button which connected with her horn. He caught the signal and turned in.

He was rather demanding tonight. "Leave your car, Barbara. We'll send Pike for it tomorrow. I'll take you back. Got everything?"

She remembered the pictures which the train had brought down from the city and dug them out of a pocket. Then she felt the rush of cool, rain-spattered wind, as the car leaplang swiftly down the road. It was like Peter that he gave her the telegram and then said nothing more about it.

"Hungry?" he asked presently.

"No." She laughed. "But you are." All men seemed to be. "Where shall we go?"

"I skipped dinner. How about a steak?"

"If the world outside should fail you, Barbara," he began, but she stopped him.

"Thank you, Peter. I know you would help. But the world can't fail, Peter. It can't!"

A letter from Natalie came a few days later. It told more about the opening. "It isn't anything sensational, Babbs dear. But it's an amusing job on a good magazine for children. You like to write stories and the infant response on this book is terrific. Anyway, if you want to try it, there's a job as an associate editor waiting. So toss any doubts of your ability into the refuse can on Center street (I take it, it still sits there) and come on. I have two bedrooms and a terrace and a view of the East river, and the latchstring is out always."

The next day an official offer came from the magazine editor. Barbara showed it to Peter. He nodded gravely.

A little lump came into her throat. Suddenly she was afraid to go. It was safe and serene and comfortable in the Post offices. Outside the world was strange and the current swift. Outside was adventure—and somewhere, Garry Page.

She wondered if ever she would run into him. That afternoon she received a card from him. He had scrawled only a few words on it. They were gay, friendly, impersonal. He thanked her for taking him to the train. Yet the sun was brighter as it shone across the warped boards of the editorial room floor.

That night she told her aunt and cousin that she was leaving. Jealousy burned like two blue lamps in Julia's eyes and her aunt's lecture on gratitude was sweetly bitter. Yet Barbara said nothing.

One morning the postman brought a note from Garry, gay and nonsensical, but her typewriter sang as she put the disorderly alphabet in order.

Then suddenly it was 10:21, one night ,and she and Peter were waiting on the Junction platform where she had stood with Garry and the wedding party a few weeks before. The train whistled as it swung around the bend.

Peter grasped her hands. "Goodbye, Barbara. Take the old town by storm and don't forget to come home."

"Goodbye—goodbye, Peter." There were so many things she wanted to tell him but she could only stand there, clinging to his hands. Then he grinned and spoke again: "Don't forget that I love you!"

Handsome Slip Covers Are Simple to Make

Away with Shabby Furniture!

Refreshing as a spring breeze in your living-room—smart slip covers to hide worn upholstery.

What could be lovelier than a firm-textured blue and white striped cotton piped in red? Or a cool chintz patterned in plum, rose, green and white?

Making your own slip covers is a joy when you fit them the easy pin-on way. No fussing with patterns. You simply smooth material neatly over chair, following the lines of upholstery, and pin firmly every 3 inches. Leave 4-inch tuck-in between seat and back to allow for strain. Cut outside pin line, allowing 1½ inches for seams. Baste and try on.

To give your cover a trim custom-made air use zipper fasteners to close placket openings. Bind seams with a contrasting fabric or cover them with an ornamental cord that matches the color of your rug.

Follow step-by-step directions in our 32-page booklet for all kinds of practical, up-to-the-minute chair and sofa covers. Tips on materials colors, styles.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP CAVERS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

Found: A Daughter-in-Law Who Knows How to Get Along Swell With Her Mother-in-Law—Here's How She Works the Miracle.

DEAR MISS DIX—I love my mother-in-law. She is a peaeh. It is fun being with her to shop, entertain, drive and even live with her, and I have done them all. I think she feels the same way about me. This is the way we have pulled it off: When she is at our house the place is her own. She cooks and putters to her heart's content and when she goes I put things to rights and all is well. I praise her cooking and show appreciation of her help. I make her feel that she is an honored guest. In return she opens her heart and home to me, confides in me, encourages me and treats me as a daughter. I only hope when I am a mother-in-law that I treat my daughter-in-law as she treats me. A DAUGHTER-IN-LAW WHO LIKES IT.

Answer:

Fine. Would that there were more young wives who followed your example, for when the mother-in-law and daughter-in-law don't get along together it is usually a fifty-fifty proposition in which the young woman is as much to blame as the older one.

Granted that there are too many possessive mothers who can't bear to give their sons up to any other woman, there are an equal number of girls who go into marriage with a chip on their shoulders for their husbands' mothers and are ready to fight at the drop of a hat. They show no sympathy or understanding for the older women. They flaunt their power over their husbands in their faces. They make no effort to get along with them. And they regard every suggestion that they make as a deadly insult.

Every mother knows that whether she keeps her son or loses him when he marries depends entirely upon his wife's attitude toward her. Men are like putty in their wives' hand and so if the wife is antagonistic to her husband's mother, he soon begins to discover faults in Mother that he never perceived before. Besides, men don't like feminine fights and scenes, so if wife and mother quarrel and if wife is never willing to go to mother's or to have her come on a visit, it isn't long before Mother virtually passes out of the picture.

The young woman may think this a triumph, but it is a hollow victory and a costly one, because while her husband may be weak enough to give in to her for the sake of peace, he never fails to resent it in his secret heart. His love for his mother is at the very root of his being and a wife tries to destroy this at her peril. Nothing kills a man's love for his wife so quickly as for her to treat his mother badly, and nothing increases it more than for her to be good to his mother.

The mother-in-law and daughter-in-law relationship can be a very beautiful and helpful one to both and it is a pity that more women have not intelligence enough and good feeling enough to cultivate it.

DEAR MISS DIX—We are two high school girls of 16. Our home life is unhappy and we long to get away from it. We are both good looking and have talent and our friends tell us we would be just wonderful on the screen. We have met a man who knows a big movie producer and can get us a job in Hollywood. He has offered to take us with him. Would you advise us to take this opportunity? We have only known this man a very short time.

DOT AND MARG.

Answer:

I advise you to call the police instead of going off with this stranger to Hollywood. As the old melodramas used to say, "he bodes you no good." He is just trying to take advantage of your youth and unsophistication and lack of knowledge of the world. If you are idiotic enough to listen to his persuasions you will spend the remainder of your life regretting it.

There isn't one chance in a million that he ever saw a big movie producer, or that he has the slightest influence to get you inside of a single studio gate in Hollywood. If he had any way of opening the door to you, he would go to your parents and talk the matter over with them. He wouldn't steal you away from them.

And, anyway, girls, try to use a few lobes of your brains, if you have any. Don't you know that virtually every 16-year-old girl in the United States dreams about being a cinema star and that thousands upon thousands of them, better equipped that you are, trek to Hollywood every year and are turned away from the studio doors without ever having got a chance to show themselves or what they can do? Hollywood is a city of blighted hopes. If you have a good home where you have three square meals a day, stay in it, even if you do think that your parents try to keep too tight a rein on you.

* * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been going with a young man for three years and we adore each other, but his business future is not encouraging and before he can consider a wife he has to consider his mother. I have met a very attractive young man who wants me to marry him and I feel that I could grow to love him very much. If I can't have the first man, I'd like to have this one. It would be hard to give up the first, but if it is best I have the will power to do it. Should I marry the second and grow to love him, or should I wait indefinitely for the first? UNDECIDED.

Answer:

It depends upon whether you regard marriage as a business proposition or a love idyl. If you think of marriage as settling yourself in life and providing for your future, as having your own home, your own man, your own children—and certainly this is a very necessary way to look at marriage—I should say that you would be very wise to transfer your affections to No. 2.

Evidently No. 1 is a vague prospect. It may be years upon years before he is able to marry. He may never be able to marry, and a long-drawn-out engagement with no end in sight is full of the weary waiting that makes the heart sick.

But you are fortunate to have your heart so well under control that you can make it behave itself.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CHARLOTTE RUSSE

Uncle Wiggily and his fat gentleman pig friend, Mr. Twistytail, stopped in front of a jolly little hollow log house. In front was a sign which said:

MR. LONGTAIL, BARBER

"Hello!" grunted the pig. "I didn't know our little mouse gentleman friend had turned barber."

"Neither did I," said Uncle Wiggily. Mr. Longtail was a mouse gentleman, you may remember, Jollie and Jillie were his children.

"Well, let's go in and see if he can shave us," grunted Mr. Twistytail. "But, being such a little mouse of a chap I don't see how he can reach up to shave me. He might shave you by standing on a chair—but as for me, I think I must go some other place."

Has a Rime

"No, don't!" squeaked Mr. Longtail coming to the door of his shop just then. "Please don't go away. I can shave both pig and rabbit gentlemen. Why, don't you know what Mother Goose says?"

"What does she say?" asked Uncle Wiggily. Then the mouse hecited.

"Barber, barber, shave a pig. How many hairs will make a wig. Four and twenty, that's enough. Give the barber a pinch of snuff. I don't suppose," squeaked Mr. Longtail, "either of you happen to have a pinch of snuff."

"Look!"

"No," said Uncle Wiggily.

"No," said Mr. Twistytail.

"I'm glad of it," said the little mousie barber. "I never use snuff. It would make me sneeze and that would blow the lather from my customers' faces all over the shop. No, I'm very glad you aren't going to give me a pinch of snuff."

"Then why did you recite Mother Goose about it?" asked the pig.

"I had to—it's in the book," said Mr. Longtail. "Who's next now?" he asked briskly as he began to strop a razor. "Shave, haircut, face massage, shoe shine, hair tonic?"

"I want to get shaved," said Mr. Twistytail. "I can't find my razor and Wiggy's is too dull. But I don't see how you can reach up from the floor to shave me, Mr. Longtail. You are so short."

High Chair

"I'll stand on the baby high chair we had when Jollie and Jillie were little," chuckled the mouse gentleman. "Wait a minute."

"I don't see what good that's going to do," whispered the pig to the rabbit as Mr. Twistytail crept out of his shop. "The high chair of a baby mouse is sure to be very small."

"I should say so!" agreed Uncle Wiggily.

"Here we are!" cried Mr. Longtail, as he hurried back pushing in front of him, on caster wheels, a little mouse baby high chair. "I have put stilts on the legs you see," he added. Surely enough he had and when he got up on the seat of the stilted high chair he could easily reach up to lather and shave the face of the pig who stretched out in the low barber chair. Soon the pig cleanly shaved.

"Your turn now, Uncle Wiggily," said the mouse. "I'll have to lower my high chair a bit for you as you're smaller than Twisty."

So the mouse gentleman barber got a saw and sawed off some of the stilt legs until the high chair was just right.

"Next, Uncle Wiggily!" he called. Uncle Wiggily stretched in the barber chair and Mr. Longtail spread on the white, foamy soapy lather.

Just as this was done, out in front of the shop, passed the Fox and Bob Cat. Never having taken the trouble to shave, they didn't know what it was all about. And the Fox, looking in a window said:

"Look! Uncle Wiggily has a charlotte russe cream cake on his face. I'm going in and get it and get him!"

And in the next story—Uncle Wiggily shaves the Fox—I'll tell you what happened if you don't let the coal man start a fire in the goldfish bowl.

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE UNBALANCED PAIR

WHILE NOT arguing for the principle, it is only candid to report that better players of the cards try to become declarers when they have poor players as partners. This results in some queer bidding and therefore some queer contracts. You even see five-card suits rebid a couple of times. Such tactics occasionally bring about interesting play, when the declarer has to do the best he can with a moth-eaten trump suit.

	♠ K 5 4 3 ♥ 7 4 ♦ A 7 4 2 ♣ Q J 4
♠ 10 9 6 ♥ K 10 9 ♦ Q J 10 6 ♣ 7 5 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ Q 8 7 ♥ A Q 8 ♦ 9 5 3 ♣ K 9 8 6
	♠ A J 2 ♥ J 8 6 5 2 ♦ K 8 ♣ A 10 3

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

South started the bidding on this deal, third hand, with a 1-Heart bid, which West passed and North responded with 1-No Trump. South now called 2-Hearts and when North again bid no trump, South rebid his hearts for the third time, whereupon North took the contract to 4-Hearts.

When the diamond Q was led, South won with the K, and immediately realized he was playing with a very sad looking trump suit. However, he decided to take the bull by the horns and lead trumps out, with the hope that the distribution of the opponents would be three-three. West won the first heart trick and returned the diamond J to the A. Declarer led a second trump and ruffed the diamond that was offered. A third heart lead cleared trumps. East returned a club, which declarer let ride to the J, finessed the spade J and won the remaining tricks.

Queen Alexandra H. & S. Religious Education Meeting.

A large turnout of members of Queen Alexandra Home and School Association were present in the kindergarten room last evening for the 'Religious Education' meeting which proved intensely interesting and instructive. Mrs. L. M. Richardson, the president, was in the chair.

The program commenced with an outline of the life of Isaac Watt by Mrs. J. Cridland, with word pictures of three of his well-known hymns. Four surpliced choristers, Dave and Bob Reynolds, Clayton Selkirk and Wallace Smith sang the hymns as they were discussed, with Mrs. J. S. Reynolds accompanying at the piano.

A talk on the junior Horticultural Society in the schools was given by Dr. A. J. Madill, with a practical demonstration of proper methods of planting etc.

The chief speaker of the evening was the Rev. E. W. Young of St. Andrew's Church whose subject, "The Relationship of the Church to Education as it Applies to the World" included the report from the conference held at Oxford of representatives from all the Protestant churches. The main findings of the conference included the trend away from religion, the breaking up of institutions powerful for generations, and the weakening of family ties. The importance of new factors, such as radio and movies, that are affecting education, was discussed. One bright spot, is the tendency to look on education as applying to more than the intellect, and the realization of the importance of home training during the first six years of a child's life, said the speaker.

It was announced that the recreation committee will hold the Bowling Banquet in the near future, also that 'Fathers' Night' will be observed on May 9, at an open meeting. Mrs. J. S. Reynolds gave an instructive health talk on 'Relaxation.' A solo, "The Old Rugged Cross" was contributed by Mrs. Charles Foster during the meeting, which closed with a hymn.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I wonder if you have forgotten my enquiry about the herb tarragon of last July, and your kind reply to it?

A long and severe illness has prevented me from writing you again and here is the asparagus season almost ready to open and I have not sent you the recipe for a supreme accompaniment, Tarragon Butter. It is quite simple. Cross and Blackwell make the tarragon vinegar and a teaspoonful added to two tablespoons of oiled butter will please you I am sure.

I have sent for tarragon seeds as you suggested and if I am successful in raising the herb will send you a sample of it. It is used a great deal in French cookery and I have many recipes which call for it.

May I say how much I appreciate your columns and your efforts to place cookery in its proper place as a fine art.

Enclosed is a quaint old recipe which I remember seeing in my mother's cook book, 60 years ago and which may interest you. Have you the recipe for Bible Cake? I can send that you if you wish.—Edith S.

ANSWER:

Recipe for Mother Eve's Pudding

If you would have a good pudding pray mind what you are taught.
Take two pennyworth of eggs when they are 12 for a groat.
Then take of the fruit that by Eve was once chosen,
Well par'd and well chopped, at least half a dozen.
Six ounces of bread, let your maid
eat the crust;
The crumb must be grated as small as the dust.
Six ounces of currant from stones
you must sort
Lest they break on your teeth and spoil all the sport.
Six ounces of sugar won't make it too sweet,
Some salt and some nutmeg to make it complete,
Three hours let it boil without hurry or flutter
And then serve it up with wine, sugar and butter.

Not knowing the value of a groat I had to consult the dictionary before forming an opinion of Mother Eve's Pudding, as to practicability. A groat being eight cents the pudding calls for 6 eggs, and this being Easter time the recipe is well-timed. Thank you for it.

Dear Edith S.—If I can be as gracious, and vigorous and interesting as you are when I can remember 60 years back reading my mother's cook book, I shall consider myself very fortunate.

Thank you for the Tarragon and butter sauce for asparagus. It is all ready on our "Trial File" in the kitchen.

I have the recipe for Bible Cake but shall certainly look forward to the sample of Tarragon you propose sending. Do write again.

QUESTION: I want to thank you very much for the Mushroom Filling. Even though I could not use it for my party I had occasion to use it again. I must say it was simply delicious.

I wonder if you would be kind enough to give me an idea on some Lorna Doone's? Thanking you.—Miss M. P.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter. Lorna Doone's have me almost completely baffled. What are they? At first I looked through all my cookie files and indexes (or indices if you like it better) but found no clue; nor under cakes or puddings. Would you be more explicit? Maybe some of our readers will come to my help. If so, I will publish my findings. Watch the page for what may turn up.

QUESTION: Jams You Can Make Now submitted my A. M. M.

1.—Using the inviting new rhubarb: Make a thick syrup by boiling sugar and water together. Cut rhubarb into pieces half an inch long and drop into hot syrup. Cook until tender. A little later in the season strawberries may be combined with rhubarb, making a delicious preserve. Other palatable combinations are: rhubarb and pineapple, rhubarb and canned cherries.

2.—Using the large juicy oranges: Remove the pulp and juice from four oranges and combine with the pulp and juice of 2 lemons. Add 3 cups of white sugar. Boil quickly until clear and syrupy. About 10 minutes.

3.—Using dried peaches or dried apples: Wash the fruit thoroughly and soak overnight in water to cover. To each 2 cups of pulp add 2 cups brown sugar and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon. Cook until thick.

4.—Using Canned Red Cherries: Remove pulp and juice from one large grapefruit. Add 2 cups canned red cherries and 2½ cups sugar. Cook together 10 minutes then add ½ cup pectin and boil rapidly for 5 minutes.

5.—Using chopped pineapple: Mix together 3 cups chopped pineapple and juice, ¾ cup orange juice, 1 cup brown sugar. Cook until pineapple is clear and a thick syrup is formed.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Dear Friends:

I have been getting a lot of friendly kidding about those women who stand in line for hours to get into a cooking school. I also had a very witty letter from a man about this, so this will answer you "Anon" and also answer some of my friends.

Now, women are not so crazy about cooking as all that. It is the same thing in them as it is in men when they gamble on horseraces, or with cards. It is the chance to get something for nothing some prize maybe, some free entertainment, a meeting with their friends with a legitimate excuse.

Women haven't money to gamble with, so they gamble with their time, thinking if they give that, they may reap some reward. Of course those who stand in line for hours are foolish to my way of thinking. My one and only visit cured me and cured me good.

I don't like to be shoved around, and believe me you are shoved around plenty. And don't think it is sour grapes, for I did get a prize in fact I got two. But I never liked them, for they always reminded me of the way the men laughed so much at the foolish women shoving and getting pushed into or out of line by policemen.

Don't think I am knocking cooking schools. You learn some good pointers, new methods, new ideas in food and table setting. But I don't like the way it is done in our neighboring city. Tickets could be paid for, a small sum to go to the poor, or the orphans, then there would not be any of this standing in line for hours in cold weather, undermining women's health.

Of course some like to see their picture in the paper, but it is a poor way to get it there if you ask me. And what you get for nothing? and I say nothing with a question mark, is seldom valued. I know I gave both of mine away.

I like the way men do things better. If they want to do a thing they don't stand in line for hours to do it. They don't line up at a bargain counter, crowded almost to suffocation to buy something a little cheaper. And when you come to think of it, any prize these women win is generally something for the home, not for themselves alone.

So, when you see women crowding in line, just remember "Anon" and all the other men who laugh so heartily at them, that maybe they get a little kick out of watching someone else do the cooking. They like also to mingle with crowds, laugh at others as well as being laughed at, and have a chance which they might never have otherwise, of winning something even if it is not for them exclusively.

Men do just as silly things, you must confess it, and after all it is men who get these things up. And how many things women do for men which are no more appreciated than going to a cooking school to win or lose.

If women seem foolish, remember there are many things they do which are not foolish by any means, and "a little folly now and then, is relished by the wisest men."

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Women's Conservative Association Holds Meeting in Paragon Hall

Interesting and instructive discussion was the keynote of the enthusiastic meeting held by the Conservative Women's Association in the Paragon Hall on Monday afternoon.

Two subjects, "Women's Part in the World Revival" and "The Definition of the Three Well-known 'Isms,' Communism, Fascism, and Naziism," were dealt with, with Mrs. J. Cridland brilliantly leading the discussions. The speaker took for her guide two splendid articles from the pen of "Dorothy Thompson" (Mrs. Sinclair Lewis) in which she affirms that if there is to be a revival in the world, it will come through the influence of women. When women realize that the object of their emancipation is not to make them more like men, but more powerfully womanly and so of greater use to men, themselves and society, this implicit demand and need of women for a world base not on mechanical but on human principals, may break through as the most important influence upon history and bring with it a revival of tolerance and humanism.

Dealing with the definition of these creeds and "isms" that are capturing the imagination of so many inhabitants of certain parts of Europe, Mrs. Cridland again quoted Miss Thompson who says that for these very "isms" flags that have flown for generations are pulled down and new ones go up, thrones totter, parliaments dissolve, leaders emerge, and songs and slogans fill the air. Each "ism" has its followers, and so the confusion grows.

Mrs. Cridland spoke lastly of our British democracy, which though far from perfect, is animated by a few fundamental ideas for the good of humanity, teaching that "laws which everyone must obey should not be arbitrarily made, that power should be divided, not concentrated, and that by communion effort we should try for improvement, but not for perfection, for perfection is the attribute of God."

Officers Elected.

Officers for the coming year were elected at the meeting, and for which Mrs. G. S. Cameron, past president, took the chair. Mrs. J. F. Strickland was re-elected as president, with the other officers as follows:

Hon. presidents, Senator Iva C. Fallis, Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. G. S. Cameron; Hon. vice-president, Mrs. Joseph Hills; 1st vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Cridland; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. Wright; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. T. Skinner; secretary, Mrs. R. E. Clarke; treasurer, Mrs. R. Cottrell; North Ward chairman, Mrs. H. Staunton; Centre Ward chairman, Mrs. J. Pickering; East Ward chairman, Mrs. D. Miller; West Ward chairman, Mrs. J. Mills; South Ward chairman, Mrs. L. F. Campbell; Claraday chairman, Mrs. W. H. Andrews.

G. K. Fraser of Burleigh Falls, president of the Men's Association, was an honored guest at the meeting, and spoke very encouraging words to the ladies, and invited them to be present at the annual Conservative meeting to be held shortly with a special speaker present.

Arrangements were made for a dance and card party in the Canadian Legion Hall on May 6, with the tickets in charge of the ward captains. It was also decided to have more frequent meetings of the Association.

Tea was served at the close from a table beautifully arranged with linen cloth, blue and crystal centerpiece and blue and white candles in silver candelabra. Mrs. Joseph Mills presided, and assistants were members of the executive.

EXPERTS FORESEE BEST WHEAT CROP PAST SEVEN YEARS

CHICAGO, April 5—(AP)—A half dozen Chicago crop experts, preparing their first estimates of 1938 wheat production in the United States, today pored over reports from hundreds of farm communities which indicated that harvest of the biggest crop in seven years, valued as high as $720,000,000, is possible.

Rain over much of the belt the past few weeks, with winter wheat ahead of normal growth and planting of spring wheat already well started, has resulted in the biggest flow of the most favorable crop reports in years.

Unofficial forecasts of total United States production ranging from 800,000,000 to $900,000,000 bushels already have been made. Although the market value of this year's indicated harvest will fall below last year's $1,000,000,000 crop, because the price is lower, it will be larger than the crops of the preceding five years.

At market new wheat now is quoted around 80 cents a bushel. On the farm it is around 65 cents. These prices are the lowest for April since 1934. A year ago wheat was around $1.26 at market.

REV. A. D. ROBB RESIGNS CHURCH

OSHAWA, April 5.—Captain the Rev. Andrew D. Robb, pastor of St. Andrew's United Church for the past six years, announced his resignation at the morning service here Sunday.

In poor health for some time, Rev. Mr. Robb stated he was retiring from active work in the ministry and applying for superannuation. He will carry on at St. Andrew's Church until the end of June, when he will take a holiday for a few months before being listed as ready for supply work. He will likely live in Toronto.

For over 43 years actively engaged in the ministry, Captain Robb served for three years in France with the Canadian Cavalry Brigade. He was ordained 39 years ago, and for three years prior to his ordination he worked in the student field.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 5 (CP).—Little hope was held to-day for recovery of Bryden J. Mackenzie, 39, Windsor, who suffered a broken neck and other injuries last night when struck by an automobile as he walked along a highway on the southern outskirts of Windsor. The driver of the car stopped momentarily, then drove on Mackenzie was walking along the pavement towards the city with his wife when the car struck him from behind. Mrs. Mackenzie said the car and another following behind stopped.

"I went up to the driver of the first car and told him he had killed my husband, and asked him for God's sake to help me," Mrs. Mackenzie said. "He replied "He's not going to die,' and then got back in his car and drove on. I didn't see him close enough to identify him."

Looking Back
On This Date

Today can be considered the anniversary of Brockville's birth as a municipality, for it was on April 5, legislature of Upper Canada passed a bill creating the police village of Brockville. The oldest municipality in Canada. Brockville is proud of its history as a pioneer in civics.

Fred Williams

Within a short time after the passage of the bill the first election was held, the property owners selecting Hon. Jonas Jones and Hon. Henry Sherwood for the east ward and Samuel Pennock and John Murphy for the west. Mr. Jones was at the time M.L.A. for Leeds and Grenville, which he had represented from 1821, and was later a judge, prominent in the historic events around Toronto in December, 1837. Henry Sherwood represented Toronto in the Canadian Assembly, 1841-54, and was attorney-general for Upper Canada and premier of the province, 1847-48. These four elected Daniel Jones as their president. Jones is notable as being the second native-born Canadian to be knighted. He went to London in 1836 on a mission concerning the Brockville Loan and Trust Co. as plain Mr. Daniel Jones but returned Sir Daniel, the reason for his thus being honor by William IV. not having been handed down to posterity.

The first act of the new councillors was to order the purchase of a fire engine and to ask for citizens to volunteer as fire protectors. They then proceeded to pass a number of bylaws, some of which are still in force, while others seem strange to modern eyes. The running of swine on the public streets was forbidden, and it was provided that "if any person or persons shall fire off or discharge any gun, musket, pistol or squib, or shall set fire to or throw any fireball within the limits of the said town, or shall play at any game of ball or knock or throw any ball for amusement in any of the streets of the said town or in front of the public ground in front of the court house," they should be fined five shillings. Fishing on the Sabbath brought a similar fine, while nothing but a jail term could punish any person found guilty of challenging another to fight in the public streets, or of "raising or making any disturbance in any place or places of public worship, or using profane oaths, cursing, execrations, drunkenness, uncleanliness or other scandalous actions."

Brockville became a town in 1849, so will years hence have a chance at another celebration, if it desires to repeat the successful centennial celebration of its police village days held in 1932.

It was on April 5, 1830, that Alexander Muir, the school teacher who wrote "The Maple Leaf Forever," was born. I wonder how many schools in Canada will today remember the creator of our "national anthem"?

OIL FIRMS FIGHT TO HIGHEST COURT

MEXICO CITY, April 5—(AP).—Foreign oil companies turned to the Supreme Court to-day in a last legal effort to recover expropriated Mexican oil holdings valued at more than $400,000,000.

The 17 British and United States companies built their appeal to the Supreme Court on the contention that President Lazaro Cardenas' expropriation decree of March 19 violated the Mexican constitution.

The companies argue that Article XXVII of the constitution authorizes only the expropriation of lands and waters in carrying out the nation's program of socialization; not personal property such as tools, plants and equipment.

Furthermore, they allege th companies were deprived of their properties, possessions and rights without due process before the courts and that no indemnification was paid at the time of expropriation.

Czechs Calling Million Drivers

PRAHA, April 5 (CP-Havas). — Czechoslovakia embarked today upon a national "motorized defence week." In co-operation with civic organizations the government appealed for creation of a corps of 1,000,000 Czechoslovak motorists capable of co-operating with the army in case of war.

Taking as its slogan "one million drivers for one million automobiles, one million automobiles for one million drivers," the committee charged with creation of "a league of motorized civilian brigades," laid plans to enlist the press, the cinemas and the services of the defence ministry in its campaign.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, April 6

A very promising state of affairs is forecast from the interesting planetary configurations. There are promises of promotion, favors and preferment from superiors and those in influential positions, all of which should enhance personal prestige and popularity. Nevertheless, there are a few signs of menacing nature, in which duplicity, fraud or misrepresentation may cause trouble. In all secret matters be vigilant, but push affairs in which young people, correspondence and writings have part. Small interest should flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a progressive and prosperous year, with personal popularity as well as prestige established. Friendship, those in important places and young folks may contribute to the happiness. Beware of deceit, contention and fraudulent transactions.

A child born on this day may be capable and ambitious, enhancing its success by its friendly and congenial disposition. It may have talent in cultural fields and have many social graces to add to its prestige.

HOT SUPPER IS SERVED BY GUILD

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 5.—A generous patronage was given the hot supper, held on Saturday in the Waverly Club rooms, under the auspices of the Women's Guild, of St. Thomas' church, the social side of the annual event being, as usual, a pleasing feature.

The president, Mrs. L. H. Winslow, welcomed the incoming guests, Miss B. M. Turner, B.A., acting as cashier. Decorations emphasized the springtime atmosphere, having been arranged by Mrs. R. A. Ford and Miss Muriel Smith, and carried out in the pale mauve, pink, and yellow fluted runners down the centre of the three long tables; the green candles burning in silver holders; and the jars of pussy willows on the mantlepiece, above the open fire, and in other places throughout the large room, as well as smaller containers of the furry branches on the tea tables.

Miss M. L. Collins was convenor for the supper, attending to all the details, while those in charge of the tables were Miss Rose Macnamara, whose assistants were Bella McCorry and Wanda Bristow; Miss Muriel Smith, with Mrs. Frank Stinson, and the Misses Margaret and Jane Simpson, as her helpers; and Mrs. J. E. Allen, whose waitresses included Mary Smith, Laureen Handley, and Helen Ellsworth. Tea was poured by Mrs. A. A. Smith.

Other helpers who looked after the making of the tea, and having the food in readiness for serving, were Mrs. H. M. Trick, Miss Mildred Wood and Miss Maud Fee.

Over thirty dollars was realized as the result of the hot supper, with expenses, however, to be deducted. Some baking that remained after all had been served, was readily disposed of to individual buyers.

ABERHART BALKS AT MANY QUERIES BY ROWELL PROBE

EDMONTON, April 5. (CP).—The views of a score of Alberta organizations on basic national problems were on the records of the Rowell commission today.

The Alberta government will present its views direct to the Dominion Government and will send copies of its proposals to the governments of the other provinces.

Completion of the government brief is expected this week.

At the commission's final session here Saturday, chairman Newton W. Rowell, revealed Premier William Aberhart had refused to answer a score of written questions submitted to him by the commission.

The Premier had also refused to allow government department heads to appear before the commission to discuss overlapping of Dominion and provincial services and the commission had declined to use its power to subpoena witnesses in its desire not to get into conflict with any provincial government, Mr. Rowell said.

No Government Brief

The chairman expressed regret at having to close the sittings without receiving a brief from the government and without having had an opportunity of discussing with members of the government the difficult problems the commission was expected to investigate.

Mr. Rowell noted that the people of the province had indicated a deep interest in the work of the commission by the number and quality of the briefs submitted, more than had been presented by public organizations of any other province.

He reviewed the unsuccessful efforts made to obtain the government's views even on a list of written questions, the Premier taking the position he was bound by the decision of the provincial legislature not to present a brief to the commission.

On the same grounds, the Premier had objected to the calling of government officials as witnesses before the commission.

"Courtesy writes all Social Letters by Hand"

says Dorothy Dix, adviser to millions

DOROTHY DIX, Public Adviser No. 1, advises millions who seek her guidance in matters of love, marriage, correct social usage, and every conceivable problem of personal conduct. She dispatches myriads of replies by individual letter or in her daily column in 200 city newspapers.

Federal Elections To Be Cleaner Less Expensive

Bill Will Make All Receipts Public, Limit Outlay, Prohibit Forcing Candidates to Pledge Policy Ahead

OTTAWA, April 6—(CP)—Cleaner and less expensive federal elections are the objectives of two bills now standing for second reading in the House of Commons.

Introduced yesterday by Hon. C. G. Power, minister of pensions and national health the measures are "an act respecting the franchise and the election of members of the House of Commons" and "an act respecting political expenditures."

The former is the general election law and will replace the Election Act and the Franchise Act of 1934, embodying the main principles of both with some changes suggested by the special committee on election and franchise which worked during the past two sessions.

The latter is a new departure and is designed to limit expenditures at elections and subject them to full publicity.

Both bills will be referred to a special committee for study along with a number of additional provisions the government will suggest adding to the Franchise and Election Act.

Special Corporations.

In the Political Expenditures Bill it is proposed that no one but specially created corporations may spend money for political purposes, either to further the election of particular candidates, the advancement of parties or groups or the passage of measures through Parliament.

These corporations may be created without cost simply by application to an official to be appointed and called the inspector-general of elections. They will be designated by number and called "Political Corporation No. So-and-So."

All money received by corporations must be deposited in special bank accounts and paid out by cheque. Returns of all receipts and expenditures must be made. Thus there

SPENCER TRIAL OPENS AT SAULT

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 6—(CP)—Vernon Spencer, 40-year-old Wixom, Mich., sportsman, pleaded "not guilty" today at the opening of his trial on a charge of murder, arising from the death of Helen Grier in a hunting lodge the couple occupied 38 miles north of the Sault last October 28.

The crown charges Spencer, one-time outfielder with New York Giants and Toronto Maple Leafs, shot the 28-year-old Pontiac, Mich., stenographer to death with a rifle found beside her body after Spencer hiked through the bush to notify Sault police of his companion's death.

Before a crowded courtroom the jury was selected quickly with the defence challenging 12 prospective jurors and the crown one. Mr. Justice C. P. McTague presided with J. L. O'Flynn crown prosecutor.

Spencer's defence was being handled by J. A. MacInnis in co-operation with W. H. Hanley of Toronto and I. D. Underwood of Pontiac.

Fair Trial For Anyone.

"Vernon Spencer is an American," said Crown Attorney O'Flynn in opening the case for the Crown. "That makes no difference in a Canadian Court. Every man should have fair trial, no matter what his creed or color and no matter where he comes from he should get the same consideration as you would give to your next door neighbor."

Reviewing the case, the Crown Attorney said that on October 16 Vernon Spencer reported to customs authorities and sought entry to Canada. He came by himself. A young lady, Helen, did not come through in his car, but came through by herself. After getting through customs Spencer picked her up and went to the hotel where they registered under a false name as man and wife from Detroit.

The following day supplies were purchased and the two started for the cottage of Dr. Holcombe at Long Lake, approximately 40 miles from the Sault.

Ireland has started a war on poachers who operate from automobiles.

'BIG SWEDE' SEEN POUNDING PATIENT FROM HOMEWOOD

GUELPH, Ont., April 6 (CP)—William Holliday, who lives about 300 yards from Homewood Sanitarium, was the first witness when a government-ordered inquiry into affairs of the sanitarium resumed here today. The inquiry, under F. H. Barlow, Master of the Ontario Supreme Court, opened in Toronto last week.

Holliday, who said he had volunteered his information and had never been connected with the sanitarium, told the commission "one day I was out in the back yard when my housekeeper's daughter started to scream and said a man was killing another man out in the road."

"A fellow had another fellow down on the road, pounding him in the face." The incident took place four years ago.

Holiday testified the man doing the pounding was a Homewood attendant known as "The Big Swede" and the man on the ground was a Homewood patient, "a slight, young fellow."

Holliday told the attendant to let the patient up. The patient told him the same attendant had broken his nose two weeks before.

Think Police Did Nothing

"Out of sympathy with the young fellow" Holliday said he called police after his housekeeper washed the patient's face of blood that kept "streaming down." The police came but Holliday believed they did nothing about the incident.

"He was absolutely pounding the face off this young fellow," Holliday said before being questioned by R. S. Robertson, counsel for Homewood.

Appealing for more co-operation in calling witnesses, Mr. Robertson said the inquiry "is not very fair as it is pursued at present. Not a single witness has been called on the other side of the case."

"Any witnesses you wish to suggest will be called by the crown counsel," Mr. Barlow replied.

Answering Mr. Robertson, Holliday said he had never reported the incident to the sanitarium because he thought the police would look after it; that he did not know Dr. Harvey Clare, Superintendent of Homewood, and that he knew the attendant only the "The Swede."

Woman Dragged By Neck

"I saw lots of things," said Holliday, re-examined by C. L. Snyder, Ontario Government counsel. Telling of seeing a woman being pushed toward Homewood by a nurse, he said: "She took the patient and put her arm around the patient's neck and dragged her along. I went out and said: 'You can't do that in this

7 Perish In Chicago As Hotel Burns

Strong Trample Weak in Mad Rush to Flee Inferno; Firemen, Battling Flames in Snowstorm, Rescue 30

CHICAGO, April 6—(AP)—Fire raging through the two upper floors of the Hotel Center today took seven lives and injured three persons including a fireman. Thirty men were rescued as firemen struggled with the blaze in a swirling snowstorm.

Three of the dead men were burned almost beyond recognition. The identity of four could not immediately be established.

Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan said the fire was started by spontaneous combustion in a third floor room in which paint, oil and rags were stored. There were 125 guests in the hotel.

The identified dead were Joseph Bento, 60; Henry Berndt, 45; Edward Hass, 40.

The Hotel Center is about a mile west of the loop. It occupies the upper three stories of an old, four-storey brick building. Nearly all the guests were men. Most were transients from the squalid West Madison street sector.

Branded a Fire Trap

Authorities said an inspection showed open stairways and open air shafts. They termed the structure a fire trap without an alarm bell.

On either side of the building were the West End and Venus hotels. The fire lapped the roofs of these structures, but caused little damage.

MARSHALL'S BULL DIES OF GASTRITIS, $15,000 O.A.C. LOSS

GUELPH, Ont., April 6 (CP).—Millhill's Ransom, the $15,000 Shorthorn bull purchased by Senator Duncan Marshall during his term as Ontario Minister of Agriculture, through donations made by a group of Ontario citizens, died here today from acute gastritis at the Ontario Agricultural College.

The bull, Dr. G. I. Christie, president of the college, said, was "well and in excellent health Monday night." The illness was noticed by a herdsman yesterday, said Dr. Christie. "Everything possible was done to save him."

Dr. Christie said that acute gastritis is an ailment which affects horses and cattle and might strike any animal.

"We have a large number of his calves, and his blood will be saved through them for the Province," Dr. Christie said.

Millhill's Ransom, centre of a storm of controversy in Ontario ever since he was purchased in Scotland two years ago, was in the limelight recently when charges were made from Toronto that the bull, as well as other animals in the imported herds, had reacted to tests for bovine tuberculosis. Other animals were said to have reacted to Bangs' disease tests.

The bull was given a clean bill of health in a statement by Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture.

A week ago today members of the Agricultural Committee of the Ontario Legislature saw Millhill's Ransom and many of his progeny when they made their annual visit to the college.

At that time the bull appeared to be in perfect health, and his appearance was praised by some of the visitors.

HINT FOREIGNERS BEHIND EPIDEMIC IN BRITISH CATTLE

LONDON, April 6 (CP-Havas)—The ministry of agriculture today pushed a drive to end an epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease as newspapers generally rejected the possibility advanced by the Daily Herald (Labor), that foreign agents were spreading the disease as an act of sabotage.

Numerous articles said such a possibility was inconceivable and said that with proper co-operation it would be possible to end the epidemic within 10 days.

Experts at the ministry of agriculture have worked 36 hours without rest, and 78 new vetefinary centres founded six days ago have worked unrelentingly against the disease. Of the 1,000 veterinary surgeons working in these centres more than half are volunteers giving their assistance without pay.

The London Gazette announced it had been necessary to slaughter 15,612 head of cattle in the first three months of this year as a result of the epidemic. This figure was three times as high as that for the same period in 1935, which was also an epidemic year. In the first quarter of the last year only 262 head of cattle were killed for this reason, and 379 in the first three months of 1936.

A new outbreak of the disease was reported yesterday from Ravensden, Bedfordshire, and movements of cattle banned in parts of Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Cambridgeshire and Northamptonshire.

Queen Mary Views Edward's Regalia

CARDIFF, Wales, April 6—(CP).—For a moment Queen Mary stood to-day before the regalia which her eldest son, the Duke of Windsor, wore when he became the Prince of Wales.

Visiting the Welsh National Museum, the Queen Mother asked especially to see the purple velvet and ermine robe with gold chaplet, sword, verge and ring in which Edward was invested in at Carnarvon.

She looked in silence, then turned away.

Stranded Four Days Cold, Foodless 25 Miles In Bush

Mother Takes 'Flu, 2 Children Badly Frost Bitten Waiting for Father to Get Aid at Trading Post

SIOUX LOOKOUT, Ont., April 6 (CP)—An airplane today rescued a family of 11 from their muskeg-mired motor car where for four days they were stranded without food. They were taken to Pickle Lake, about 50 miles east of here.

Four days ago Joseph Chenier, his wife and their family left here for Pickle Lake. They were 25 miles from their destination when the car stuck in the soft muskeg road, used infrequently by traffic in Northwestern Ontario at this time of year.

While Chenier went for help to the Hudson's Bay Company post at Osnaburgh, the family huddled in the car. They had no food and, after the car's gasoline supply was used, no warmth.

Word of their plight reached Pickle Lake yesterday by radio from Osnaburgh and Pilot Ken Smith of Starrat Airways made the rescue.

Smith said the family was suffering from hunger and cold. Two of the children were frost-bitten and Mrs. Chenier had contracted a severe case of influenza. They were placed under a doctor's care at Pickle Lake.

CAVAN FARMER IS FATALLY KICKED BY HORSE IN BARN

Kicked by a fractious horse in the barn on his farm in the 9th Concession of Cavan, Thomas Alexander Bowles, prominent farmer of Cavan Township, was almost instantly killed about 9.30 p.m. on Tuesday.

Norman A. Bowles, only son, was feeding the horse when it reared up and struck out with its front feet, knocking him down. He managed to escape from it into the manger, and then returned to the house. He discussed the incident with his father, who decided to go with him to the barn and hold the lantern while the son tied up the horse.

While Norman Bowles was trying to get control of the horse it began rearing again, and suddenly kicked out to the rear, striking the father and knocking him to the floor of the barn.

Happened in a Flash.

"I think something father struck when he fell made it worse, because I didn't think the horse's kick was heavy enough to be fatal," Norman Bowles told The Examiner to-day. "It all happened in a flash. My father didn't speak or regain consciousness, He died almost instantly."

The Bowles farm is situated about a mile west of the Peterborough-Port Hope Highway on the road that extends to Bethany and Port Perry. Thomas A. Bowles had lived there for fifty-three years. He was born 81 years ago a half-mile west of Springville, where his home had been for the first twenty-eight years of his life. He was one of the best known farmers in Cavan Township, and had always been especially interested in horses.

Mr. Bowles is survived by his widow and one son, Norman A. Bowles, at home, and one daughter, Miss Amy Bowles of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence to the Presbyterian Cemetery at Centreville. Rev. Mr. Williams of Millbrook will conduct the service.

FIGHT GREETS MOSLEY

LONDON, April 6. (AP).—Twelve persons were arrested last night after a free-for-all fight following an open air meeting of British Fascists.

Oswald Mosley, leader of the Fascist group, addressed a crowd of 3,000 just before the trouble began. One woman was cut severely and another woman was taken to a hospital suffering body injuries.

Slap In The Face Puts M.P. To Bed

LONDON, April 6—(CP Cable)—Commander Robert Bower, who was slapped on the face by a Labor member in the House of Commons Monday, today sent a letter to John Busby, Conservative candidate in the West Fulham by-election.

"I had hoped to come to help but am confined to bed with considerable pain," Commander Bower wrote. "I have asked Mrs. Bower to say that Monday's incident in the House is an example of what may occur if the Socialists get into power in this country."

Voting in the by-election is today. Mr. Busby is opposed by Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor.

MACKINAC OPEN

CHICAGO, April 6. (AP).—United States coast guard headquarters reported yesterday the cutter, Escanada, had completed its annual spring task of opening the ice-bound Straits of Mackinac to navigation. Officials here said R. J. Mauerman, commander of the cutter, radioed that "little or no ice" was encountered in a two day passage of the straits, a passage which in former years, when ice conditions were heavier, required a week.

GALT, Ont., April 6 (CP).—Lawrence G. Walter pleaded guilty today to three charges of theft from the mails, totalling about $80, and was given three years concurrent terms in Kingston Penitentiary.

Walter, a clerk in the Post Office for several years, was arrested last night Postal officers who investigated, sent decoy letters and arrest of Walter followed.

BACKED TO SEA LOYALISTS TURN ON REBEL ARMY

Three-Day Battle Rages On Tortosa's Outskirts

HENDAYE, France, April 6. — (AP).—A furious battle for possession of Tortosa increased in intensity to-day as heavily reinforced armies of both sides pounded each other in the third day of the Spanish insurgent attempt to take the Ebro river delta town.

Stubborn government resistance in the last scrap of territory barring Genedal Franco's soldiers from the Mediterranean coast surprised the insurgent command which hurried new motorized divisions from Alcaniz and Gandesa.

During the night, when insurgent bombers were unable to see their objectives, government militiamen counter-attacked and drove the insurgents out of several positions conquered yesterday in hand-to-hand fighting.

Insurgent dispatches to Irun said the battle of Tortosa was the fiercest yet fought on the seaward drive that began March 9. They said communications between Barcelona and the rest of government Spain already were effectively cut by the fire of General Franco's big guns playing upon the coastal highway to Valencia.

The insurgents' usual manoeuvre of surrounding a city before conquering it was wrecked when wave after wave of militiamen, throwing light flares and then hand grenades, drove back insurgent units which yesterday were reported "at the gates" of Tortosa.

Loyalists Begin Massing.

To the right and left of the insurgent spearhead strong Government reinforcements were reported massed behind the rocky barriers of four small mountain chains in a last line of defence before the Ebro River Delta.

To the right, in sight of the Mediterranean, General Franco's troops had a foothold in the Razas and Montenegrelo Mountains. The left flank positions in the Gardo and Burga Mountains still were held by the Government.

In the northern sector, insurgent pressure was aimed at Balaguer, 14 miles north-east of Lerida and uppermost end of the government's new defence line before Barcelona.

The new government resistance around Tortosa came just after General Franco, addressing a Cabinet meeting at Burgos yesterday, said the end of the war could be expected within a short time. The key to all Catalonia, the general said, had fallen into insurgent hands with the taking of Lerida, the successes along the Segre River and the advance along the Ebro.

The Cabinet approved a law setting aside the Catalonian autonomy statute and giving Catalonia equality in government with other sections of Spain. Antonio Mola, cousin of the late General Emilio Mola who died in an airplane crash on the Bilbao front last year, was appointed civil governor of Teruel, and Luis Ventillo Berger was named civilian governor of Lerida.

MAC-PAP FIGHTERS HOLD LINE AGAIN

NEW YORK, April 6 (CP). — A dispatch to the New York Times from its correspondent at Barcelona announced today that about 100 members of the Canadian Mackenzie-Papineau Battalion of the International Brigade had been accounted for following the insurgent offensive towards Tortosa, near the Mediterranean.

The dispatch, which said other almost surely would turn up in the next few days, told how the Mac-Paps helped hold up the insurgent offensive outside Tortosa for a day, permitting the withdrawal of thousands of Government soldiers in safety.

"There were hardly more than 150 men who performed that feat," the dispatch said, "and 50 of them were Mac-Paps. They took up a position on a ridge completely dominating the Tortosa highway. The insurgents cut loose at them with everything they had, which meant heavy and light artillery, tanks in waves and columns of men. But the defenders beat back everything."

Leads Forming Neutral Bloc Baltic To Black Sea As Barrier To Russia

NEW YORK, April 6—(AP)—There are many signs that, while Adolf Hitler proposes to push his Germanic confederation, he intends also to cultivate a selected group of nations which will profit from his patronage.

Ancient and battle-scarred Poland would appear to be one country which has hitched its wagon to Der Fuehrer's mounting star. By the same token the sophisticated Warsaw, apparently has grown cool toward France, her once close friend. The French ambassador has left Warsaw for what is described at his embassy as "an indefinite period."

When Hitler was in process of absorbing Austria, he was anxious to distract attention from the operation. He was favored with a diversion of world interest through Poland's ultimatum to Lithuania. More recently when pressure was applied to Czechoslovakia, Poland followed suit in connection with Communistic activities.

Most important is the announcement that Poland will take the lead in forming a "neutral" block of nations between Russia and Germany. This coalition would reach from the Baltic to the Black Sea, and would include Finland, Estonia, Latvia,

Repercussions Of Jap Invasion Show In Chinese Trade

Both Foreign Firms And Nipponese Hard Hit—Tobacco, Oil, Lead In Slump

SHANGHAI, April 6—(AP). — Business reports emphasized to-day the cumulative repercussions of the war upon Chinese trade as Japanese continued their push in Shantung Province toward the Lunghai Railway. Foreign firms' trade has slumped sharply. Japanese business in occupied areas is reported to be less than normal.

The Timmonsville Leaf Tobacco Company, an American concern, became the first foreign company to file notice of suspension of business in China. Business of most tobacco companies is described as seriously impaired by destruction of factories, warehouses, and stocks, inability to trade with the interior, and limiting by the Central Chinese Government of the amount of foreign exchange made available to Shanghai.

The oil business also has dwindled and is faced, besides, with a possible Japanese Government oil monopoly such as took over the business in Manchoukuo. A decline in kerosene consumption throughout the interior was attributed to the poverty-stricken condition of farmers, many of whose homes and crops have been destroyed.

THE arrival of spring helped bring John Guay into court today. "It is spring; he was in love; he was jealous," his lawyer explained as he told why the 23-year-old John had intimidated his girl friend. Pleading guilty, Guay was put under bond to keep the peace for a year.

Be Calm With Bee Says Professor And Maybe It Won't Sting

Windsor, April 6—(CP)

BE nonchalant in the presence of a bee, and the chances are it won't sting you, Dr. E. J. Dyce, professor of agriculture of the Ontario Agricultural College, told a service club here last night. Dr. Dyce warned that a mere flicker of an eye lash may arouse a bee's curiosity, and lead him to "sit down" on one's face.

With summer picnics coming on, it is worthwhile remembering that grasping the stinger of a bee to pull it from the skin merely squeezes a syringe that squirts poison farther into the flesh, increasing the irritation, said Dr. Dyce. Snipping off the end of the stinger cuts short the depth of the sting and amount of poison injected.

MOVE FOR HOIST ON POWER PACTS IS BEATEN 62-24

TORONTO, April 6. — (CP).— With just two days remaining before scheduled prorogation, Ontario legislators prepared to-day for an intensive drive to clear up the order paper and pass estimates of expenditure for the 1938-39 fiscal year. Only one item of expenditure has been voted and money is needed quickly to carry out government activities for the year which opened April 1.

The House turned to a long list of miscellaneous legislation after giving second reading to a bill validating new contracts with Quebec power companies, replacing agreements cancelled in 1935. Conservatives failed to have the bill stand over until the Legislative Investigating Committee starts its Hydro probe May 2.

Opposing immediate passage of the bill validating the agreements with the Gatineau, Beauharnois and Maclaren-Quebec Power Companies, George S. Henry, former Conservative premier, moved the 'hoist' amendment late yesterday after a lengthy debate. It was defeated 62-24. A. W. Roebuck, former Attorney-General and Hydro Commissioner, voted with the Conservatives.

Forest Hill's Hopes Dashed.

After disposing of the Hydro bill, the House dashed visions of Forest Hill village and York township of becoming two new cities on Toronto's borders. Forest Hill's application had been approved previously by Private Bills committee along with a measure giving York township permission to seek Municipal Board approval for incorporation as a city.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, however, suggested action be deferred pending appointment of a commission to investigate the whole problem of Toronto's suburban area. He was uncertain whether annexation to Toronto would provide the solution.

More Study Required.

David A. Croll (Lib. Windsor-Walkerville) withdrew his Bill to ban marriage of persons suffering venereal disease after Health Minister Kirby suggested a thorough study by the Health Department because of the Bill's drastic nature. He approved of the principle of the measure.

Conservative Leader Leopold Macaulay made an unsuccessful effort to have Mr. Roebuck included on the 12-man committee to probe Hydro matters. Mr. Roebuck in turn criticized the body, said he

FORTS AT HALIFAX BEEN BOLSTERED

OTTAWA, April 6.—(CP).— Defences at the fortress of Halifax had been strengthened instead of weakened in recent changes, Defence Minister Mackenzie told the House of Commons yesterday. Nothing had been done to impair the defences of the garrison city.

Replying to a question from Gordon B. Isnor (Lib. Halifax), the minister said a despatch from Halifax, carried by The Canadian Press declaring the city was "being stripped rapidly of any semblance of defence against war-time attackers" was "absolutely crowded with the most glaring inaccuracies."

"Not only have the defences at Halifax not been weakened in recent days, but they have been actually strengthened," the minister said. "More guns of heavy calibre have been moved to the vicinity of Halifax than have been taken away from there.

"Certain guns which were under allotment or under reserve for some years have been moved from the district, but I can assure the honorable member, both with reference to guns and to munitions, that nothing whatsoever has been done to impair the effective defences of Halifax city.

"The reference in the despatch to 90 naval families being transferred is also equally untrue. I only express my personal regret that The Canadian Press saw fit to carry that despatch which several journals refused to print without investigation at headquarters here in Ottawa."

The despatch, carried Monday, quoted the Halifax Chronicle as saying the department was removing guns from Halifax to strengthen the defences on the Pacific coast.

Scarlet Fever Hits Village Of Madoc

(Special to the Examiner)

MADOC, April 6. — Two new cases of typhoid fever are reported in the village and vicinity. One of those who have contracted the disease is Orley Bennett, 15, only son of the late Lyman Bennett who died from the same cause a week ago.

Several private wells have been tested and condemned as not fit for use, and the outside wells at both the High and Public Schools have also been banned. Placards have been posted warning the students not to drink the well water.

POWER BILL STIRS SENATE MEMBERS TO HEATED DEBATE

OTTAWA, April 6 (C.P.). — The Government Power Bill transferring the authority to grant export power licences from the Cabinet to Parliament will be considered by the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee.

The Bill precipitated a heated debate in the Senate yesterday before it was referred to the committee and Conservative Leader Meighen charged the measure was an attempt on the part of the Government to evade its responsibility.

He said that the Board of Railway Commissioners or some such body should have been named as the licensing authority. As the Bill now stands, the Government has merely asked Parliament to take from the administration a difficult subject which it does not know how to handle.

Senator Meighen stated he was opposed to the Bill but not to the principle of power export under all conditions. The proper thing to do was to determine what the proper conditions were and delegate the whole matter to an adequate administrative body.

To support the Bill could only be justified as an attempt to help the Government out of a situation it did not know how to deal with.

Dandurand Defends.

Defending the Bill, Government Leader Dandurand drew the Senate's attention to its consistency with a measure approved by the House of Commons in 1929. This had been a guiding principle which the Government has been obliged to take cognizance of.

Senator Dandurand recalled that as far back as 1907 the late Sir Robert Borden had stated that the Cabinet was not the proper body to issue licences due to its partisan character.

Answering the Government Leader, Senator Meighen said Sir Robert had opposed the Cabinet issuing licences, but he had not contemplated the Government transferring the authority to Parliament. He had in mind the Railway Commission. All objections raised by Sir Robert against the Cabinet applied with much greater force against Parliament.

country,' and she let go of her, and the girl walked on straight ahead."

That had happened 20 years ago, Holliday testified, and he knew of no other such incidents recently.

Holliday's housekeeper, Kathleen Johnson, said when she came to Canada 13 years ago, she worked at Homewood one year "on ward work."

"During the time I was in Homewood I did see some terrible things happen."

"It's pretty far back," said Mr. Barlow, when Mr. Snyder questioned whether reference should be made to what Miss Johnson saw 13 years ago. "I don't think we can go into things as far as that."

The commissioner asked how long Dr. Clare had been at Homewood, and was told 13 years.

Miss Johnson also described the scene between "the Big Swede" and the patient. She testified the attendant stopped beating the patient when Mr. Holliday threatened to use a hoe on him.

"As far as you know the sanitarium authorities never heard of this until today?" Mr. Robertson asked.

"They must have known," Miss Johnson replied. "The police went in."

Ernest Gavin, Homewood attendant since October, 1935, said he was in the section of the sanitarium, a section for unruly patients, where Angus McIntosh had been. McIntosh, Montreal importer and former Homewood patient, testified at the sittings in Toronto.

"Did you ever see McIntosh unruly?" Mr. Snyder asked.

Called a Vile Name

"On one occasion an attendant, Wilding, called him a vile name and McIntosh chased him off the floor," said Gavin. He had never had any trouble with McIntosh and he never saw him receive any treatment outside of an electric lamp on his back.

Gavin said he was employed in a rubber factory before going to Homewood. He had received no special instruction and after a "couple of days" on the wards he became a special attendant. He had no previous nursing experience.

Gavin said he knew an attendant named William White, a night special for a patient in ward A4.

Once, Gavin said, White told him the patient had been taken to ward A2 one night because he had been "very noisy." In A2 they tried to restrain the patient. Wilding sought a piece of rope but finally found a pair of handcuffs.

"From what I understand he (Wilding) put the handcuffs on him," Gavin testified. The patient's wrists were bruised badly.

On another occasion Gavin said the patient told him that while putting on a "pack" an attendant "pricked him with a pin."

Regarding another patient, described as a "very frail old man," Gavin said he thought the man was critically ill one night and he asked Wilding, the supervisor, to get a doctor. The request was repeated but no doctor came.

"Coming on morning Mr. Wilding came in with the necessary equipment for the undertaker and laid it on the window sill."

While assisting Wilding once with a patient whom Gavin understood had became violent., Wilding struck the patient in the face. Gavin related other facts about the case to Mr. Barrow in private.

Gavin testified one patient, whose bedding was not clean, had his hair down to his shoulders and Gavin never saw him wearing clothes. Another patient was in a room where there is no toilet. During the time he was on the ward he saw a doctor go to the patient only once or twice.

Col. Thomas Vien, counsel for McIntosh, asked: "Was there proper medical care given to patients?"

No Doctor in 2 Months.

"In this case there wasn't," Gavin said in reference to the man with the long hair. "The doctors make their visits each evening, but for two or three months no doctor came to one ward."

Drugs, he said, were kept in the ward kitchen. Patients were "often" given sedatives, liquor was given only under doctor's orders.

"One patient died from an overdose of drugs," Gavin said.

"I was working on this particular ward. This patient was found unconscious one night sitting in his room. They looked around, discovered some drugs over the transom of the door."

Gavin said a coroner investigated but there was no inquest. He did not know where the drugs came from.

Gavin told Col. Vien he could not see anything wrong with McIntosh while the importer was in the institution.

"Was there anything in his behavior to indicate he was mentally ill?" Col. Vien asked.

"He never showed me anything like that," said Gavin, who described McIntosh as "co-operative and helpful."

He saw McIntosh with a "bad vomiting spell" on two or three occasions. McIntosh blamed something he had for supper" for his illness, said Gavin, who thought meals at Homewood were "very poor."

Never Took Money

Questioned by Mr. Robertson, the attendant said he talked to McIntosh recently in Hamilton in the office of Albert Marck, representing McIntosh. Gavin testified he never received any money from McIntosh or Marck. He had signed affidavits in Hamilton.

"There were conditions I thought should be made known at this enquiry," Gavin said.

Under questioning by Mr. Robertson, he said he meant attendants' meals were poor, not the patients. He was not positive of the identity of the coroner mentioned in connection with the patient who died.

"You and Wilding have not been on very good terms?" Mr. Robertson asked.

"We speak," Gavin replied as the inquiry adjourned. "He is not a man you can be sociable with."

NEW HEAT SYSTEM OPERATES WEEKS MINUS ATTENTION

PITTSBURGH, April 6 (AP).— The head of the house, weary after a season of coal stoking, can look forward to another winter when he won't have to fire the furnace more than once a fortnight, the Mellon Institute reported today.

Dr. E. R. Weidlein, director, at the end of the Institute's first year in its spacious $6,000,000 home, told trustees of the development of anthracite heating equipment that operates "for weeks at a time" without attention.

He told, too, how 21 scientists had spent $962,830 in the year on scientific research on things ranging from shirt collars to dish washing.

Pointing to the possibilities of combining heating plants with other household utilities, and of using basements for recreation and other purposes, he said:

"Installations of anthracite heating equipment are now operating for weeks at a time. Without any attention whatever to the fuel supply, ash removal, or damper settings."

Much attention, he said—noting that "there seems to be sparse scientific information on the subject"—is being devoted to "possible uses for anthracite ashes, from which strong and attractive building materials have been produced experimentally."

Having investigated flaws in collar materials, the Institute now has underway a study of means to improve the wearing qualities of shirts, ties and various articles of clothing.

LOST HIS HORSE ALSO FINED $2.00

As an aftermath of an accident on the Warsaw-McCracken's Landing road in which a horse was killed and its owner had a close call from death when a motor car crashed into a horse and buggy, E. W. Anderson of Dummer was charged in traffic court before Magistrate Langley this morning with driving a horse-drawn vehicle that did not carry a tail light at night.

Mr Anderson pleaded guilty, informing the court that he had visited Warsaw on the day in question and had been detained there until after nightfall. He had taken a chance on driving home without a light on his buggy. "My horse was killed" he told the magistrate.

A fine of $2 and $2.50 costs was imposed.

Most of the residents were asleep when the fire started. Panic stricken, they fought and struggled with each other to reach safety through the narrow corridors.

"Some of the survivors told of seeing weaker men trampled underfoot in the mad rush," said Marshal Corrigan. "Several men climbed from their windows and hung to the sills until they were rescued. A few dropped from the second or third floors."

$15,000 Damage

At the two adjoining hotels 250 guests, many of them in night clothes, fled to the street. Some sloshed about in the wet snow barefooted until they found shelter in nearby homes.

Fire Marshall Michael Corrigan, who estimated the damage at $15,000, said the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion in a room where paints, oils and rags had been stored.

Earl Lyons, the hotel clerk, said he heard someone cry "Fire!"

"Before I realized what was the matter," he told firemen, "the upper floors were aflame."

Thinks Hitler Honest.

One important purpose of such a bloc would seem to have been disclosed by Count Potocki, Polish ambassador to Washington, who said Hitler's intentions were honest, and added that Poland wouldn't allow Soviet troops to cross her territory to attack Germany.

Another and vital reason from Poland's standpoint is that such a bloc would make her an economic and political power. These countries include great riches in industry, agriculture and natural wealth. They also represent military strength, for Poland and Rumania have strong armies.

This bloc, assuming that it is subordinate to Germany, would fit in nicely with Hitler's program. Any idea that he intends to annex neighboring countries wholesale finds no support in facts thus far in evidence. He presumably wishes to absorb the Germanic populations, and also may reach for the Russian Ukraine, but most observers believe he intends to avoid trying to assimilate foreign races.

SCORELESS CUP TIE

EDINBURGH, April 6—(CP Cable).—Extra time failed to settle the semi-final Scottish Football Cup issue between East Fife and St. Bernards to-day. Playing their second game at Tynecastle Park to determine which will meet Kilmarnock in the final, April 23, the second division teams battle to a 1-1 overtime tie. Neither side had scored at the end of the regulation 90 minutes.

DRIVERS CLAIM STREETS ARE NOT PROPERLY MARKED

Is Chambers street clearly marked as a non-parking area for automobiles? Under a municipal by-law is a man responsible for an offence committed by his wife? Has the prosecution the right in a non-criminal action to call a defendant to give evidence against himself?

These are three interesting points that arose in a case in traffic court this morning and Magistrate Langley reserved judgment for a week.

D. V. Ketcheson, charged with parking in a prohibited area, Chambers street, had pleaded not guilty last week and the case was proceeded with this morning with City Solicitor Wilfrid Huycke, K.C, prosecuting.

E. A. Outram, deputy city clerk, was called to prove the by-law under which the charge was laid.

City Traffic Officer Wm. A. Clark testified that on March 18 he had seen a car with a license number 385R-I parked at the south end of Chambers street at 2.45 o'clock in the afternoon and had put a ticket on the machine. Clark said that there was a traffic arrow at the north end of Chambers street, two no parking signs 100 feet apart in the middle of the block and another traffic arrow at the Hunter street end.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ketcheson, the witness said there was nothing at either end of the street to tell a stranger that no parking was permitted.

Traffic Officer Archie Menzies corroborated Clark's evidence in regard to the four signs on the street. The no parking signs could not be read from the end of the street, he said in cross-examination.

Proving Ownership.

The prosecution was about to close its case when Magistrate Langley pointed out that the ownership of the car had not been proved and he would therefore have to dismiss the case.

Mr. Huycke said that Mr. Ketcheson had admitted ownership and he proposed to call him to testify to that effect.

"You are willing to take the responsibility?" asked Magistrate Langley.

The city solicitor replied in the affirmative and Mr. Ketcheson took the stand and promptly admitted the car in question was his property.

H. J. Tudhope was the first witness called for the defence, and testified as to the signs on Chambers Street. He said that the no parking signs were just visible from the corner of the street but could not be read from there. He had noticed that one sign was just outside the old Examiner office and the other in front of the Canada Bread depot, and the impression strangers might get was that parking at those particular spots was forbidden.

Mr. Ketcheson, testifying on his own behalf, stated that he had parked his car on Chambers Street for years, and until this prosecution arose he did not know that it was a restricted area for parking purposes. He had not noticed the signs in the centre of the block. On the day in question the car had been parked on Chambers Street by his wife. Mr. Ketcheson said that he usually backed his car into Chambers Street from the south and stopped just at the Hunter Street corner.

The Defence Argument.

Arguing his own case, Mr. Ketcheson pointed out that the bylaw could not be enforced until proper signs clearly indicating the no parking restrictions had been erected, and maintained that the signs there do not clearly indicate that parking anywhere on the street is forbidden.

City Solicitor Huycke argued that the two no parking signs were sufficient for one short block. It was unreasonable that municipalities should be expected to put up half a dozen signs in a block, he said.

Magistrate Langley said that he would reserve judgment for a week as there were several points he wished to consider. One was whether under the bylaw a man could be held responsible for an act committed by his wife. Under the Highway Traffic Act he could so be held, but the charge was laid under a city bylaw. Again, the action of calling the defendant to give evidence against himself was a debatable point. It could not of course be done under the Criminal Code, but this was not a criminal action. Finally there was the question of whether the signs on Chambers Street clearly indicated that no parking was permitted along the whole street.

A similar case against H. J. Tudhope was also adjourned for a week.

Find Cause Of Heart Trouble In High Pressure Workers

Nerves Produce Too Much Acetyl Choline—Involved In Stomach Ulcers Also

NEW YORK, April 6. (CP).—Dr. George Edward Hall of Toronto's Banting Institute reported to the American College of Physicians today his discovery of the cause of coronary thrombosis, the heart trouble which afflicts high pressure workers.

The disease comes from too much acetyl choline, a chemical the nerves produce to make muscles move when the "motor centre" of the brain transmits an impulse for movement.

Dogs at the department of medical research, University of Toronto, were given coronary thrombosis by the simple expedient of injecting into their blood daily small quantities of acetyl chorline. These experiments were performed by Dr. Hall and witnessed by the group of physicians who gave insulin to the world as a treatment for diabetes.

Dogs' nerves use acetyl choline the same as humans, and the excess of the chemical made them nervous. They apparently were under the same sort of strain as those executives, leaders and professional men who drive their nerves to the point of exhaustion.

Starts Like Indigestion

In the dogs, after only a few weeks, this kind of nervousness caused blockage of some of the arteries which supply blood for the ceaselessly-moving muscles of the heart. This blockade is the well known cause, in men, of coronary thrombosis. It may act at first like acute indigestion and often is followed by spasms and death.

The dogs which induced coronary thrombosis acted, and died, exactly like other dogs which had real coronary disease.

So it was concluded that this type of human heart trouble comes from too much nervous strain and that the mechanism may be due to the nerves releasing too much acetyl choline.

The acetyl choline experiments turned up one surprise result—ulcers of the stomach. These appeared in two young dogs which were taking injections of the chemical.

This seeming accident went far to strengthen the general belief that stomach ulcers come to a large extent from nervous strain.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Liquor and gambling appears to have been your weakness, Magistrate F. W. Walker said in passing sentence.

CAMPBELLFORD

NOMINATIONS HELD FOR ROTARY CLUB

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 6.—Nominations were held at the Monday meeting of the Rotary Club held in the St. Lawrence Hotel when each of the members placed names of four members on a ballot from which a new president, secretary-treasurer, and board of directors will be elected at the first meeting in May. Rev. Harold B. Neal headed the poll with E. C. Dolman second and S. A. Maguire and A. J. Asmour third and fourth respectively. The other three whose names were offered all received the same number of votes.

Dr. H. B. Longmore suggested the club should do something for the bantam hockey team in recognition of their having won the Nixon Trophy and although several of the members offered suggestions as to an appropriate gesture to the boys, the matter was finally left in the hands of the committee.

More about the district conference at Elmira, N.Y., was read by Secretary Edge Dolman, and at least four of the members intimated their intention to attend.

Hard To Understand

When the Rowell Commission completed its work in Alberta it had to admit its inability to secure anything from the Alberta government. Premier Aberhart refused to answer a number of questions submitted to him; refused to allow any members of departments to appear before the commission, and in a general way officially snubbed the entire affair. His explanation is that anything which comes from the Alberta government will be forwarded directly to the Dominion government. And it might not be out of the way to suggest when such material is forwarded it should be returned to the man who sent it.

Hon. N. W. Rowell could be trusted to place any questions in a tactful way. He would have power to compel witnesses to attend and answer questions, but he preferred not to exercise it. The reason why he would want to ask certain questions in Alberta would be to ascertain to what extent there was overlapping between provincial and federal governments in the working of certain departments. The same information has been sought elsewhere and gladly given.

The report of the Rowell commission cannot recommend how defects in government can be cured if the commission is not officially made aware of where the defects exist, and that is exactly the information which was being sought in Alberta. Courtesy alone would have suggested that Premier Aberhart should open the official door and extend needed co-operation when the commission asked for it.

Better Leave It Alone

The claim was made in the Ontario Legislature that when a member went abroad and presented his card with the letters M.L.A. on it he had to follow up with an explanation of what it meant, and that was an elaborate process. It was necessary to explain the whole system of government as we have it in this country. Therefore the argument was that members of the Legislative Assembly should be entitled to use the M.P. designation.

How many members of the legislature have been thus inconvenienced and disturbed when wandering around the world was not stated, but doing the necessary explaining would at least be a nice way to start a conversation in a far-off country. It would give the member opportunity to pose as a bit of an authority on systems of government in general.

The people at home are entitled to first consideration. Here we understand what M.L.A. means. No one has to do a bit of explaining and that makes it very plain and easy. If all the members of the legislature were to become known as M.P. then our present system of keeping a line between provincial and federal members would be wiped out. Instead of a spell of explaining when in some far-off land it would be necessary to do a heap of it right here at home.

Hard Thing To Do

Often enough we have been told we should seek to imitate the British method of doing this, that and something else. And as a rule we believe such advice to be sound. But now and then they do some odd things in the Mother of Parliaments in London. Emanuel Shinwell, 53, a Labor member, was making an address, when he was subjected to an interruption by Commander Robert Taton Bower, a Conservative. Mr. Shinwell thereupon walked across the floor of the House and struck Bower a resounding smack on the cheek with his open hand.

And then what happened? Not a thing. Commander Bower, who is well over six feet and who in his navy days was a heavyweight boxer, was evidently not moved to action for he never stirred from his seat. Shinwell left the House but returned to apologize, his apology admitting he had acted in a fit of temper, but claiming he had been insulted. Commander Bower in reply said he would have been ready at any time to have apologized for any insult he had offered, and had no intention of offering an insult in his remarks.

And there the incident closed largely because the man who was struck—to use a common enough phrase—"could take it." He was and is powerful enough to have attended to the man who slapped him, but he was so thoroughly in control of himself that he realized it was not the proper thing to do. They are a great lot of people who sit in the British House of Commons. We would not recommend that our rulers proceed to walk across the floor of the house and smack opponents with the open hand or the closed fist, but we rather lean toward the point of open admiration for the man who could act as Commander Bower did under such extreme provocation. We doubt if there are many men possessed of sufficient self restraint to act as he did.

Does Her Own Work

Here is something which seems to be pretty much all right. Mrs. John Gasparotti was asked to come to New York to be the centre of attraction at a party where she was presented with a prize of $10,000 for having written the best novel of the year, "Young Doctor Galahad." She had never been in New York before; had no desire to stay there; did not believe a person could write any better in New York than elsewhere.

In her writing this woman uses her maiden name Elizabeth Seifert; she is the mother of four children; she does her own housework, and had worked on her book if and when she found the time to do so. She is certain no special training is required for writing, and believes "you'll write somehow if you have it in you."

There is much in all that which we like. Too often people who write books are pictured as living in attics; walking up and down looking for atmosphere; gazing into the sky searching for inspiration. The moving pictures generally have them as being hungry and often enough wrap a wet towel about the head when the pressure becomes too great.

But there is this woman of 40, with a family of four children, and she won the $10,000 award. Often enough with an apron, perhaps a dab of flour on the end of the nose, familiar with broom and duster, doing her own work—and breaking in now and then to add a little more to the novel which was considered the best of the year. We're glad to hear such a writer won $10,000.

Something About Wolves

Steward Murphy was in the Examiner office with a wolf pelt. Mr. Murphy lives on the north-east edge of Stoney Lake, and it was near his own home where the wolf was taken. The animal weighed 80 pounds and from tip-to-tip was seven feet.

Speaking of the habits of wolves Mr. Murphy said he did not think one would attack a man. He had never known of an individual being so molested and at times he has seen wolves on the road when he was unarmed. When the wolves are travelling in packs they are inclined to be more venturesome. Mr. Murphy's belief is that the wolf is something like a human; if a number of young fellows go out together it is possible they will try things and do things which one alone would never think of. He has seen the wolf when alone turn out of the way when approached by a human.

There are a number of good-sized wolves in the district, but many of them are in the game reserve and it is not lawful to go in there with a gun. Mr. Murphy is certain the wolves during a season will kill many more deer than are ever taken by the hunters during the open season in the fall. Mr. Murphy has found that wolves invade the farms in the district. On his own premises he lost three calves in one morning. The wolf is not easy to take. Unless trapped it might require a great deal of searching to come across a single one. The fact that they can be heard howling during the night does not mean they are going to be readily located.

There is a bounty of $15 from the provincial government, but the pelt itself has no great market value. Some time ago as much as $8 might be secured for a hide, but Mr. Murphy doubted if the pelt he brought in, although large and in good shape would bring more than half that amount this year.

When He Is Through?

Charlie Conacher, former star of the Maple Leaf hockey team in Toronto, was speaker at a banquet tendered to hockey players in Simcoe. Mr. Conacher addressed himself to the younger players and told them that hockey offered an opportunity whose rewards are equal to most other professions. He said also that the training was a good thing because a young fellow had to keep himself in the pink of condition or get out of the game.

When a young man starts to play hockey on a professional scale he cannot well attend to anything else. He is training for some time before the season starts and when the schedule of games opens he is at it for the full season. Mr. Conacher did not say what the monetary awards are, but we take it they must be quite satisfactory.

But the time will come when even a young man who has kept himself in good shape will start to slow down; he cannot dispute the fact that each season finds him a year older; nor can he ignore the truth that there are always a coming group of younger players trying out for his position. And what then? He may have saved some money from his good years in hockey. If he is wise he will have done so, but the fact that he used to be a good hockey player will not get him very far when he goes looking for something to do. He will have passed up those useful years when he should have been in training for his life's work. If he can "cash in" on his hockey reputation and step into something from which he can extract a living he is fortunate. Many have not been able to do it.

The way of the professional athlete may be good as long as he is good, but at the end of the road there is bound to be a getting-off place. The young man looking ahead today is well advised to consider all sides of professional sport before deciding to make it his life work.

It Is Simpler Now

There was something about securing at hat for Easter in the advertising columns the other day. It ran like this:

"Selecting the proper hat is such an easy matter now. So many of them from which to choose. There is no delay. You can match your suit, coat or dress at once."

No doubt there is quite an element of truth in that, and it is probably much easier than it used to be. We recall that in the village the coming of the milliner in early spring created a bit of a stir in the place. Nearly always she'd be a young lady from outside. Inside a day or so every person would know where she had gone to board and most of the folk would know her by sight at least. On the first Sunday out it would be known which church she was going to, after which she proceeded to take her place in the community.

In those days she was somewhat of a creator of things. The ladies knew they should go to her well in advance of Easter; she it was who knew what was to be worn; she it was who was counted on to be able to take last year's hat and bring it up to this year's standard. And then she built hats right from the foundation up; if the style called for feathers or flowers then she it was who knew which way they should trail or grow.

On the day when she presided over the grand millinery opening at the general store she reached the height of her career. She was for the moment the one person who knew and many there were who came to inquire. The creations she fashioned for the heads of the folk in the village and the country around were all made according to specification. And the day when the delivery boy went forth from the store with a great bandbox was the final movement in the chain of events which connected the new milliner with most of the homes in the community. Probably the process is much simpler today, but the visit to the milliner, the sustained expectation and the final delivery of the bandbox all combined to form a week or ten days of suppressed excitement from which considerable interest in life and the coming of spring was extracted.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Alberta is planning to reduce its legislature by ten members. There will be many folk who will feel that even fifty-three legislators are too many.

J. S. Woodsworth C.C.F. leader says the appointing of commissions is an excellent way of getting nothing done, and the more you look at that statement the truer it appears.

Preston ex-servicemen are protesting because a war veteran who has been dentist at the Ontario Girls' Training School is being replaced by a civilian. Evidently the latter has more pull.

The first plank in the Federal relief program is the encouragement of a greater tourist trade. That is a policy that this district should have no trouble in approving.

Mr. Euler says the Canadian mails are closed to Irish sweepstake tickets. We presume those tickets that folk are bothering us to buy were brought over by carrier pigeon.

The only trouble with the youth training movement is that many who were youths when the thing started will be matured adults before it gets functioning properly.

The idea at first was to increase the radio fee to $3, but there were so many protests that it went to $2.50. So if a kick will knock off 50 cents the moral is to keep on kicking.

With the radiant system of heating it is claimed persons could be comfortably warm in a temperature of 65 degrees. That is evidently the theory of some janitors too but they try to make it work without the radiant heating.

A good many people who write every day may entertain the fond hope of some day entering the class of the Turgeon Commission which wrote 180,000 words in its report and the cost was $130,000.

SAFETY

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When I lived on Concession Ten, along with other little men, so many things I knew; we found about the birds and trees, of insects, worms and likewise bees, and every thing that grew.

¶ We knew the bullfrogs and their ways, just how they sang their springtime lays, knew where the birds would nest; we knew the slippery elm bark, and even after it was dark, could tell the east from west.

¶ Some boys there were whose feet were fast, in races they were never last, that way I was a chump; they're scattered now from coast to coast, the ones I envy far the most, were those who learned to jump.

¶ When I walk down the streets today, so many autos come my way, I scarce know what to do; while I watch for a path that's clear, I move quite full of shaky fear, lest I be cut in two.

¶ And drivers honk their horns at me, as though I ought to climb a tree, or crawl beneath a barn; they glare at my slow-moving gait, and mutter then their hymn of hate, I fear they'll do me harm.

¶ If I were but a lad once more, I knew what I'd do after four, my legs and back I'd hump; I'd pick some spot out in the yard, and I would practice long and hard—and there I'd learn to jump.

Being a Director Cause of Debate

From Official Parliamentary Reports

(This debate had to do with a bill respecting the Restigouche Log Driving and Boom Co., having to do with the naming of directors).

Mr. BENNETT: The only point I make is that it authorizes anybody, instead of a member of the corporation who is a shareholder.

Mr. MICHAUD: That is the object of the bill.

Mr. BENNETT: To name any person, whether he is a member or not?

Mr. MICHAUD: Any person authorized by resolution of the directors of a corporation which is a member of the company.

Mr. BENNETT: But the person selected need not be a member of the shareholder company.

Mr. MICHAUD: That is correct; he need not be. It is to avoid this inconvenience that the amendment is moved.

Mr. BENNETT: I am greatly surprised that any corporation would seek by a resolution of its directors to appoint a stranger to be a director of a company in which it was a shareholder. If they decided to appoint any member of the corporation that is a shareholder to be a director, that would be all right. That would apply to the president, vice-president and officers of the shareholding corporation. Surely you are not going to appoint as a director of the Restigouche boom company a perfect stranger who has no corporate holding in the enterprise. That is a new provision of company law; it is something that has never been done in this country.

Mr. MICHAUD: This company is owned by two other companies, the International paper company and the Fraser company. They found it difficult to have their own directors to act as directors of the boom company, and they want to select certain of their employees, such as the head of the woods department. He might not happen to be a director or shareholder of the holding company, but they want to make him a director of the boom company.

Mr. BENNETT: It is proper that a shareholder of a shareholding corporation may become a director of the boom company; but when you say that by resolution of the directors of the shareholders company they can elect a perfect stranger to be a director of the boom company, you are transgressing every rule that governs the conduct of corporations in any country. One of the qualifications has been that before a person can be elected a shareholder he shall in some way be connected with the enterprise. The usual practice has been to qualify him by transferring to him a single share. That is so in our Canadian National enterprises. This practice has been carried on in order to maintain the corporate identity of the companies. All that would be necessary to do to meet the ordinary requirements would be change the word "person" to the words "member of a corporation." I would suggest that progress be reported and this bill considered at the next sitting of the committee. This would be a dangerous precedent for us to establish here, and I hesitate to see it done once attention has been directed to it.

Mr. CRERAR: If he were a shareholder in one of the two companies it would be all right.

Mr. BENNETT: That is all you want.

Mr. CRERAR: I take it that this amendment would not be necessary.

Mr. BENNETT: Let me put the situation in this way. We have a company know as Jones Limited. One of the shareholders of Jones Limited is Smith Limited, a corporation. As the act now stands, the president, vice-president or manager of Smith Limited could be made a director of Jones Limited. This amendment seeks to make it possible for anyone to have a resolution passed by the directors of Smith Limited appointing a man on the street or elsewhere a director of Jones Limited. I think the minister realizes that such a thing is never done.

Mr. CRERAR: I admit that it is rather unusual, but I do not see where any harm would result from it here.

Mr. BENNETT: We would be doing something that has never been done.

Mr. CRERAR: The leader of the opposition speaks of appointing a stranger; but what would happen in this case, according to the explanation given by the sponsor of the bill, is that they would appoint the manager or some one of their employees.

Mr. BENNETT: The manager is a member.

Mr. CRERAR: He might not be a shareholder.

Mr. BENNETT: That is what the amendment provides for, that a stranger may be made a director of the boom company.

Mr. CRERAR: The manager could scarcely be described as a stranger.

Mr. BENNETT: It is in the bill now.

Mr. CRERAR: At the present time no person would be eligible to be elected a director unless he was a stockholder in the Restigouche Log Driving and Boom Company.

Mr. BENNETT: This bill changes that.

Mr. CRERAR: That is the fact.

Mr. BENNETT: No; that is not the fact. The original act provides that no one shall be qualified to hold office as a director unless he is a member of the company or a director or the manager of a corporation which is a member of the company. That is the present position. This amendment provides that the directors of this shareholding corporation can pass a resolution naming the deputy clerk sitting at the table a director of the boom company.

Mr. VENIOT: Would not the difficulty be overcome by changing the wording and substituting the words "or a person who is an employee of one of the companies authorized by resolution"?

Mr. MICHAUD: I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Progress reported.

The term "sabotage" comes from the French word "sabot," meaning a wooden shoe. It seems that years ago disgruntled French workers discovered that tossing a wooden shoe into machinery would wreck it. Our own phrase, throwing a monkey wrench in the machinery, conveys the same idea.

The Indians Were Slaughtered

(From the New Yor k Herald-Tribune.)

AN ATTEMPT is being made to get a bill through Congress appropriating $200,000 for the relatives of the Sioux Indians who were killed in the massacre of Wounded Knee in South Dakota in 1890.

There also is a handful of survivors of that long-ago horror who will share in the money. Jim Pigeonhead, speaking for his people, has been to Washington. Representative Francis Case, of North Dakota, has introduced the bill. The Indian Affairs Committee will support it and the Department of the Interior also is on the side of the Indians.

Thus, after almost 48 years, some recompense seems likely to be made for one of the most wanton, bloody and disgraceful episodes in which the United States Army ever engaged.

In December, 1890, the attitude of the soldiers and the Indian police toward the Sioux, and toward old Sitting Bull in particular, was such that trouble was bound to happen. The memory of the Custer massacre still rankled. Some of the Sioux were making a sort of desperate final stand against the Government under the excitement of the Messiah craze and the ghost dances.

Then, in the middle of December, Sitting Bull, whose stature as a man has increased with the years, was unnecessarily killed by Indian police who had gone to arrest him. The soldiers surrounded the fleeing Sioux on Wounded Knee Creek and trained eight Hotchkiss machine guns on them. The Indians were told to assemble and surrender their arms, and it is recorded that more than 100 of them came out of the tepees quietly and sat in the snow while the soldiers began a search of the encampment.

One story is that a gun was discharged when a cavalryman attempted to wrest it from the hands of an old warrior. In any event, firing started. Soon there were 146 dead Indians lying on the snow. The soldiers for a time apparently were completely out of control of their commanding officer, Colonel Forsyth, who cried out, "We did not come here to butcher them." The essential facts of this affair are set forth in the report of General Nelson A. Miles.

True, the massacre at Wounded Knee marked the end of all threats of further trouble from the proud and intelligent Sioux, but it was a senseless slaughter.

Reverse the Debenture Plan

(From the Otta wa Journal.)

ONE OF THESE days Ottawa must have a city hall. Probably it will cost at least a million dollars. In the normal way we shall borrow the money, pay it back over 20 or 30 years with interest, and the final cost of the building will be perhaps a million and a half. But if we were to save up the money, have the cash in hand before work was begun, the cost would be a good deal less than a million—because we should be receiving interest on the accumulating sum, instead of paying interest on a debt.

That is to say, if we put in the savings bank say $100,000 a year towards a city hall we could begin building about eight years hence and on the day of the formal opening the structure would be paid-for and debt-free. In the long run we should as a community save a great deal of money.

Precisely that plan has been adopted by the city of Milwaukee, which has followed for 15 years a pay-as-you-go policy and sees an end to all debt by 1943. For several years Milwaukee has issued no new bonds. All public improvements have been paid for in cash, delayed until cash was available, and a fund is being built up from which will be made the major developments necessary from time to time. Milwaukee is saving money by ridding itself of the interest burden.

This is, we think, a thoroughly sound principle, not beyond the bounds of possibility even for Ottawa. Its adoption would mean some immediate discomfort, perhaps for a little while a higher tax rate, would demand of all ranks of citizens an acquiescence in the scheme, but the ultimate benefits would be great. Payments on our civic debt take about one-quarter of all our taxes, and here, it seems, is the only real available field where savings can be made.

Two Young People in Trouble.

(From the New York Times)

TWO YOUNG people, just out of high school, one still a student, fall in love, and, as the saying goes, get into trouble. It is an old story—as old, at least, as the institution of marriage. The boy and the girl are desperate. They see their predicament as a trap from which there is no escape. They have no money. They dare not tell their parents. They have read of suicide pacts. They make one, writing a joint letter which the girl pathetically signs with the boy's last name added to her own. Some notion of motion picture drama runs through the bewildered young minds. The boy buys a black tie and has his shoes neatly polished. Then he shoots and kills the girl. Suddenly the Tristan and Isolde music stops. He cannot force his trembling finger to pull the trigger which will send a bullet into his own heart. But, whatever the jury says, the girl is dead and his own life ruined.

One reads such a story with the thought that one sees in it more human weakness than viciousness at work. The law will take its course, as is fitting. But one's mind follows the story back to its beginnings. There was a time when these two young lives might easily have been salvaged. There was good in them to appeal to, for thoroughly cynical youngsters would not have been driven to desperation by the plight in which they found themselves.

Shall we blame that abstraction called Society? That is too easy a solution, for Society's shoulders are broad and punishments and admonitions do not harm it. But such tragedies do emphasize the duties that are laid upon parents, teachers, pastors and all who come into confidential contact with the young. It is a bewildering world, even for adults; and for boys and girls, living in the confusion of a glittering city, in a time when so many standards have broken down, it is doubly hard. When a deep instinct has to fight with the moral code, there should be, one cannot help believing, more friendly aid than is ordinarily given. The gap between the generations is wide, but it can be bridged. The instincts of youth can be guided toward happiness as easily as toward wretchedness and ruin.

FALSE TEETH TRADE.

(Times of India)

A CLAUSE which should intrigue many is contained in the scheme for an Anglo-American trade agreement. It provides that Britain will take from the U. S. A. some 40,000,000 false teeth a year. Thus American enterprise, in addition to sending Britain more food, will also send teeth to eat it with. Actually, false teeth figure as a normal item in imports from America.

In 1936, the U. S. A. exported 41,797,000 false teeth to Britain, their value being over one million dollars. Already the Herald Tribune takes pride in the fact that "45,000,000 Britons—a twelfth of the British Isles population—owe their flashing smiles of the United States." Literary purists will be interested to know that under the United States tariff schedule, false teeth are classified under the heading of "scientific instruments."

CAUSE FOR THANKS.

(The New Outlook)

A RECENT survey disclosed the fact that the modern American child has no interest in reading. He goes to the cinema and listens to the radio, but he does not read. This may seem a disturbing development. The rising generation is cutting itself off from its cultural past with alarming effectiveness.

This is only one side of the question. Whenever you glance at the contents of a news-stand you thank God that the young don't read as extensively as they might.

EDITORS TRAVEL.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

THE EDITOR of the Peterborough Examiner boasts that when he was in Vienna he put up at the Imperial Hotel, which he considers to be top-notch in the hostelries of that new German city. As he missed the Bristol Hotel, up the Ringstrasse on the corner, we can understand his vainglory. But one big reason for his opinion is harder to understand. It is that the Imperial provides each diner with a goldmounted toothpick. At the Bristol he would seek in vain for such an implement.

The Peterborough editor is on safer ground when he marks the Adlon, at No. 1 Unter-den-Linden, Berlin, as another fine hotel. It is more than that. It was considered the finest hotel in Europe before Hitler's time, and probably is yet. At the Adlon a guest may obtain a full-course meal at any hour of the day or night.

HUMAN GUINEA PIGS.

(Niagara Falls Review)

SPECIFIC FIGURES showing the number of German and Italian planes in Spain, used on behalf of the insurgents, have been given by France to Britain and it is said the detailed lists show 422 such machines. An Italian flyer, captured by the Loyalists recently, said practically all the planes are being flown by Germans and Italians with only a few Spanish pilots in the whole air force. Such incidents as the aerial bombardment of Barcelona would lend color to such a view for it would be difficult for a Spaniard to wreak so much destruction on a beautiful Spanish city and to kill so many of his fellow-Spaniards.

Quite likely the planes are as described and experiments are being made with aerial weapons, with the hapless Spanish people as the laboratory guinea pigs.

Bill Would Limit Damages To The Next Of Kin

House Committee Rejects Plea Of Attorney-General To Let Measure Stand Over

TORONTO, April 6.—No damages shall be allowed for the death or for the loss of expectation of life to any one other than the wife, husband, parent or child of the deceased, according to the terms of an amended amendment to the Trustee Act which was reported by the Legal Bills Committee of the Legislature, yesterday.

The original amendment or bill sponsored by Ian T. Strachan (Liberal, St. Andrew), sought to wipe out all assessment for damages for loss of expectation of life, and, in effect, to restore the law in Ontario to the 50-year-old position it had enjoyed prior to the House of Lords' decision in the now-famous Rose v. Ford case.

Attorney-General Conant urged the committee to report the bill without amendment, and that it be given further trial for a year, with his Department, in the interval between sessions of the House, thoroughly studying the advisability of loosening up the now restrictive scope of the Fatal Accidents Act. The committee, however, disregarded the proposal and adopted the amendment of former Labor-Welfare Minister D. A. Croll limiting damages under the bill to the wife, husband, parent, or child.

Sees Effort to Avoid Paying.

Former Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck charged that the sole object of the measure as sponsored by Mr. Strachan was an effort on the part of insurance companies, the T.T.C. and the Ontario Motor League, for instance, to avoid paying damages. "We had a law for fifty years," he said, "that did not work out very well. Now, this bill would have us go back to that law. I suggest that we should make some change in it at least. If we find next session that the change has been in error, then we can try something else. But let's at least try something now."

W. A. Baird (Cons., High Park), expressed the opinion that the committee should hesitate to interfere with the law as interpreted by the House of Lords and the Canadian courts." After all, he said, "the move in this bill before us is simply an attempt on the part of the insurance companies to lessen the amount of damages they will have to pay."

Sides With Conant.

Major James Clark (Lib., Windsor-Sandwich) felt that the bill should go through without the Croll amendment. He took the same stand as Mr. Conant, claiming that "liberalizing" of the Fatal Accidents Act might correct any injustice that might now obtain in the way of assessment for and collection of damages. To pass the bill would mean, he said, "a hopeless muddle under two different acts."

Representatives of the Toronto Transportation Commission and the Ontario Motor League appeared before the committee and stated their support of the Strachan bill.

LINDSAY

TWO POLICEMEN ADDED TO FORCE

LINDSAY, April 6.— The town council has selected two new police constables from a large list of applications for the positions. The new policemen are John Simnett and Ewart E. Reeve, both of Lindsay. The latter worked in Peterborough for some time.

Harold Fever, a local young man, was sentenced to six months in the Ontario reformatory at Guelph for the theft of $1,700 from an oil firm with whom he was employed. The accused was remanded several weeks following his arrest by Chief of Police Lawler. C. G. Frost, his counsel, asked that the accused consider the good citizenship by the accused in passing sentence.

Mrs. Howard Galley, St. Paul street, fell over a pick in her yard and broke her arm. Her son had returned form the north country where he had broken his arm while at work.

George Clarke, East Ops, had one of his thumbs amputated by a saw while engaged in wood cutting operations on his farm.

Died in Florida.

The sudden death is announced at Miami, Florida, of a former Peterborough boy in the person of Dr. Joseph Smith. The deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Terrence Smith, former well known residents of Peterborough and Havelock. While in Peterborough Mr. Smith was teamster in the Fire Department. The late Dr. Smith is survived by three sitsers.

Run Down—Tired Out Only Weighed 96 lbs.

Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills are what weak, nervous, run down men and women need to help make them strong and well again.

They are a well balanced tonic for the treatment of those whose nerves are shattered, and for those feelings of faintness, weakness and dizziness caused by an overworked, run down constitution, or whose health is not up to par.

They help to infuse new life and energy into depressed, health shattered men and women who have come to think there is no relief for them.

Mrs. P. Broughton, Fenwick, Ont., writes:—"I was so run down and tired out all the time I did not care whether my housework was done or not.

I only weighed 96 pounds, but after taking three boxes of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills I now weigh 122 pounds, and do my own work for eight in the family.

I only wish I had started taking H. & N. Pills a year ago."

ALBERTA STUDIES PRODUCTION TAX

EDMONTON, April 6 (C.P.). — Consideration of legislation in committee of the whole is expected to occupy most of the time of the Alberta Legislature to-day.

Chief among the Bills slated for committee consideration are the production tax and the conservation of petroleum and natural gas resources, given second reading by the House yesterday. The Conservation Bill authorizes establishment of a board of not more than three members to direct conservation regulations.

Lengthy debate occurred yesterday on a motion declaring no amendment to the British North America Act was necessary for introduction of an unemployment insurance scheme and that the Assembly could not agree to any amendment to the B.N.A. Health Clause Is Withdrawn From Marriage Act

Amendment Offered By David Croll Called For Freedom From Disease

TORONTO, April 6.—In the face of Government opposition, as indicated by Hon. Harold J. Kirby, Minister of Health, David A. Croll (Lib., Windsor-Walkerville) withdrew yesterday in the House his marriage law amendment act, which would have barred from marriage in Ontario persons afflicted with social disease.

The bill required that applicants for marriage must present a certificate of health to issuers of licenses or to clergymen in event of the publication of bans. It proposed to set up machinery for the provision of laboratory tests and provided penalties for infringement of the act.

Mr. Croll, in moving second reading, said it was purely a preventive measure, designed to protect either contracting party, any children that might be the result of a marriage and society generally.

"It is a sad reflection upon society that we allow disease to be handed from one generation to another," he said, in declaring, "We have failed to do for human beings what we have not failed to do for livestock."

He admitted that persons who desired to escape from provision of the bill could be married outside the Province, but he held that "we would catch one in ten, and we must agree that it is a step in the right direction."

Dr. Harold Welsh (Cons., Hastings East) held the principle of the bill was sound.

Mr. Kirby pointed out that he was doubtful if the public would be agreeable to submit to examination for social diseases.

"While I am whole-heartedly behind the principle of the bill, I would suggest that it be left in abeyance to give an opportunity for department study, in the hope that some means may be found of taking action," he said.

Mr. Croll concurred and withdrew the bill.

HALL'S BRIDGE

The Rev. E. C. Moore gave his third Lenten, Thursday evening address at the Parish Hall last week. The subject was the history of the Bible and was illustrated by lantern slides. The Reverend gentleman told how the Bible gradually attained to its present form from the collection of manuscripts from the time of the ancient Syrians, who wrote upon slabs and cylinders of clay. Then gradually up through stone, papyrus vellum and parchment to the modern day printed paper. The address was much appreciated by a very attentive audience.

Saturday morning, while working at Nat Pearson's logging camp, W. Cross sustained severe injury to the left hand gashing the base of the thumb and severing one of the large arteries. The prompt attention of Mrs. A. Cumming, who was at the camp, and who applied a tourniquet around the wrist, probably averted serious consequences. The doctor at Hall's Bridge saw the case later on and gave further attention.

'Old 97's' Engineer Takes Last Run

ATLANTA, Ga., April 6—(AP). — Engineer J. W. (Uncle Bill) Eskew, who once pulled the throttle of "Old 97" before she wrecked goin' down grade in Virginia, has been retired after 49 years of railroading. He completed his final run with a Southern train on April 1.

Eskew said he took "Old 97" south from Washington on November 1, 1902, on the first Government subsidized purely fast mail run, held the job for five months, and then went on a passenger train.

On September 27, the next year, "Old 97" plunged through a trestle near Monroe, Va., with three mail cars, killing 11. The accident was immortalized in the song, "The Wreck of the Old 97."

CHARGED WITH MURDER

VICTORIA, April 6. (CP).—Mrs. Vera Colebourne today was charged in police court at adjoining Oak Bay with the murder of her husband, 43-year-old Sidney Colebourne.

Colebourne was shot and killed Friday as he lay asleep in the family's modest three-room cottage.

The charge was laid a short time before an inquest into her husband's death was scheduled to open.

Blum's Demands Branded Copy Of Roosevelt Experiment

Others Liken Premier's Program To Soviet Or Fascist Methods

PARIS, April 6.—(AP).— Former Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin today told the Chamber of Deputies that Socialist Premier Leon Blum's demand for decree powers was "a copy" of President Roosevelt's "experiment which has failed."

"The American government is bound to show that the controlled economy the Premier proposes will not work," the Centrist leader said. Other speakers had likened the Premier's program to the Soviet Russian administration, and still others to Fascist methods.

Shouting above interruptions from the Leftist benches, Flandin asserted Blum's decree measures meant "inflation—whether we consider it camouflaged inflation or open inflation, it remains inflation.

Flandin's attack brought considerable applause from the right and centre groups, although his influence has been considerably checked by insistence in the past that France drop her present alliances and make a separate security agreement with Germany.

Drafting New Cabinet.

Deputies said President Albert Lebrun already was laying the ground work for a new government to succeed Blum's Popular Front cabinet. It was reported in Chamber circles that the president conferred last night with Defence Minister Edouard Daladier, and there was belief a new cabinet would be formed around Daladier, with Paul Reynaud as Finance Minister.

Lebrun's object in beginning talks before Blum went to the Senate with almost certain defeat in prospect for his bill was, deputies said, to make certain a new government could step in quickly and avoid a long crisis.

Strikes continued throughout the Paris region where it was estimated 45,000 workers in metal and allied industries were out.

LOYALIST CHIEF SHUFFLES CABINET

MADRID, April 6 (AP).—Stressing the grave threat of the continued insurgent drive in Catalonia towards the Mediterranean, Premier Juan Negrin has dropped his War Minister, the "strong man," Indalecio Prieto, and assumed the duties of that post.

Along with his change, Negrin reshuffled his Cabinet to drop out one of the two Communist Ministers and give the Cabinet a more moderate makeup.

Friction with Negrin in conduct of the military campaign was suggested as the reason for dismissal of Prieto, who had played an active part in affairs of the republic since its establishment with the abdication of King Alfonso in 1931.

The other most significant changes were the recall of Julio Alvarez Del Vayo to his old job as Foreign Minister and an appointment for a member of the C.N.T., thus giving this powerful Labor group a voice in the government after nearly a year during which it repeatedly had expressed adherence to the government and sought Cabinet recognition.

The C.N.T. member, Segundo Blanco Gonzalez, replaced the Communist Minister, Jesus Harnandez, in the Department of Public Instruction. Minister of Agriculture Vincente Uribe is the remaining Communist.

HE SUFFERED AGONY IN WET WEATHER

Rheumatism Attacked Limbs and Body

He had been bothered with rheumatism for years. The pain in wet weather—to use his own expression—was "indescribable." But all that is gone now—thanks to Kruschen. Read this letter:—

"I suffered with rheumatism for years. I dreaded wet weather, for during such periods the pain was continuous and indescribable. To begin with, it was confined to my limbs, but in time I began to suffer as much agony in my body as I did in my limbs. When I began to take Kruschen Salts, I found it did me more good than all the other medicine I had taken put together. Today, I have peace and freedom from pain, even during wet weather, and can heartily recommend Kruschen Salts to anyone who suffers from rheumatism."—N.M.

Rheumatic conditions are often the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients in Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients in these Salts assist Nature to expel the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.—advt.

Before the First Cheese Factory

Away back in 1864, the first cheese factory in Ontario began production in Oxford county. Off to a modest start the industry developed rapidly until today Canadian cheese is world famed.

Seventeen years before the Oxford factory opened its doors, the Canada Life issued its first policy to a resident of Ontario. It was then, and continued to be for almost twenty years, the only Canadian life insurance company.

Over a period of ninety-one years, the Canada Life has established a reputation for sane, conservative management. And the enterprise of pioneer days still prevails. Sales of new insurance in 1937 were more than twenty per cent greater than in the previous year.

MOORE REPLACES KARAKAS IN CHI NET AFTER GARDENS' FIGHT

SMYTHE REFUSES KERR PERMISSION TO PLAY IN NETS

TORONTO, April 6 (C.P.). — It was a nice spring evening, Tuesday, April 5, and Alfie Moore and some of the boys were cooling themselves in an East-end Toronto tavern. Over the pretzels and suds Alfie probably had few thoughts of the Toronto-Chicago opening of the Stanley Cup final.

That was a few hours before Alfie went into the nets to goaltend Chicago to a 3-1 victory over Toronto in the first game of the final. Exactly what happened in between isn't clear yet, except that it led to some of the most hectic scenes witnessed in Maple Leaf Gardens.

Chicago's regular goalkeeper, Mike Karakas, had a broken big toe on his right foot. Coach Bill Stewart had Dave Kerr of New York Rangers ready to play for Mike. Boss Conny Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs was positive Kerr wasn't going to play for Chicago—it was to be either Karakas or Alfie Moore.

Hero of the Contest.

Before the evening was over Moore was the hero of the Chicago triumph; Stewart and Smythe had charged and counter-charged each other with a dozen underhand tricks; Stewart and Smythe had traded punches and Stewart and Hal (Baldy) Cotton, one-time Leaf winger, also had socked one another right lustily.

The calm of Alfie's evening was shattered when word reached him he was wanted at the Gardens. Frank Selke, Smythe's right-hand man, spoke to Alfie about it on the 'phone. The crux of the argument appeared to be just what Selke said or didn't say to Moore, who thought his goaltending for the 1937-38 season ended when Pittsburgh Hornets were eliminated recently in the International-American League.

Moore said Selke told him he would have to play; that Kerr had been ruled ineligible by League President Frank Calder. That, according to Moore, was before the special meeting to decide Chicago's goalkeeper. Moore said Smythe met him at the Gardens door and carried his goalie equipment to a "little room in at the back" where he was told to wait.

Said Alfie: "Finally I entered Chicago's dressing-room and they didn't even know I was to play. Kerr was getting dressed. Right then I knew I had been made the sucker."

Stewart and Bill Tobin, Chicago vice-president, said: "Nobody told us Kerr was ineligible to play. Instead Smythe orders Moore here while we are at our hotel banking on having Kerr in the nets. We get to the Gardens and Kerr starts to get ready. Then Moore walks in to tell us he has been ordered here to play."

Said Selke: "I didn't tell Moore he had to play. I told him he might have to play if Kerr was ruled ineligible."

It appeared even than that the affair might pass, for Stewart, Tobin, Selke, More and Smythe had shouted and quarrelled with each other in the Chicago dressing-room without striking a blow.

Exchange Blows.

But Stewart and Smythe met later in a corridor between the dressing-rooms and Selke entered the renewed argument.

"You're a liar," roared Stewart when Selke said again that Hawks had been told before game time that Kerr could not play.

"You can't call my pal Selke a liar and get away with it," shouted Smythe, and the punching began. Cotton got into it later and bloodied the Chicago coach's nose.

That was the buildup before Alfie Moore, who has been kicking around the minors some 12 years, went out and stopped the National League champions cold. And the game of all the cooling for Alfie the suds could have done—he was in a cold sweat from the opening whistle.

RACING FAN TURNS TO FLAT RUNNING IN ENGLISH TURF

NEWMARKET, England, April 6 (CP).—England's hardy winter and its even more hardy steeplechase fans who back a 50-to-1 shot without blinking an eye have given place to gentle spring and that more cautious horde who support the flat-racing books.

Flat racing doesn't charm sissies and pikers but as a rule fewer long shots win. Then there is the society angle. Newmarket, Lincoln, Ascot, Epsom, Goodwood attract male and female fashion plates who go to be seen and see whereas the drab winter of fencing musters only those who go to see in comfort.

The "flat" breeds a distinctive following apart from the society element. For most family budgets in England are arranged to provide at least a "couple of bobs" a week for "tote" investments. The only other sport which attracts more small stakes is football although greyhound racing has been challenging this field.

And this year—launched as usual by the Lincolnshire—should be bigger and better than ever. For instance, never before have the famous Limekilns galloping grounds here been opened for work so early in the year; horses have been out since the last of February, and usually it is late April or early May when they first begin training canters.

The season started inappropriately by a win for a French invader, Graine de Beaute, in the opening race at Lincoln.

The early season means, according to Steve Donoghue, jockey who turned trainer, that the two-year-olds, instead of being half-trained and half fit as they are after usual English winters of frost, fog and swampy going will be advanced to the stage they would be in a normal year at the first of May. The fine weather, however, has had an adverse effect in some cases where hard ground has resulted in sore limbs.

Favorites Up.

Some of the most formidable of this year's three-year-olds made their bow in the Greenham Plate, at Newbury, April 1. Sir Humphrey de-Trafford, owner of Portmarnock, a favorite for the Two Thousand Guineas, will probably give the horse his first preliminary trial in the Coventry Stables at Kempton Park, Saturday, April 23.

Mid-day Sun and Chulmleigh, respective winners of the Derby and St. Leger, will find lots of support this year and if they clash it should be the highlight of the season.

Other horses being watched by the expert sas probably money-makers are Dan Bugler, Thankerton, Phakos, Allegiance, Pike Barn, Moody, Laureat II., Daydawn, Tweedledee, Aldine, Mirza II., Tahir, Golden Hair and Glen Loan.

This is the first year after the retirement of Donoghue, Bernard Carslake succeeded as senior jockey. But his successor in popularity is Gordon Richards, who hasn't yet won a Derby but has won nearly everything else and in fact has a record number of race wins. "What is Richards riding?" is a popular question along the rails and whether his mount be the favorite or the rankest outsider it receives plenty of backing.

Differs Up the Local Dirt Will the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

THERE WILL be plenty of heated action this e'en in that City Basketball League final playoff at eight in the Y.M.C.A. gym. C.G.E. has a 13-point lead over St. Paul's, and is favored to win the title, but it will be a keen contest. Plenty of good senior men cagers on both sides, including big Joe Jakafby, high scorer for the league, and a C.O.B.L. pitcher in the summer time. St. Paul's are awaiting their next Ontario Church Basketball Association playoff series, too. Down at the Y.W. this Friday p.m., two Ladies' Cage Loop playoffs are listed. Quaker Debs and Quaker Maids tangle at 7.30 in a sudden-death junior final, and St. John Teenites tackle Westclox at 8.15 in the second of their best-in-three senior finals, the Saints having won the first. Rates another big crowd.

SECRETARY JACK Copping sends word that the annual meeting of the Southend Softball League will be held next Monday eve at seven bells in Barrack's store, by the Brinton diamond. Those interested in entering a team, city or district, are invited to be present. Probably election of officers, too, and general plans for the season. This independent softball circuit has been growing by leaps and bounds the past few years, and keeping a raft of good players and fans keyed up all summer. They look for another big season this year.

* * * * * *

TIME THAT the men's City Softball League was getting reorganized, also. Plenty of spade work will be necessary, but there is no reason why a good four- or six-team loop cannot be lined up if a live bunch of officers take hold soon. As the annual O.A.S.A. meeting will be held in Sarnia in slightly less than two weeks from now a local session is indicated shortly. Top-heavy teams in recent years have threatened to put this circuit on the skids, as prospective clubs aren't fussy about providing practise for one or two strong squads which are favored in advance to battle it out for city and O.A.S.A. honors. We understand a Kingston man may run for an Ontario executive position this year.

* * * *

PREXY CECIL Duncan of the C.A.H.A. threatehs next year to do something about the problem of a stalling team shooting the puck down the ice. The 1937-38 rule of facing it off in the guilty team's area hasn't done much good, and lots of fans are fed up. However, when the old stallerino is on not much can be done—and players will find some method.

* * * * * *

THE SPORTS column of the Ottawa Journal recently mentioned that big Johnny Lalonde of the Trenton Fliers had been placed on the reserve list of the Montreal Canadiens. He is supposed to report to them for a trial in Quebec in October. Lalonde is doubtful about quitting the Air Force, though he might land a job in Peterborough if he quit flying and missed on the Flying Canadiens. However, he is not good enough for pro company, we don't think—even if he is a steady blocker and good rusher in amateur ranks. Incidentally, the Quinte writer says the Airmen only got about $300 as their split from the big VanHorne Cup playoffs, and they are burned to a crisp. Ah, well, the players have to turn in their cut to the sports' fund at the camp, anyway.

* * * * * *

IT WOULD seem to the casual observer that the hockey teams of the famous north country took it and had to like it this year from squads in Eastern Ontario. And Toronto amateur packed outfits did likewise, you might add. Goodyears lost to Falconbridge who lost to Cornwall. Marlboro juniors lost to Oshawa, who also licked Sudbury. Another Eastern Ontario championship outfit is Kingston in junior "B". Right now Perth and Oshawa are playing in Eastern Canada junior finals, Oshawa winning last twilight. Well, it's nice to see hockey fame in the Province spread around a bit. O.H.A. champs this year were: Senior "A"—Toronto; senior "B"—Chatham; intermediate "A"—Preston; intermediate "B"—Eloro and Powassan still at it; junior "A"—Oshawa; junior "B"—Kingston; junior "C"—Orangeville. Other kid winners, like Campbellford Bantams, for instance, come under a separate division, not being directly under the O.H.A.

* * * * * *

DOUG MILLER will represent the local lacrosse club Good Friday at the annual O.A.L.A. convention in Toronto. Officers here are busy these days getting things cleared up, trying to line up a strong group, checking on players, equipment, grounds, and what not. They will have a little work to do this spring on the grounds and will erect a new inside fence, with wire atop it, around the field. 'Tis rumored that there is a new player in town, former Brampton senior, and possibly Freddy Cripps—who knows a lot of athletes around Brampton—might be mixed up somewhere in that. Your real executive action in the gutted-stick sport will come after the annual consumption—that is, convention, is held. Ah, yes.

* * * * * *

THIS IN the Belleville paper, oddly enough, sounds sensible to us: "The present O.B.A. executive may rue the day they engineered such a move"—that of voting Ernie Gibbard out of office when he was unable to attend the convention—"as this method of applying the pressure, especially in the absence of the party concerned, does not sit very well with Eastern Ontario ball representatives. Incidentally, the C.O.B.L. has been the largest revenue producer the parent body has had in the senior ranks the past few years, as can be proved by the last three financial statements. The C.O.B.L. clubs are not above forming an association of their own and affiliating with the St. Lawrence League and Northern Ontario interests in a move to better their own interests, and ultimate salvation. The Gibbard incident only added to the Eastern Ontario disgruntled feelings. The entire incident is to be regretted and may yet act as a boomerang." Provides food for thought, all right.

* * * * * *

OBSERVATION PLATFORM: Over 4,000 fans in Oshawa saw the Generals last e'en score five in the third frame for a 6-2 win over Perth . . . . Second game of the intermediate "B" finals is tonight, Eloro winning the first from Powassan, 4-3 . . . . Ernest (Duck) Sleightholm, one of two Whitby young men killed the other day in a car crash, played here and in Lakefield a month ago for Whitby in O.H.A. playoffs . . . . St. John's Juveniles, Church Cage Loop champs this winter, were banquetted last eve . . . . Not a word from Napanee regarding their attitude toward reentering the Central Ontario Baseball League this year . . . . Anything can and does happen in this screwy season of N.H.L. and Stanley Cup playoffs—and Hawks' 3-1 win over Leafs last night, using a second-string goalie, just bears this out . . . . Practically all local and district summer sports will be re-organized this month and ready for play in May . . . . Had working conditions been better in Oshawa this spring, the GM-men would have brought in a shortstop and first-sacker, but business wouldn't warrant it . . . . The Falls ought to have a starry senior ball team with five imports and two or three pro puckists who shine on the diamond . . . . Thin ice covers the outfield at Riverside Park now—and that's what some of the locals played on all last summer!

MARS' TIGER IN FAVORITES FOR DERBY WIN

NEW YORK, April 6 (AP)—Performances in actual competition this year speak well for Tiger, Sun Egret and Lawrin as leading candidates for the 64th running of the $50,000 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Much can happen between now and the May 7 renewal of the United States most famous horse race but if the trio maintain their present condition they will be up with the contenders when the leading three-year olds parade to the post.

Tiger, ace of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Milky Way Stable, and A. C. Compton's California-owned Sun Egret showed Derby class last Saturday. Tiger won the 1⅛ mile Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park while Sun Egret sped away from older rivals in the six-furlong Rowe Memorial at Bowie.

Lawrin, owned by Herbert M. Woolf of Kansas City, Mo., stepped into the picture with an easy triumph in the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Park in February.

Mrs. Mars also has named Mountain Ridge, C-Note and Farrell for the Derby but with the possible exception of Mountain Ridge, Trainer Bob McGarvey believes Tiger is the stable's best bet.

"He's the fastest thing in the country from the starting gate," said McGarvey. "They'll certainly have to beat him if they win the Derby and I don't think they can do it."

McGarvey explained Tiger's poor showing in the Santa Anita Derby, won by Stagehand, by saying they tried to rate the son of Bull Dog.

"You see, Tiger has a habit of breaking from the starting gate like a bolt of lightning and tries to wear himself out in the first half of the race. So we have been trying to rate him back of the race. We have succeeded in trials but in the Santa Anita Derby it didn't work.

"He broke on top and then Robbie (Jockey Alfred Robertson of Toronto) pulled him back. After that he wouldn't run again, so Robbie let him gallop in. He finished seventh."

Tiger, in the Arkansas Derby es? tablished an early lead of four lengths and just had enough left to win the 1⅛ mile race by a length and a half in the good time of 1:50 4-5.

Sun Egret, a son of Sun Briar, was in the money in six of his 10 starts last year. As a three-year-old he won four of his six starts and was third behind Stagehand and Dauber in the Santa Anita Derby before coming east to take the Bowie Stake over a slow track in 1:13 4-5.

Lawrin was practically unknown last year. This son of Insco found his racing legs in Florida, however. He piled up an impressive early season record, injured a leg, and then came back to win the Flamingo in fast time. Ben Jones, Missouri trainer of Lawrin and Florida's leading conditioner, believes his horse has as good a chance in the Derby as any other.

BOYS ARE GUESTS AT CHURCH SUPPER

The inter-church sports teams of St. John's were given their annual banquet last night at that church, with about 50 boys, leaders and guests attending. Members of the championship juvenile basketball club received crests from the league. Moving pictures were shown by Roy Pitchford, and a basketball game completed the evening.

Vic Coleman was chairman of the gathering, which was sponsored by the leaders of boys' athletics of St. John's. Following the banquet, short, snappy speeches were given by Rev. Canon Robertson of St. John's, Dr. Frank, Bert Graham, Roy Bacon, Sunday School superintendent there, and Don Charlton. The latter presented the crests as emblems of the league championship to St. John Juveniles. Recipients were Vic Coleman and Charles Jefferies, managers, Bob Dyer, Hubert Amys, Al Marshall, Jack Craig, Doug. Moore, Bruce Castle, and Ernest Forsythe, the team.

Other successful St. John's teams were praised, too. Their bantam hockey and basketball teams reached the finals in those inter-church sports, and the juvenile softball squad won the title last summer.

Back Again

There's no place like home says the Goose. Nearing the end of the major league baseball trail, Leon (Goose) Goslin, ABOVE, who twice before has played with the Washington Senators, has signed a contract and will line up with the Capital squad this year.

Casey Stengel's Job Is To Develop Punch At Plate In Boston Line-Up

Pitching Swell, But Oh! That Batting Average!

Here are some of the aspiring young (and not so young) men whom Casey Stengel is hoping will add strength to his already excellent mound staff. The man on the LEFT is the veteran Danny MacFayden and the fellows getting a tip or two are, LEFT to RIGHT, Milburn Shoffner, Dick Merriwell Errickson, John Niggeling and Mitchell Balas. Now all the Bees need is some ball-busters.

The key man of the Boston Bees is anyone who can walk up to that plate and smack a home run with the bases loaded.

Casey Stengel, starting out as manager of the Bees, inherits a splendid defence from his predecessor, Bill McKechnie. The pitching, which was good last year, promises to be even better this season with the addition of several excellent prospects. Casey's work is development of hitters, because he figures that by the bat alone will the Bees rise from their berth in fifth place to honorable standing in the first division.

The new pitchers whose work has been impressive in the Bradenton training camp are John Lanning, Richard Merriwell Errickson, Mitchell Balas and John Niggeling. It's true that Lanning was a member last year, but he still was regarded as an apprentice. He may bloom into a journeyman flinger this season.

Aha! Merriwell!

Yes, that is Errickson's real name, given to him by his father, who played himself as a semi-pro in New Jersey. Erickson was at Scranton last year, where he won 14 games. He had a fine earned run average of 2.43. Shoffner, a veteran southpaw, former Indian, came up from Scranton last year and looked good. Stengel hopes he will follow the example of Jim Turner and Lou Fette, who came up last year as veteran rookies and won 20 games each.

John Niggeling is another rookie well along in years. He is 33, and was acquired from the Yankee chain, working at Kansas City and Newark last year. Mitchell (Mike) Balas comes up after a good season at Scranton.

Stengel hopes that John Riddle, capable catcher, obtained from Indianapolis, will improve the hitting of the club which averaged only .243 last year. The Bees lost many one-run ball games that a hit in a pinch would have won, particularly games well pitched by the veteran Danny MacFayden. Stengel thinks Vince DiMaggio, Joe's older brother, will improve as a hitter as he goes along. Certainly Vince hit in the Pacific Coast league.

West From the West

A newcomer from the Coast league may add to the batting power of the team. He is Max West, who hit .330 for the Missions last year. Roy Johnson, former Yankee, also should increase the Bees' run-making ability, and probably will start in left field, with Gene Moore in right.

The Bees' infield will be substantially the same, with Elbie Fletcher at first, Tony Cuccinello at second, Rabbit Warstler at short and Gilbert English at third. Fletcher is counted on to be a better hitter than he was last year.

Casey is working might and main to develop the bat handlers he has, and hope some better ones come along. That is the story of the Bees this year.

Tiny Thompson May Quit Job

CALGARY, April 6 (CP)—The National Hockey League's outstanding goalkeeper, Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, for a decade the Boston Bruins' ace net-minder, may retire.

Returning to his home here Tuesday, Thompson, who started his ice career on Calgary school rinks, declared:

"I am seriously thinking of retiring. I have been in the National Hockey League with the Bruins for ten seasons now and I'm beginning to think that is about long enough."

He may, however, he indicated, return to the Bruins next season as a "part-time" goaler, but it was certain he would not take on the full-time job of net-minding.

NO GREAT STIR IN SCOTCH GAME

LONDON, April 6. — The England-Scotland clash at Wembley on Saturday, which will end the international season in the Old Country, is not creating the usual stir as England has already won the championship. In previous matches England beat Ireland and Wales, while Scotland only secured one point as the result of a draw with Ireland, having lost to Wales.

On Saturday England will rely mainly on seasoned veterans, but the Scottish selectors have made many changes in an attempt to find a winning combination, and of the eight players drawn from English clubs four are from Preston, who in consequence will have out a weakened league team against Derby County at Deepdale on Saturday.

The International teams are as follows:

England — Woodley (Chelsea), Sproaton (Leeds United), Hapgood (Arsenal), Willingham (Huddersfield Town), Cullis (Wolverhampton), and Copping (Arsenal), Matthews (Stoke City), Hall (Tottenham Hotspurs), Fenton (Middlesbrough), Stephenson (Leeds United) and Bastin (Arsenal).

Scotland — Cumming (Middlesbrough), Anderson (Hearts), Beattie (Preston), Shankly Smith (Preston), Brown (Rangers), Milne (Middlesbrough), Walker (Hearts), F. O'Donnell (Blackpool), Mutch (Preston), and Reid (Brentford).

HAWKS UPSET TORONTO LEAFS IN FIRST STANLEY CUP GAME

Alfie Moore Stars In Nets To Give Chicago 3-1 Win; Mike Karakas On Sidelines

Drillon Registers Toronto's Lone Goal—Leafs' Attack Sluggish

TORONTO, April 6 (CP)—Amid some of the sharpest managerial fistic and verbal duelling in major-league hockey history, Chicago Black Hawks fluttered toward the Stanley Cup today with Alfie Moore the central figure of the latest drama in the dizzy, daffy National League playoffs of 1938.

Crippled and tired, Hawks outfought Toronto Maple Leafs last night to score a 3-1 victory over the league champions in the first game of the best-of-five Stanley Cup final. They did it with their goaler, Mike Karakas, on the sidelines and Mush March, a veteran wing star, useless after one period.

Even more exciting than the upset result was the furore raised over Moore, who has seen major and minor-league experience, but mostly minor. Before Alfie went out to inspire Hawks to victory bedlam broke loose among officialdom of the two teams. Moore survved it all to emerge as hero of the game.

The backstage drama began yesterday afternoon when Karakas found he could not stand on his right foot because of a fractured big toe suffered Sunday night against New York Americans. Hawks prepared to use Goaler Dave Kerr of New York Rangers, one of the league's best goalies.

Refuses Permission

But Conny Smythe refused Chicago permission to play Kerr, and at a special meeting before the game President Frank Calder ruled Kerr was ineligible because he already had been eliminated with Rangers. Smythe gave Coach Bill Stewart of Chicago the choice of Moore or Karakas—and Karakas couldn't stand on his broken toe.

Angered by Smythe's attitude and charging, as did Moore, that Leafs called Moore to Maple Leaf Gardens before any decision had been reached at the meeting, Stewart exchanged heated words with Smythe and finally traded punches with him. He also fought with Hal (Baldy) Cotton, former Leaf winger, before the corridors were cleared and the nervous, shaky Moore skated out with Hawks.

Moore, who played with Americans last season after Roy Worters was injured and with Pittsburgh Hornets of the International-American League this season, told Smythe he would "eat the puck" to beat the Leafs. And "eat the puck" he did while Johnny Gottselig and Paul Thompson scored the goals that gave Hawks victory.

Leafs were made 2-1 favorites to take the game when Moore was announced as the Chicago goaler. And just one minute and 53 seconds after the start it appeared the odds were about right for Gordon Drillon, Toronto's ace rightwinger, skated in close to fire home the rebound of a short shot by Bob Davidson.

After that Alfie "ate" pucks. Gottselig got together with Cully Dahlstrom and Doc Romnes at 17.15 of the period to tie the score while Harvey Jackson was off, and Paul Thompson fired home a 45-footer midway through the second period for what proved to be the winning goal. Gottselig scored on a breakaway in the third period to settle the issue.

Cool and calculating in his work after Drillon beat him, Moore kept Hawks together while they showed 14,000 Toronto fans the brand of hockey that beat Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans in the Stanley Cup preliminaries. Mixing hard bumping with tenacious checking Hawks kept Leafs away from their goal as much as possible.

But they weren't entirely successful. Twice later Drillon, as smart a sniper as any in the N.H.L., fired pointblank, and Alfie came up with the puck. He beat Jimmy Fowler when the Leaf defenceman had him down and out of position in the second period. A half-dozen other times Moore outsmarted Leaf sharpshooters.

Leaf Attack Sluggish.

The week's layoff after touring Boston Bruins three straight for the league title didn't do Leafs any good. Against the Hawk checking the Leaf attack was sluggish, disorganized, and Goaler Broda, spectacular against Bruins, was just ordinary.

Broda fanned completely with his kick at Thompson's shot from far out on left wing. Against Boston he was picking them off from five feet and his defence wasn't making the mistakes it made last night.

The all-important first victory assured Hawks of an even break at least in the Toronto half of the series. They play here again on Thursday night, with the third game in Chicago on Sunday night and fourth if necessary next Tuesday. If a fifth game is needed it will be played here on April 14.

Victory also maintained Chicago's comeback reputation. They were down a game to Canadiens and Americans before wiping them out; they were down a goal to Leafs before they started to fly. At their tight-checking type of game Hawks looked impressive from goal out, the defence clearing well and the forwards checking back until Leafs were tired of it all.

Miracle Man

Sweet William, he is to the Chicago hockey fans. That's Bill Stewart (ABOVE), a referee in the National Hockey League last year, who took over the managerial job with Chicago's Black Hawks and now has the team in the Stanley Cup finals. His team was rated strictly a misfit cast and barely nosed out Detroit Red Wings for a playoff berth, but now they're one step from the peak. Strange are the ways of the National League!

Barons' Players Get Club Bonus

CLEVELAND, April 6 (AP).—Al Sutphin, president of Cleveland Barons of the International-American Hockey League, last night presented a $5,000 bonus to the team—or rather what was left of his team.

Only thirteen of the injury-riddled squad were able to attend the disbanding banquet last night. All players will share in the bonus, a $1,000 league first place prize and receipts from the playoff, in which the Barons were eliminated Monday night by the Syracuse Stars. Coach Bill Cook received a separate bonus from the club.

ERNIE LOMBARDI AS PLAYER BAIT FOR CINCINNATI

(By the Associated Press).

Dallas, Tex.—Frank Crosetti, the regular shortstop whose absence may account for some of New York Yankees' poor exhibition performances, may be back in the lineup soon. Crosetti was able to gibe his lame leg a workout yesterday

Columbia, S.C. — With George (Kiddo) Davis, veteran outfielder, gone, Cincinnati Reds are reported to be using Ernie Lombardi, the big catcher, as "bait" for a trade for a hard-hitting outfielder. Wally Berger of the Giants is the coveted player, but there's no indication yet that negotiations have been opened. Davis left the club yesterday, saying he would ask to be put on the voluntary retired list.

Clearwater, Fla.—"Us on a bus" may be a popular tune, but not with Brooklyn Dodgers. They have been taking a lot of bus rides to get around the grapefruit circuit lately, and feel pretty tired as a result. They blame these long jaunts and their cramped legs for their six straight exhibition defeats.

Longview, Tex. — President Alva Bradley of Cleveland Indians is beaming because "we don't have to worry about any second base problem." The Indians yesterday signed Jimmy Webb, St. Louis Cardinal rookie, recently made a free agent, and have received "very cheerful" reports on Sammy Hale's sore arm.

Rome, Ga.—Lynn Nelson and Nelson Potter probably will be Philadelphia Athletics' chief relief pitchers this season, Nelson, veteran from last year, has been doing good work while Potter, a rookie, has received praise from Connie Mack for his rescue work.

Longview, Tex.—They're calling Bill Terry of New York Giants the "Pied Piper of Memphis" these days because so many of the youngsters cut adrift when Commissioner Landis cracked down on St. Louis Cardinals and their affiliates have been coming around looking for jobs with the Giants' farms. Three of them showed up at College Station and were told to trail along until they could be interviewed today.

Orlando, Fla.—Ossie Bluege, at 37 the oldest infielder in the American League, is Manager Bucky Harris' choice for a 50-50 share in the Washington Senators' second-base job. Bluege will replace Buddy Myer against left-handed pitching. Said Harris: "Three or four days a week he can give us a great game out there."

REDS KEEP UP BOSTON BATTLE TO MEET STARS

TORONTO, April 6 (C.P.). — It needs only a little imagination to picture the coming International-American Hockey League titular series between Providence Reds and Syracuse Stars as a renewal of the feuding between Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs.

That's really what it amounts to, for Reds are the farm hands of the Boston club while a quick run down the Maple Leafs roster will show many a player who used to do his stuff with Eddie Powers' Stars. So it looks as if the Toronto-Boston "war" didn't end when Leafs dumped Bruins from the National League playoff scene recently.

Reds qualified to meet the defending champion Stars in the league final by ousting Philadelphia Ramblers last night with a 3-2 overtime victory in the third game of their best-of-three series for the Eastern Division title. Reds won the first game 5-3 on Saturday and lost 1-0 on Sunday. Stars knocked off Cleveland Barons in two straight to win the Western Section championship.

The two teams will start their battling for the championship—in a best-of-five series—at Providence on Thursday night. Second game also will be played on Reds' home ice on Saturday, while the third game will be played in Syracuse on Sunday. Stars will draw the fourth game if necessary, and if the series goes the limit it will be finished in Providence.

Art Giroux, blond veteran who played amateur hockey in Montreal, scored the winning goal in the seventh minute of overtime. His tally came after Ramblers had wiped out a two-goal margin Reds worked up in the first period.

Lorin Mercer and Jackie Keating tallied for Reds in the opening session. Hugh Gustafson got one back in the middle period and Joe Krol scored the second Philadelphia goal in the last session.

Memorial Cup

(By The Canadian Press).

Oshawa Generals came through with a 6-2 victory over Perth Blue Wings last night in the first game of their Memorial Cup Eastern Canada playdown final. Generals need one more victory in their best-of-three series to qualify for the cup final against St. Boniface Seals, Western champions. The three teams left in the running are:

East.
Ontario—Perth, Oshawa.
West.
Manitoba—St. Boniface.

Mike Jacobs is working on the bout for May 20 at the Garden...They say the bookies cut themselves a nice piece of pie when Teddy's Comet tore a leg ligament yesterday and was shelved...He was well-liked at 12-1 in the Kentucky Derby winter books...Joe (Flash) Gordon is finding Tony Lazzeri's Yankee shoes a trifle roomy, coming up with a .246 batting average and five errors in 16 games ... Now that the Sammy Baugh bubble has "busted," maybe Frankie Frisch can get around to thinking about Art Garibaldi or the return of Joe Stripp as his Cardinal third baseman...

Allan Survivors

(By The Canadian Press).

Trail Smoke Eaters neared a spot in the Allan Cup final last night by taking their second straight victory over Port Arthur Bearcats in their best-of-five series for the Western Canada title. Bearcats need now to win three in a row to take the title. Four teams are in contention for the Dominion Senior championship, held last year by Sudbury Tigers. They are:

East.
Quebec—Quebec; Ontario—Cornwall.
West.
Ontario—Port Arthur; British Columbia—Trail.

Railways coaches for campers will be placed in the Highlands of Scotland.

OSHAWA WHIPS PERTH 6 TO 2 EASTERN FINAL

OSHAWA, April 6.—Oshawa Generals staged a five-goal scoring spree in the last period before some 4,000-odd fans here last night to defeat Perth Blue Wings, 6-2, in the first game of the Eastern Canada junior finals for the right to meet St. Boniface Seals for the Memorial Cup. The Generals were good value for their win, only the sensational work of Dinny McManus in the Blue Wings' net stopping them from stowing the game safely away earlier in the contest.

In the last period the Blue Wings appeared to get rattled, drawing needless penalties, and, once they opened up, the fleet-footed Oshawans outsped them to rap home goals in convincing style. Previously the Gene Chouinard-coached squad had played a close-checking game, going on the offensive only occasionally, which, combined with a masterful performance by McManus, nullified the many scoring chances that Taylor, Krantz and company had from close in.

Krantz, Taylor Feature.

Keith (Red) Krantz and the ever dangerous Billy Taylor did all of Oshawa's sniping, tallying three apiece, with Doc Dafoe being the tough luck player of the evening as he was robbed of numerous chances.

Perth took the lead in the first period after being outshot by a wide margin when Hepworth was left uncovered in front of the Oshawa net knocking in Buell's pass. Krantz tied up the score a few minutes later when he poked home McTavish's rebound as McManus failed to smother it completely.

The second period was scoreless with Perth having but two shots on the Oshawa net and checking continuously to make the game a listless affair to watch, as Oshawa was unable to finish off their scoring plays, McManus suffered an injured arm when bodied accidentally by Ross but returned after repairs.

The last period was less than a minute old when Oshawa stowed the game safely away, Taylor scoring on a pretty rush with Dafoe. Less than a minute later Taylor scored again, this time when he snared a loose puck after Shortt had golfed the disc during a Perth ganging attack with Oshawa a man shy. Perth opened up wide in an every man up offensive in an effort to cut down the Oshawa lead, with the result that Oshawa added two more goals on breakaways, Krantz getting the first on a double pass from Brunnel and Knipfel, and Taylor getting the next on Shortt's pretty passout, all coming within the first six minutes.

Play Roughened Up.

The game then roughened up for the first time, with eight penalties being meted out, of which Perth drew five, mostly for offenses caused by losing their tempers. Oshawa had command of the play, but Perth doggedly continued trying, finally scoring at the fourteen-minute mark, when Bill Jackson pushed home Les Douglas's pass following a faceoff in Oshawa territory. Oshawa came right back for the prettiest goal of the night, Krantz scoring after Brunnel made the play and left him uncovered in front of McManus. Perth continued their rough tactics and what few scoring chances they had were taken care of by Bobby Forster who again turned in a meritorious effort in the Oshawa net.

A big team, the Blue Wings' main fault appeared to be their slowness in getting their shots away once they reached the Oshawa zone. Occasionally the Perth squad had considerable luck at forechecking, but this generally boomeranged, with a fleet General streaking down the ice, and but for the brilliance of McManus in goal would have made a runaway of the game.

Taylor, Shortt, Dafoe, Krantz, and Brunell all turned in strong games on the Oshawa forward line, while Ab Tonn led a number of dangerous goalward sorties besides being a bulwark on defence. For the losers McManus was a standout, with Graham Tysic, Jack Hepworth, Jack Buell and Les Douglas all showing to advantage on the attack. Sandy Ross was the pick of the losers defensively besides leading a number of power plays, but weakened his team by drawing down four penalties.

The second game of the series will be played in Ottawa Thursday night, and on their showing last night the Generals should be top-heavy favorites to take the series in straight games.

Trail Smoke Eaters Nearer The Goal

CALGARY, April 6—(CP)—Trail Smoke Eaters' scoring machine was in high gear today as the British Columbia senior hockey champions headed for Saskatoon with the western title and a berth in the Allan Cup final apparently within their grasp.

Port Arthur Bearcats felt the sting of Trail's vaunted attack as they bowed 8-1 here last night. It was Smokesters' second straight victory and odds were the Kootenay leaguers would end the series in the third game at Saskatoon Friday. If a fourth game is necessary it probably will be played at Saskatoon Monday.

Demoralized by the dazzling speed and passing of the trail forwards, Bearcats could not match their performance of the first game at Edmonton when they forced two overtime periods before Smoke Eaters won 5-3.

82-Year-Old Douro Resident Assists In The Farm Chores

Edward Sullivan Hale And Hearty In Advanced Age—Recalls Early Days

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, April 6.—On January 29, 1846, there was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Sullivan (nee Johanna Tobin) a son, who was named Edward. There were four sons and three daughters, one of the daughters dying in infancy. Edward Sullivan, who resides on the homestead with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sullivan, was the fourth child in the family. A brother, Timothy Sullivan, died at Mount Pleasant, Mich., in January, 1936; Matthew died at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., in March, 1935. A sister, Bridget, Mrs. Thomas Middlebrook, is also buried at Sault Ste. Marie; Mrs. Patrick Fallon died in Peterborough, July, 1927. A brother, Maurice, resides in Detroit. He suffered a very severe illness a few months ago but recovered.

In may, 1878, Edward Sullivan was married to Miss Johanna Sheehan, also of Douro. There are nine surviving children of this union, several died in infancy and two daughters, Mrs. Patrick O'Grady and Mrs. Felix Lynch died some years ago. Surviving children are: John, Laura and Mrs. Michael Sheehan of Peterborough; Sylvester of Rochester, N. Y.; Leo of Windsor; Herbert, in Western Canada; Mrs. David Hart and Miss Rosabelle Sullivan, in Toronto and Frank on the homestead. Mr. Sullivan has twenty-four grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Recalling the early pioneer days, Mr. Sullivan remembers when the first bridge was built over the Indian River on the second line of Douro in 1861. The first grist mill in the locality was where Staples' chopping mill is now located.

The school which Mr. Sullivan attended was at the junction of the second line and the road to the mill. His first teacher was a Mr. Keenan. With a sparkle in his eyes, and with a chuckle, he recalls that on his first day at school he refused to go up to class and was severely strapped by the teacher and again thrashed when he got home. In spite of those who talk of the good old days we rather feel thankful for the modern way of handling a child on his first day of school. In later years he would be reassured and encouraged in an understanding way on the day of one of life's greatest adventures — starting to school. Other teachers were Miss Thompson, Miss Wren, Miss Callaghan and Miss Cummings.

All harvesting was done with cradle and scythe in those days. Logging bees were common; he remembers once when a stumping bee continued for two weeks on the farm of the late John Walsh. Stumping machines were used, of a primitive kind. Roads were bad and there were corduroy bridges, "de corduroy road goes bumpity bump," to quote Drummond. Wool was taken to be carded and then to the weavers to be made into full-cloth and flannel. Long knee boots were worn. Some of them had a strap of bright read leather at the top which was proudly displayed. Mostly oxen were used; there were few horses then. At a funeral there would be a few wagons and then several men on horse-back. Rather a big contrast to a modern funeral.

Wheat was taken to Peterborough and later to the newly-built local mill. The first local miller was Louis Borland. Mr. Sullivan remembers that sixty years ago the farmers were ploughing on March 17.

Only two of his schoolmates, James Collins and Mrs. Frank Fairen, both of Peterborough, are living. People were sociable in pioneer days. There was much singing at a gathering of neighbors. Young folks would walk five or six miles to a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan celebrated quietly the fifty-third anniversary of their marriage in May, 1931, and in February 1932, Mrs. Sullivan was called to her eternal reward. Of a particularly happy and agreeable disposition, Mr. Sullivan has a host of friends. He has a keen sense of humor. The three little grandchildren in the home with him are very fond of "grandpa" and he takes keen delight in their company. At his request Teresa and Bernard, aged six and four, sang several songs most delightfully for the Examiner correspondent, displaying splendid musical talent. The chair in which Mr. Sullivan sat to have a picture taken is one won by him in the autumn of 1935 at the county ploughing match on a nearby farm. He was the oldest ploughman on the field in his eighieth year. He has never out-lived his usefulness and still helps a great deal at farm chores, etc.

Douro Pioneer

EDWARD SULLIVAN

Hale and hearty in his 83rd year, he assists in the farm work on the Douro homestead. He is the father of a large family and grandfather of 24 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Strikers Celebrate

They're out on strike but they appear to be happy about the whole thing. It's a nocturnal picture outside the Milwaukee Power plant at Saginaw, Michigan, where members of the utility workers branch of the C.I.O. are out on strike. The strike in this and other similar plants had a large part of the electrical service of lower Michigan tied up. Building fires, having a bite to eat and bringing along their musical instruments the strikers make sure time doesn't drag as they bar all but C.I.O. members from entering the plant.

MORE ABOUT—

ELECTIONS

will be no more secret contributions to political parties nor secret expenditures.

Except at election time there will be no limits placed on expenditures, but during election time the amount which may be expended in each constituency will be limited according to the number of voters.

No Limits Set

The limits are left blank in the bill and are to be fixed by the committee after study.

Not more than three corporations may make expenditures on behalf of any candidate during an election. These may represent the local or constituency association, a national party association and a provincial association.

The bills were received with approval by all parties in the House, Conservative Leader Bennett, A. A. Heaps (C.C.F. Winnipeg North) and Rene Peletier (S.C. Peace River) agreeing with the principles as outlined by Mr. Power.

One of the amendments Mr. Power said the government would propose later would prohibit a candidate from seeking election on the ground he would exert himself more actively than his opponents to secure the expenditure of public funds in payments to individuals, groups or organizations or on the ground his party, if returned to power, would give more favorable consideration to such expenditures than other parties or groups.

Other amendments will be calculated to prevent the use of force against speakers at public political meetings. The provision does not include heckling or questions unless it reaches the stage of breaking up a meeting or prevents the speaker from talking when it is considered force.

No Advance Pledges

Still another amendment is aimed at present candidates being asked to pledge themselves in advance of elections to certain policies or courses of action.

Provisions in the 1934 legislation disqualifying inmates of government institutions or municipal homes for the poor and Doukhobors from voting are dropped from the new bill.

"The bil lis a self-denying ordinance," said Mr. Power of the political expenditures measure. "It is a self-protective ordinance so far as members of parliament are concerned. From the purely politician's standpoint it proposes to take steps to prevent an increase in electoral expenditure and to bring it to the point where an ordinary citizen can face the prospect of an election with honest intention and clean hands."

An Existing Tendency

A tendency to look upon politicians with contempt was growing in Canada. With it went a tendency to regard elections as farcical and electoral changes as influenced only by the amount of money spent by the victorious party. An analysis of recent elections could not support this view but it existed.

"Our present democratic system is built on confidence," he continued. Destroy that confidence and the value of our institutions is almost entirely impaired. A greater threat to democracy than the "isms" that now infest the body politic is the belief that electoral manipulation and electoral manoeuvring is undermining the very basis of democracy.

"We must if we wish to firmly establish democracy again in the minds of our people pay some heed to that belief and endeavor to cure the ills that appear at the moment to be inherent in it."

Safeguards in the new legislation would be of little value unless changes were made in the controverted elections act, said Mr. Bennett. There should be a summary procedure under which a member who violated the law at election time could be deprived of his seat.

The present complicated machinery and technicalities should be swept away and with it the requirement of a $1,000 deposit from a person wishing to upset an election. If members were faced with the loss of their seats they would be more careful to see that the law was observed at election time.

The Franchise and Election Bill precipitated a debate on compulsory voting, proportional representation and the alternative vote. All three had been rejected by a House Committee and none were embodied in the legislation.

Favor Alternative Vote.

Both Mr. Bennett and Justice Minister Lapointe declared themselves in favor of the alternative vote although Mr. Lapointe saw little hope of its being adopted at the present session. Mr. Bennett was opposed to proportional representation, but believed compulsory voting worthy of further study.

Charles Bothwell (Lib. Swift Current), chairman of the Election and Franchise Committee for the past two sessions, gave the reasons for the committee's action, and said compulsory voting was too expensive considering the value of the additional votes it would bring out.

Proportional representation and the alternative vote did not give true representation to all groups in actual practice and led to the multiplication of groups and to indecisive results.

To-day the House will resume debate on the Government's unemployment relief policy.

Ottawa Bicycle Fans Get Organized To Combat Epidemic Of Thefts

Ottawa, April 6 (CP)

A BICYCLE Protective Association was formed last night to combat thefts and accidents involving bicycles in this city. Representatives of public institutions and organizations, business men and bicycle owners attended the meeting.

Numerous suggestions were received during the meeting and the incoming executive was urged to do all in its power to put an end to what several speakers termed "a vicious racket." It was stated that despite increased police protection and a system of licensing in vogue since 1935, bicycle thefts have increased. In 1935 total thefts were 550 and last year 970. Insurance rates had increased 60 per cent within the past few years due to the large number of thefts.

The Warner children are: Joan, 18; H. B. Jr., 17, and Lorraine, 15 None of them yet has an inclination to follow in their father's footsteps.

"There's too much competition and too many heartaches in the theatrical world," said their father.

expected little from it and that the body carried no respect. He suggested instead the probe be carried out by a Royal Commission.

An opponent of the settlement with the Quebec companies, Mr. Roebuck and other members heard Highways Minister McQuesten defend it by saying the Government "could not sensibly have taken any other action." Last spring Mr. McQuesten had opposed a settlement "because we were not then up to a point where we had to settle and we were saving $275,000 a month in the interim."

Mr. McQuesten was a colleague of Mr. Roebuck on the Hydro Commission that directed the publicly-owned enterprise when the old contracts were cancelled. The Highways Minister said he resigned because of his heavy duties as head of the Highways Department and chairman of the Niagara Parks Commission.

Steward Murphy Traps Wolf On Border Of Game Preserve

Wolves Are Plentiful In North Burleigh Killing Off The Deer

The largest timber wolf to be killed in this district this year was trapped by Steward Murphy at the head of Stoney Lake. On Tuesday Mr. Murphy shipped the animal's hide to the Department of Game and Fisheries to claim the $15 bounty offered by the government.

Weighing close to eighty pounds, the animal measured seven feet from tip to tip when taken out of the trap. Mr. Murphy said he had tripped him on the 12th Concession of Burleigh township, just on the edge of the game preserve. He had noted earlier that wolves were killing the deer that abound in the preserve and had come across several half-eaten carcasses, he said. He set three traps in the neighborhood of one of the carcasses and later in the week found the animal, still very much alive, caught in one of them. A bullet from a revolver he was carrying put an end to the animal.

Wolves are plentiful in the district at the head of Stoney Lake where he resides, according to Mr. Murphy. "This one just happened to be the unlucky one; there were lots of others around," he said. Each night during the winter they could be heard howling, he said. Deer are plentiful in the preserve but are being killed off by the wolves. Mr. Murphy said he had killed ten wolves previous to this one, during his life in the woods. All the rest he caught in snares, which he said was the easiest method. That is now illegal although trapping or shooting them is much more difficult, he said.

JOSEPH CROWE IS LAID TO REST

Civic officials, labor leaders, and members of the militia joined Tuesday in paying tribute to the memory of Joseph Crowe, former alderman of this city who had lived in Peterborough for three-quarters of a century, and who died Sunday on his 77th birthday. His funeral was conducted by Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence at 376 Brock street.

The funeral was largely attended by his wide circle of friends and associates, and flowers were banked high about the bier. Representatives of the city council and of organized labor, with both of which groups he had been prominently associated, were present. Several members of the old 57th Regimental Band, of which he was a charter member, were in attendance. Members of Peterborough Lodge No. 111, of which he was a veteran member, were on hand.

VISITING MILLBROOK.

J. A. Smith reported this morning that already members of the Horticultural Society have recruited a party that will require six cars for the trip to Millbrook Thursday evening.

GETS ADJOURNMENT.

Clifford Henry, who pleaded guilty two weeks ago to driving without a license asked for another adjournment and obtained it when the court was informed that Henry had obtained a job and wanted a chance to make up his fine.

CASE WITHDRAWN.

A charge against Wilson Northey of Smith Township of obtaining goods under false pretences which has been adjourned several times, was withdrawn by the Crown this morning and the case dismissed.

DEPOSITS INCREASE

No business recession has struck school children, it would appear from deposits in school banks. Total on deposit a year ago was $17,899.13, while now it has jumped to $19,361.97, according to figures read at Tuesday night's meeting of the Board of Education.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE BETTER

Attendance at both public and high schools here is on the upgrade, according to figures read at the Board of Education's meeting Tuesday night. At the Collegiate and Vocational School attendance last month was 95.63 per cent; at public schools in the city it had jumped to 92.64, considerably higher than in previous months.

WINTER OFFICIALLY GONE.

Despite the cold weather of the past few days, the Parks Committee of the City Council has officially pronounced winter gone. All the boards have been removed from the city's free skating rinks, not to be erected again until next winter arrives, and children have regretfully thrown their skates into obscure corners, where their mothers will find them in spring housecleaning time.

A LEAFIAN FANETTE.

There is at least one feminine fan in Peterborough who is strong for the Maple Leafs. She called The Examiner Office last night to inquire about the score in the Leafs-Black Hawks game, and when told the Chicago team had won, her disgusted "Oh heck," was vigorous enough to develop static in the receiver.

WHEN THE CAMERA SHOOTS YOU.

According to Nagle (The Colonel) Phelan, The Examiner's candid camera shots must be attracting a lot of interest. His picture was one of a recent group. He estimated that more than two hundred persons telephoned him about it, some of them to enquire about the subject of his apparent concentration and others to assure him that it was O.K.

TRAFFIC CASES.

There was a heavy list of traffic cases in police court this morning. J. G. Fowlie, L. Latta and W. J. Walker were fined $10 and costs for driving without a driver's permit. James McGarry paid $5 and costs for not producing a permit when called upon, John J. Brady was assessed $5 and costs for speeding, and Lorne Twomey fined $2 and $3 for driving a car equipped with a defective horn.

RECALLS BICYCLE INCIDENT.

City Clerk Armstrong recalled this morning that the reference in the "Do You Remember?" column of The Examiner several days ago to the prominent lawyer who was charged with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk applied to R. M. Dennistoun, K.C., of Dennistoun, Peck and Kerr, now Mr. Justice Dennistoun of the Supreme Court of Manitoba. Incidentally the charge was dismissed.

TWO SCHOLARSHIPS

The Board of Education Tuesday night welcomed a gift of $50 from the Otonabee chapter, I.O.D.E., to be used at the discretion of Dr. H. R. H. Kenner in providing two scholarships of equal sums, one to the Vocational and one to the Academic departments. The gift had no strings attached and Principal Dr. Kenner may choose any subject or subjects on which to make the awards.

SOIL GROUP FORMED.

A group of young farmers will begin on Thursday night a course in soil experimental work under the direction of F. C. Paterson at the Agricultural Department's office. This is a phase of agriculture in which Mr. Paterson is keenly interested, and as it is becoming more generally recognized as of primary importance to farmers, the organization of this group will be the first concerted effort in the county to study and investigate local soil conditions.

IN F. WALLWORK'S WINDOW.

A card in the window of Frank Wallwork, job printer, north of George Dormer's "Sugar Bowl" on George street, north of Brock, is obviously not an advertisement of his business. Presumably it was included among other specimens of his typographical art displaying the quality of the work turned out from his presses, and represents some of the made up stock for sale to others. The striking and either unconsciously humorous or satirical appeal on the card is: "Don't go elsewhere to be swindled, come inside." Friends of Mr. Wallwork know, of course, that the dominant note in that slogan does not apply to himself or his business ideals, but there is the card frankly and unblushingly meeting the gaze of those who pass by. Apparently the explanation of its warning message may be that Mr. Wallwork's impressions of some business methods suggested that such a card should attract some buyers to whom it would adequately apply. Probably its bold humor was intended for the rare type of business man who is not afraid of irony in advertising even if it is loaded with dynamite likely to blow up his business.

A. B. BURROWS IS RE-ELECTED HEAD MALE VOICE CHOIR

A. B. Burrows was re-elected president of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir at the eighteenth annual meeting of the organization held in Hooper's tea rooms Tuesday night. Mr. Burrows made an unsuccessful attempt to retire from the position. Charles Renaud was re-appointed conductor.

In his opening address President Burrows referred to the very pleasant conditions under which this year's annual meeting was being held and to the complete and wholehearted support of every member. The choir, he said, had been fortunate in securing the services of an outstanding conductor in Charles Renaud, who in a few short months had transformed the choir into a well-trained chorus of a high musical standard. It was evident, the president said, that the organization was on its way to accomplish things musically that it had never previously felt able to attempt. There was a new spirit of zest and optimism and already many applications had been received for membership for the coming season. President Burrows expressed his personal thanks to the executive and to The Examiner for the support given during the season.

Dr. C. H. Fulford, vice president, A. H. White, secretary and D. R. Fleming, treasurer all spoke briefly, Mr. Fleming reporting a substantial balance. Reports were also received from the various committee chairmen, E. W. Lloyd, membership, Thomas Williams, music, A. B. Burrows, publicity, and H. G. E. Choate, social, all being heard from.

Officers Elected

With Secretary A. H. White in the chair the election of officers was held, the appointment of honorary president and honorary vice presidents being deferred until the fall meeting. Officers chosen were: A. B. Burrows, president, re-elected; Thomas Pitchford, vice-president; A. H. White, secretary, re-elected; D. R. Fleming, treasurer, re-elected; S. Ivey, librarian, re-elected; and W. F. Skitch and W. K. McGee, auditors.

Charles Renaud was unanimously re-appointed conductor and Mrs. Renaud as accompanist for the coming season and President Burrows on behalf of the choir presented Mrs. Renaud with an honorarium in the form of a cheque.

Mr. Renaud made a suitable reply for his wife and himself, expressing thanks for the co-operation given him and predicting good things for the next season which will commence with practices in the early fall.

Committee chairmen were elected as follows: Membership, E. W. Lloyd, re-elected; music, Dr. C. H. Fulford; publicity, H. G. E. Choate, and social, F. Biddle.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Y.M.C.A., the Examiner, J. J. Turner, James Dutton, George Sorenson, Mr. Choate, and R. R. Hall, K.C.

After the business portion of the meeting was concluded the gathering took on a social atmosphere with the arrival of guests in the persons of the soloists who had assisted the choir in its concerts, Mrs. James Goldie, Miss Geraldine Collins, Miss Trucie Pearson and Mrs. Ross Williamson. Unavoidably absent were Mrs. Blanche Cowan and Mrs. Agnes Logan Green. Other guests included Mrs. P. Hooper, Mrs. E. M. Foster, Mrs. C. Searles and Mrs. A. B. Burrows of the Peterborough String Quintette, the other member being unable to attend.

Flowers Presented

The serving of refreshments was interrupted by the presentation of a bouquet of flowers to the choir accompanist Mrs. Chas. Renaud, as a token of esteem and appreciation from the members. Secretary White made the presentation.

Mr. Renaud gratefully acknowledged the assistance rendered by the String Quintette in the Port Hope and Peterboro concerts, Fred Skitch mentioned the fine spirit shown by the Norwood members of the choir in regular attendance at practices, and Dr. Fuford thanked the lady soloists for their splendid contribution to the success of the season's concerts.

The guests briefly replied.

Max Peters and Tom Parker, two members of the choir both contributed enjoyable numbers to the program.

Powder Plant Rent

Valuable Contribution Made To Health Of Province

Inoculation Of Children Against Scarlet Fever Been Successful

Peterborough has made a valuable contribution to the health authorities of this province by inoculating school children against scarlet fever, in the opinion of Dr. A. W. McPherson, public school medical officer who took over duties of Dr. G. Murray Fraser, while the Medical Officer of Health was victim of the disease. Dr. McPherson, in a report tendered to the Board of Education on Tuesday night, said that the epidemic has receded materially during the past two months and particularly during the past few weeks.

Dr. G. Raymore Scott, chairman of the Board, agreed that the results of the Dick tests—to determine whether pupils are susceptible to the disease — and the inoculations given, will be of untold benefit to health authorities, in ascertaining the efficacy of these means of prevention.

"The value of these inoculations and of the Dick tests cannot at present be estimated," reported Dr. McPherson. "It may require years to determine its relation to the control of scarlet fever epidemics and its value as an immunizing agent."

Haldimand and other Southern Ontario counties are not yet in the restricted area which covers Eastern and part of Western Ontario.

CAMPBELLFORD

Final Plans Made For Bible Drama

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 6.—Final plans for their Bible drama and oratorical contest were made by members of St. Andrew's Young People's Society at their meeting held on Monday. The president, Mrs. Bruce Grills, conducted the meeting, which took the form of a social and a delightfully varied program was arranged by the social convenors, Miss Dorothy Reynolds and Mrs. Free Clarke.

The first number on the program was a cornet solo by Wilsie Phillips, which won an encore, Jack Cassan was his accompanist. Miss Frances Hendy followed with a vocal solo, which also called for an encore. She was accompanied by Mrs. M. McFarlane.

A guitar duet by the Misses Doris and Josephine Locke received much well deserved applause and the medley of old-time favorites on the violin by Jack Bell was appreciated by everyone. The concluding number was a piano duet by Wilsie Phillips and Jack Cassan.

VACANCY REBATES ORDERED PAID

For vacancies of properties in 1936 on which the taxes were paid in 1937, cheques for the following amounts were ordered to be refunded by the council Monday night: Joseph S. Bell, $9.10; George A. Macdonald of Chicago, $106.15; the Royal Bank, $39.79; Bradburns Limited, $111.19; and Harold A. Morrow, $57.97.

The Bell property at 197 Hunter street was unoccupied five months in 1936 from April to September. The George A. Macdonald property is the house at 300 London street owned by the former general manager of the Quaker Oats Company in this city, and now occupied by T. A. MacKay. The Royal Bank appeal was made by H. C. Scotheran in regard to Room 209, in the Royal Bank Building, vacant 12 months, and Room 205 and half of Room 206, vacant eight months.

The Bradburns Limited properties included the assembly hall over the rear of 338 George street, 203 Charlotte street, 305, 306 Louis street, 372 Mark street, and others. The Harold A. Morrow properties were at 249 Aylmer, 339 Aylmer, 444 George and so-called tenements over 442 446, and 444 George street.

Candid Camera Shots Are Making Big Hit With Examiner Readers

The Examiner's staff photographer used to think he had a fair idea of what pictures people are interested in seeing in the paper.

He has changed his opinion now that candid camera shots have proved to excite more curiosity than any other photos that appear. Because until an irate city editor had nearly pushed him out of the office door and ordered him to get the first of the candid camera shots, the photographer had balked at the suggestion.

No day passes without at least one victim whose picture has appeared, coming in to claim the free enlargement offered by this paper. At least fifty per cent of the people whose pictures appear, find their way into the editorial department sooner or later to claim enlargements. Only one girl has yet objected—because she was not supposed to be downtown—but she came downstairs later to claim the print, although she would not come up to the editorial department to get an order for it from the city editor whom she had raked over the coals a few days earlier.

At newsstands, in stores, proprietors tell the Examiner that large numbers of customers pick up the paper each night with the remark "I wonder whose picture is in tonight."

$1,184.75 TAXES UNCOLLECTED FOR SEYMOUR TOWNSHIP

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 6.—The Township Council granted three increases in salary at their monthly session held in the township clerk's office on Monday afternoon, when all members were present and Reeve Robert Innes presided. The salary of the clerk, Wesley Stephens, was increased by fifty dollars per annum, on motion of Councillors Wight and Bateson, and the treasurer's salary went up ten dollars per year, on motion of Councillors Bateson and Kelly. The other increase went to the operator of the township road grader, who will receive forty cents an hour for his time during the coming summer. A deputation consisting of Messrs. J. A. Irwin, W. S. Milne, P. B. Nelson, and Howard Clark addressed the Council with a view to interesting them in the purchase of the United Church sheds. No action was taken on the matter.

After the school report of G. W. Anderson had been received and filed Tax Collector Mac Waddell told the Council $33,431.84 had been collected on last year's tax roll, leaving an uncollected balance of $1,184.75. The roll was accepted by the Council, who instructed Mr. Waddell to make one more collection where a seizure had been made.

Lady Member Comes To Rescue Of Absentee From Meeting

Absent Three Meetings In Succession Expulsion Is Threatened

Charles Shaw was nearly ousted from the Board of Education on Tuesday night when chairman Dr. G. Raymore Scott moved that a letter from the absent member be tabled "received."

Mrs. W. R. Morris came to member Shaw's rescue when she rose and moved that his excuse be accepted and his absence overlooked. It was the third consecutive meeting he had missed and without her motion, unanimously passed, he would have been suspended automatically. In his letter to the board Mr. Shaw apologized that urgent business had necessitated his leaving the city, and he regretted his inability to attend.

The board's meeting was delayed for three-quarters of an hour while Secretary G. H. Thompson rounded up a seventh member of the board to form a quorum, without which the board could not meet. The meeting lasted only half an hour after its six members waited for forty-five minutes.

Absent from the meeting were Charles Shaw, Dr. A. Moir, D. G. H. Melton, M. Burnham, R. A. Garbutt, and V. J. McElderry, K.C.

JUDGMENT GIVEN BY JUDGE SMOKE UPHELD ON APPEAL

Mr. Justice Urquhart upheld judgment of Judge Sheldon Smoke after hearing an appeal against his decision in a case dealing with the estate of John Clydesdale in weekly court on Tuesday.

Judge Smoke on February 15 had dismissed the appellant's claim for $756 for service alleged to have been rendered to the deceased, and the appeal was launched and heard in weekly court. R. M. Willis Chitty, K.C., and W. J. A. Fair, appeared for the appellant; F. D. Kerr, K.C., for the executors; J. M. Baird, K.C., for three infant legatees.

The judgment handed down by Mr. Justice Urquhart read in part, "The circumstances appear to support the findings of the learned trial judge. He has seen the witnesses, and, while the situation in which the plaintiff finds herself invites some sympathy, the appeal must be dismissed with costs. If costs cannot be collected from the plaintiff, the respondent and the Official Guardian are to have their costs of this appeal out of the estate."

MISSION'S WALLS SPLIT BY BOMB

HANKOW, China, April 6.—(AP).—Belated reports told to-day of the escape of a Methodist mission April 3 in a heavy Japanese air attack on Chengchow, important Lunghai railway front.

Miss Bessie Reid of Kingston, Ont., the dispatches said, was standing within a few feet of where a Japanese bomb exploded. The bomb shattered windows and cracked walls which just had been repaired after similar damage a month ago.

The staffs of the American Southern Baptist Hospital at Chengchow and the China Inland Mission Hospital at nearby Kaifeng were said to be working day and night.

Wounded, the reports said, stream in from the east, where heavy fighting continues for Suchow, Lunghai junction with the Tientsin-Pukow railroad.

This work has been organized by an International committee which has arranged to meet trains bringing in the wounded every night.

In the previous raid also Miss Reid's life was endangered.

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Barbara Kingsley, pretty young society editor of the Martinsville Post, has just "covered" another wedding. She is tried of the routine but Peter Baxter, managing editor, cheers her fading spirits. Garry Page, New York newspaper man in town for the wedding, misses his train back and Barbara, at the train to pick up pictures, offers to drive him to the Junction to catch the last train that night. They have dinner and, at the Junction, run into the wedding party, including Barbara's proud cousin, Julia. A few weeks later Natalie Kendall, a close friend of Barbara's who is a New York fashion columnist, wires Barbara of an opening on a child magazine. Barbara decides to take the position and Natalie meets her upon her arrival in New York.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 4

"I won't, Peter!"

But she did, when the train slid into Grand Central terminal the next morning. She and Natalie were hardly settled at breakfast in a nearby coffe shop until she heard a question slipping out of its locked box: "Natalie, do you know Garry Page?"

NATALIE KENDALL smiled at Barbara's impulsive question: "Natalie, do you know Garry Page?"

"Yes, not well, though," she answered. "Is he on the list of people you want to meet?"

"No, I've met him. He took me to dinner one night when he missed a train."

"Maybe we'll run across him tonight."

"Tonight? Are we going out?"

"A friend of mine, Basil Addington, is taking us to dinner and a musical. We'll do a night club or two afterwards to initiate you. Garry may be around. It's his job to see what is going on."

Barbara could almost see a small door opening into Paradise. Tonight, maybe—But she only wrinkled her nose and said: "Natalie, I feel as though I have wings! Hold me or I'll fly away with joy!"

Natalie smiled indulgently. Everything about Barbara flew upward—hair, eyes, mouth, nose. "New York won't let you fly too high, my darling! Never fear."

The orange juice was sweet and cold, the coffee ring crisp and hot. And when breakfast was finished, there was a ride up Fifth avenue, past the shops, Radio City and St. Patrick's Cathedral, to a street in the east Fifties where Natalie had her apartment. Barbara scanned the faces on the sidewalks. Some day she would know some of these people. Out there, somewhere—perhaps in the very throng at which she gazed but more probably in one of the vast white buildings—was Garry.

She brought the conversation back to him again, and Natalie talked of Garry's work.

"Is he engaged?" Barbara had not meant to ask but the question slipped out.

Natalie laughed. "No, darling, not even reported to be. He has never been talked about with any girl, come to think of it. He's a hard working young man. Don't misunderstand. The girls would rather have his violets than a wealthier man's orchids. But he just keeps the girls as friends." She drew her brows together. "It seems to me I have seen him with someone a few times—oh, yes, Ruth Merryweather—you know, the breakfast food millions. Ruth is a sweet child."

Barbara nodded happily. So he wasn't engaged. Not even the breakfast food millions could dampen her happiness today.

Natalie's apartment was strictly modern. Chromium, white leather, and scarlet draperies made a stage set for her living room. Barbara's bedroom was done in black and silver. She felt that she had stepped into a fairy tale. Any minute, the miracles would begin. She would stay here for one week and then—well, even a room in a cheap hotel or rooming house would be all right so long as she was here where life sang, wept, laughed, ached, and acted!

Natalie, who went to her office in the afternoon, brought a long white box with her when she came at six o'clock. "A welcoming present," she said.

Tme box held a shining, silken dress of yellow with a minute cape that was little more than a ruffle for her face. There were sandals, too.

"I looked into your bag to get the size," Natalie explained.

"But you shouldn't have done it," Barbara said slowly. "It's so glorious but I can't afford it and I can't accept it." In the end she did because Natalie would have it no other way.

When she looked at herself in the full-length mirror in her bedroom she hoped that she would see Garry. She never had been beautiful, she admitted honestly, but tonight there was a radiancy in her face.

"You under-estimate yourself," Natalie to ld her. "Darling, with your hair and eyes—well, you needn't sit alone evenings."

"You are saying silly things but I like it," Barbara answered, and went out into the night with Natalie and Basil Addington who was much older than she had expected. His hair was silvery, his graceful figure was growing portly, and there were fine lines in his face. But he was friendly and interesting.

"He's a broker," Natalie offered. "He didn't go under in '29."

The dinner was good, the music skipped along the streets, and Twenty-one, where they landed eventually, was crowded for midsummer. To Barbara the whole evening had been a preparation for that moment when she would look up to find Garry Page's bright head above the crowd. This was a magic night—anything could happen. She would see him. But he wasn't in Twenty-one and he wasn't at the El Morocco.

"Garry isn't around, I guess," Natalie offered.

"Garry?" Basil Addington queried. "Young Page you mean?"

Barbara nodded.

"Busy, perhaps. He sails day after tomorrow, I believe."

"Sails?" For a second the music, the dancers, the room hung suspended in silence.

"To England. I saw Hadley, the producer, today. He's persuaded Garry to run over with him and do his column from there."

"What ship does he take?" Natalie asked carelessly enough. Basil did not know.

Barbara's face was calm but she was knotting the fragile lace of her handkerchief and the chicken sandwich on her plate no longer appealed to her. Why hadn't she told him she was coming? Why had she been so filled with pride? Now he would go away—oh, a month could be an eternity! She tried to tell herself that he would have had time to do nothing but say "hello" anyway but that brief contact seemed suddenly very important.

She came to a decision before she went to sleep. In the morning she would telephone to his office. If she knew that he was going to remember her while he was gone, she could put him out of her thoughts for a month. Half a dozen words in his deep voice could keep her contented.

Still of this mind she went into a telephone booth the next morning, but with the nickel in her hand ready to place in the slot, she hesitated. She replaced the receiver. If she should call Garry now, in the midst of his preparations to sail, he would be gracious, but he might wonder what claim a girl he had seen for three hours one summer night could have on his time. Regardless that three people were waiting for the booth. Barbara leaned against the wall to consider. She wouldn't do it. She would send him a note which he would find when he returned.

She knew that her dicision was wise but her footsteps lagged a little when she went back to the street. She bought a gardenia from a flower vender and pinned it on the jacket of her gray linen suit. She put a dime into a street musician's cup.

The day was just as fair but her enthusiasm was lessened.

"Barbara Kingsley, grow up!" she told herself. "How can the guy call you when he thinks you're out in Martinsville? You did this yourself. Now like it!"

She had lunch at a tearoom and then decided to go up to the children's magazine and get acquainted. After all she didn't need Natalie to introduce her.

She was glad instantly that she had gone. The editor, a Mrs. Corbett, was sweet and plump and rather sentimental. She liked action stories, she said, but little children wanted fairy tales. She hoped Barbara could write some.

Mrs. Corbett explained the magazine's policy, then turned Barbara over to the art director for further instruction.

At the end of the afternoon, when Barbara went to say good-bye to Mrs. Corbett, she felt much happier. She knew she would like her work. The editor gave an apologetic laugh.

"I have a telephone message for you. It came in yesterday and I forgot to give it to you. Someone saw in the book notes of one of the papers that you were coming to us. Now where did I put it? Oh yes, here it is."

She handed Barbara a memorandum which read: "Call Garry Page. Eldorado 3-4555."

Girls Who Think That Men's Taste in Women Have Changed Are Fooling Themselves—Look at Those Going to the Marriage Altars

HAVE men's taste in women changed? Do they fall for an entierly different line of attractions in girls now from the kind that slayed them in the Victorian and pre-Victorian days?

Girls believe so and think Grandmother's charms and virtues are as outmoded as her clothes. Probably men are of the same opinion, but it is significant that young women nowadays have fewer beaux and receive fewer attentions from men than they did in the past and they find it more difficult to get married. Old maids used to be a rarity. Now they are a superfluity. So if I were a young huntress starting out on the man chase I should stick pretty close to the methods with which Grandma used to bring 'em back alive.

Of course, naturally, in a changing world men have made many alterations in their ideal woman, but they haven't scrapped her and set up an entirely different goddess in her place who has none of the earmarks of her predecessor. She still has the main features and they still bow the knee to her more than they realize and the modern girl suspects.

There was an era, for instance, when semi-invalidism appealed to the masculine heart, and the best bet in a girl's bag of tricks was to lie on a couch and swoon artistically. That is definitely out now. No man wants to marry a woman in these days of high-priced specialists who looks like a doctor's bill. He wants a girl who is all muscle, even if she is skinny, and who can pull her weight in the boat and who is never afflicted with megrims, real or imaginary.

But all the same the Clinging Vine is still with us and getting in her deadly work. Men are still sharpening little Miss Helpless' lead pencils, straightening out her accounts for her and marrying her because she can't take care of herself. For, while they admire efficiency in women, it is the one who makes them feel that they are about seven feet high and as strong as Joe Louis and as wise as Solomon who gets them.

Men think they admire intelligence in women nowadays. They think they want educated, cultivated women who can meet them on their own plane and discuss business, politics, literature and world trends, etc., and girls toil like beavers trying to measure up to the masculine standard. But it is perfectly discouraging to find out how little a college degree does to get them dates. It is not the blue stockings who have to cut their dances into mincemeat. It is the little nitwits in chiffon rose whose brains are in their heels instead of their heads.

In Grandma's time the girls who were the most popular with men were the ones who were smart enough to hide how smart they were; who sat at men's feet and looked up at them as if they were oracles and the staple of whose conversation was "how wise and witty and wonderful you are!" The women wisecrackers and show-offs and intellectual heavyweights don't make a hit with men now any more than they did in the past.

And there is modesty, reserve and reverence for their own bodies that used to be charms that women conjured with, but that they have thrown into the discard now because they think that men have lost their taste for them. Maybe so; maybe men like to see girls going around dressed in pants and shorts and with less clothes on than a picked jaybird; may be they like girls who will let any man paw them and who will get drunk with them. I wouldn't know. But if they do, how come there has been such a slump in marriage?

They say that men's ideal of women has changed so much that they no longer demand chastity in the girls they marry. They say they call what we used to know as a "good" girl old-fashioned, and that they consider that a woman has just as much right to sow her wild oats as a man has. They say men have got broad-minded about women, but all the men I have ever known were only broad-minded about other men's wives. They wanted their own to be like Caesar's wife, above reproach.

So I wonder if men's taste in women has altered much, after all, and if what they crave isn't still just the eternal feminine virtues of sweetness and gentleness, tenderness and goodness. DOROTHY DIX.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

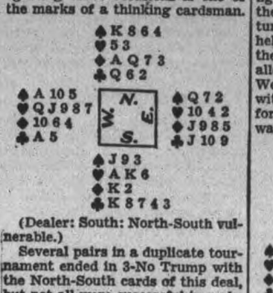
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

PAYING IN ADVANCE

IN NO TRUMP more than in suit contracts, there are occasions when it is profitable to let an early trick go so as to be better fixed later on. Picking the right place for such advance payments can mean the difference of several tricks later. Recognizing these occasions is one of the marks of a thinking cardsman.



(Dealer: South: North-South vulnerable.)

Several pairs in a duplicate tournament ended in 3-No Trump with the North-South cards of this deal, but not all were successful in making game.

The heart Q was led in all instances and allowed to hold. The heart J followed and was won with the K. All players now went after the club suit. Those who failed won the first trick with the Q, and on the second lead of the suit, when East played the 10, put up the K, which West won with the A. Two club tricks were therefore lost, as well as one heart and two spades.

Where the contract was made, the declarers realized that they could afford to lose only one club, so that after cashing the club Q, they did not cover East's 10 on the second round with the K. Their figuring was that if East had held the A, he would no doubt have captured the first trick, and if West held both the J and A, the play of the K would not gain anything. By allowing the second club to ride, West was forced to cover the 10 with the A, and only one trick was forfeited in the suit, so that game was made.

Looking Back On This Date

APRIL 6

By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date (April 6, 1796), the funeral took place at Kingston of Molly Brant, one of the famous women of Canada although there are some who would deny her that honor. Like her morecelebrated brother, Joseph, she was intensely loyal to the British throne and flag. She had been married, according to Indian rites, to Sir William Johnson, the great Father of the Loyalists, whom she outlived 22 years. Of her the late Professor A. H. Young wrote:

Fred Williams

"Mary Brant deserved every word of commendation contained in the will of Sir William. As his relict, she was regarded by the Indians, whose lawful wife, according to their customs she had been. Colonel Daniel Claus, Sir William's son-in-law, asserted in 1779 that she never mentioned his father-in-law's name without tears. From 'Miss Molly,' as she was frequently called, derived beyond any doubt a part of the influence which Sir William had over her kinsmen. As 'the elder sister of the Mohawk nation,' she was able after 1776 to keep the tribesmen, including her sometimes difficult brother, Joseph, steadfast in their loyalty to King George. For that good service she was rewarded with an annuity of £93 5s 8d.

Removing first to Niagara and then to Kingston, she received several liberal grants of land from the crown. In Kingston, in and near which several of her and Sir William's daughters were married to naval or military officers and other prominent men, she made her home. Her name appears as one of the subscribers to the first St. George's church of the town. In the burial ground of the parish, now St. Paul's churchyard, she was interred April 6, 1796, presumably near her descendants, the Earls, although there is no stone to mark the spot."

Surely the time has come when some patriotic organization should erect some memorial to this great Indian lady, whose loyalty made possible the opening of Upper Canada as a place of refuge for the Loyalists.

It was on April 6, 1915, that the last spike on the Grand Trunk Pacific was driven at Necheto, Fort Fraser, B.C. Who would then have foreseen that this great enterprise would become a burden staggering the taxpayers? Kaiser William and his advisers were responsible for a lot of worry for Canadians, not the least our railway problem, which his war messed up so badly. Yes, there are many of us old-timers who believe that had it not been for the war, the Laurier railways would have been a success, instead of the liability they are to-day.

UNCLE WIGGILY SHAVES A FOX

Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Longtail, the mouse gentleman barber, were alone in the shop. The rabbit gentleman was going to get shaved. Already the white, creamy, foamy lather was spread over his face.

A little while before this Mr. Longtail had shaved Mr. Twistytail, the fat gentleman pig, who had now gone downtown to pay his electric light bill. This left Uncle Wiggily and the mouse barber alone.

But they were not exactly alone for, looking in the back window of the shop were two Bad Chaps—the Fox and Bob Cat. They saw Uncle Wiggily stretched out in the barber chair, his face covered with lather and the Fox had just said to the Bob Cat:

"Uncle Wiggily has charlotte russe cream cake on his face. I'm going in and get some and I'll also get him."

"What's a charlotte russe cream cake?" mewed the Bob Cat who, never having gone to school, knew very little.

A Promise

"A charlotte russe is a piece of sponge cake shaped like a golf hole and filled with lovely, sweet whipped cream," whispered the Fox, still looking in at Uncle Wiggily.

"Who whipped it?" mewed the Bob Cat.

"Whipped what?" asked the Fox. "The cream on Uncle Wiggily's face. Who whipped it?"

"It doesn't matter who whipped it, Bobbie," chuckled the Fox. "What matters is that I'm going in there and get some. I'll lick the sweet cream off that rabbit's face and then I'll get him."

"What about me?" mewed the Bob Cat.

"I'll save you an ear or maybe a leg of the rabbit, promised the Fox Bad Chap.

"Thanks," mewed the Bob Cat.

"All right, you go in and get that rabbit and also the cream from the charlotte russe cake off his face and I'll wait here."

The Fox Bad Chap was almost as ignorant as the Bob Cat, always running away from school instead of going. So each of the Bad Chaps didn't know it was soap lather on Uncle Wiggily's face. They thought it was—oh, well, I needn't explain to you children. You are clever for you go to school.

While the Bob Cat waited outside the mouse gentleman's barber shop, the Fox got ready to slink in.

"Aren't you afraid?" mewed the Bob Cat.

"What! Afraid of Uncle Wiggily and a mouse? No, indeed!" boasted the Fox. Just as he started in the telephone rang and Mr. Longtail said to Uncle Wiggily.

In He Pops

"Excuse me from shaving you for a moment while I answer the 'phone, Mr. Longears," and the rabbit said yes, certainly, so he was all alone.

Then in popped the Fox.

"Ha! I have you now!" growled the Bad Chap and he leaned over Uncle Wiggily, who was helpless, wrapped in towels in the barber chair.

Then the Fox quickly with his long tongue licked the white stuff off the bunny's face. But in a moment, he knew it wasn't charlotte russe cake filling of sweet whipped cream. Oh, no! Ha! Ha!

"Soap! Soap! Soap lather!" howled the Fox, who had never been in a barber shop before. "Oh, gazooks!" He was so excited he fell down and somersaulted on the floor trying to get the soap taste out of his mouth. And then Uncle Wiggily leaped from the chair, caught up a razor and, in a few seconds, he had shaved all the hair off the tail of the Fox, making it as bare as a lead pencil.

"Oh, this is terrible!" howled the Fox as he saw in a mirror his shaved tail. "Oh, I'm worse than the Bob Cat now!" And away he ran.

Now if the roller skates will please stop putting sugar cookies on the doll carriage for wheels, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's April shower.

St. Andrew's Y.P. Discuss Problems of Citizenship.

The "Problems of Citizenship" occupied the Young People of St. Andrew's United Church at the Citizenship meeting last evening in the church parlors. Alex Young, vice-president of the Y.P.U. was in the chair.

The discussion was led by James Harvey, with the interest centering chiefly upon the abnormal use of intoxicating liquor and the attitude of the young people towards it. It was the prevailing opinion that the young people of today should take a firmer stand, refraining from the use of liquor and working by personal example and influence to rid the world of its traffic.

During the devotional period, the Scripture lesson was read by Betty Harle. Gordon Harle presided at the piano, and the poem, "The Battle of Blenheim," in which Southey pours scorn upon the glories of war, was read by Alex Young. The secretary, Harry Vass read the minutes of the last meeting.

It was decided by the young people to attend in a body the Lenten service to be held next Tuesday, also to hold a social meeting on April 19, and to attend the Presbytery Young People's meetings in St. James' United Church on April 22.

George Street W.A.

The meeting opened with the Doxology and the Lord's Prayer after which the president, Mrs. W. G. Harris read several beautiful verses on Faith. The devotional period in charge of Mrs. E. E. Harvey, included the seasonable hymn, "There is a Green Hill Far Away"; Mrs. P. Hetherington led in prayer, and the Scripture lesson, the 15th Chapter, 1st Corinthians, was read by Miss McKay, who also spoke a few words to the ladies and read the poem, "Beyond" by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Mrs. James Goldie's exquisite voice was heard in a solo, "It Was For Me," with piano accompaniment by Mrs. M. C. Parr.

As guest speaker, the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, gave an inspiring Easter message, which he opened with several appropriate Scripture verses. A vote of thanks to the guest speaker and the soloist was proposed by Mrs. H. Foote and seconded by Mrs. G. Baird.

One hundred calls were reported by Mrs. S. Armstrong, convenor of the Sick and Visiting Committee, and Mrs. P. Hetherington reported forty-six calls made by the Look-Out Committee. The meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Rev. R. T. F. Brain
Addresses Queen Mary H. & S.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of Queen Mary Home and School Association held in the kindergarten at the school on Monday evening, with the president, Mrs. E. R. Shirley, in the chair.

Scheduled as the "religious education" meeting, the guest speaker was the Rev. R. T. F. Brain, whose fine address was closely followed. "Religion cannot be taught, but must be caught," he said, and went on to trace the growth of religion in the life of an individual. First comes the concept of the supernatural, secondly the concept of sin, then grows the concept of sacrifice, followed by the concept of grace. These are fostered and nurtured by cult, creed and code, and so we have our technique for living our religious life.

A letter was read during the meeting from Miss M. Rannie in which thanks was expressed for the costumes made by the Home and School for the Music Festival. Following the roll call the junior banner was awarded for the month to Miss W. Batten's room, and the senior banner went to Principal O. M. Steer's room.

Musical entertainment was provided by beautifully played violin solos contributed by Annabelle Herd, accompanied at the piano by Edna Borland. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which tea and cookies were served, in charge of Mrs. G. S. Sollen.

Miss Rachael Young, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, was the guest speaker to the Women's Association of St. Andrew's Church at the regular monthly meeting in the Church Parlors Tuesday afternoon. Miss Young's talk was interesting and informative, and drew for her audience a clear word picture of cases she has come in contact with, in her work.

The well-attended meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Paige Rowell, who conducted the Devotional period. Encouraging reports were given by group leaders during the business session.

DESSERTS THAT WILL SWEETEN THE FAMILY'S DIPSOSITION

Baked Custards Good For Easter Season If Made Plain

By MARY MOORE

When I fix on a dessert that can be prepared in advance of a dinner to which guests have been invited, I am transformed suddenly from a harassed hen on a hot griddle to a cooing dove with time to preen her feathers (quite a bird, eh?)

Ahead-of-time-desserts can work wonders with you too, and incidentally sweeten the "tooth" and disposition of your family and guests. (The above explanatory outburst because it is our custom to serve fresh fruit for desserts, which always have to be prepared at the nick of serving time.)

Emem's Canned Peach De Luxe Dessert

Four tablespoons cornstarch, one-third cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 1 cup juice from canned peaches, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ cup top milk or cream, 2 eggs, yolks and white separated, ½ teaspoon fresh almond extract. Mix together cornstarch and sugar, and stir in the peach juice having all in top of double boiler, then pour in the boiling water and stir all over boiling water until it thickens, then let cook for 20 to 25 minutes, stirring occasionally until all taste of raw cornstarch is gone. Beat the yolks and when hot mixture is ready pour about ½ cup of it over the yolks stirring, then return all to top of double boiler to cook for 2 minutes longer. Cool. Add the salt and fold in the stiffly beaten whites and almond extract, and pour into tall stemmed serving dishes or into moistened mould and let chill. When ready to serve if done individually place half a peach well drained, rounded side up on top of each serving, and surround with ring of whipped cream, leaving much of the surface of the peach exposed.

The almond flavoring gives the pudding part of this dessert its distinction.

Lemon Mousse
(Mechanical refrigerator not necessary)

A grand springy looking dessert for Easter Sunday.

You might remember the Chocolate Mousse recipe we printed a few weeks ago—it was good wasn't it? This is equally good; the difference being its delicacy of appearance and texture.

One cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, pinch of salt, 1 cup hot milk, 3 egg yolks, ¼ cup lemon juice (2 tablespoons), 1 pint heavy cream. Mix ¼ cup of the sugar with the cornstarch and salt. Add the hot milk gradually and cook in top of double boiler for 15 minutes. Stir this constantly until it thickens and more than 15 minutes if the cornstarch does not cook in that time. Beat the yolks with the remaining sugar and add to the hot mixture and cook a few minutes more stirring. Remove from heat, add the lemon juice and cool, then fold in cream which has been whipped until stiff. Pour into freezing tray of mechanical refrigerator or into ice cream mould (or tightly covered clean lard pail) and freeze without stirring for from 3 to 4 hours. If mechanical ice box is not used pack mould in ice and salt on all sides to freeze it.

Meringue-ed Apples

This should not stand over night nor in the ice box, but can be prepared in the morning of the day of the dinner.

Core, peel and fill the centres of Spies or Pippins with shredded pineapple. You must use quick cooking apples. If not partially bake them before covering with meringue all over except the very bottom. Make the meringue by beating the whites of three eggs (to cover 6 apples) until half stiff then slowly adding 6 tablespoons powdered sugar and continuing, thoroughout the adding, beating until stiff. Spread this roughly over the apples, stick it with slivered blanched almonds, then place in over of 250 deg. Fahr., and bake for at least 1¼ hours maybe more, trying the apples for done-ness by sticking darning needle.

You will notice I have stock with the fruits you are liable to have on hand. That is the reason for this Maple Custard, it will help you use the gallon of maple syrup you so handsomely ordered and now hope you can use up before it spoils. (It needn't spoil though you know, merely bottle it in jars and sterilize at boiling point for ½ hour.)

Maple Custard

Six whole eggs or 3 whole eggs and 6 yolks, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 cups whole milk, ½ cup heavy maple syrup. Beat the eggs until yolks and whites are well mixed, about 5 minutes. Add the salt, milk and maple syrup. Strain into custard cups or large baking dish buttered. Place in a pan of hot water and bake until set at 325 deg. Fahr. Serve with plain cream.

NOTE: Baked custards are good for Easter season if made plain and served with crushed sweetened strawberries.

Paradise Roll

This type of dessert is popular, but I cannot pull for it wholeheartedly because it is too sweet for my taste.

One cup chopped walnuts, 1 lb. dates chopped finely, 1 lb. marshmallows cut in small pieces, ½ cup cream, 1 lb. graham crackers rolled finely, ½ cup milk. Reserve 1 cup of the graham cracker crumbs. Mix all the ingredients thoroughly. Roll it to make it the shape of a jelly roll, coating the outside with the reserved crumbs. It is best to sift some of the crumbs on your pastry board and roll the "roll" in them, and flatten the ends with the palms. Wrap in wax paper and let stand overnight. When serving slice about 1 inch thick and serve with unsweetened whipped cream. This overnight standing is a great asset for a hostess who has a busy day ahead of her.

Apricot Glace

Two tablespoons gelatin, ½ cup cold water, ½ cup sugar, 1 can or 2 full cups of stewed apricots, ¼ cup orange juice. Soak the gelatin in cold water, add the sugar to the apricots and orange juice, bring to boil, and add the gelatin. Stir well and pour into mould or bowl. Let set and serve with a syrup made of apricot juice and lemon, using 1 cup of apricot juice to juice of 1 lemon, and 2 tablespoons sugar, boiled together for 5 minutes and cooled.

Don't forget the virtues of orange, pineapple or plain charlottes, and the fact that you can reheat a two-day-old Mince pie.

I expect guests myself in an hour but have only to sample the Mousse and light the handles. (A leisured lady for once!)

To Be Married in May

The marriage has been arranged to take place in Timothy Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto, on the evening of May 9, of Miss Gertrude Norman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomson Hugh Norman of Toronto, to John Alexander Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Wilson of R.R. 11, Peterborough.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Dear Friends:

Aren't the men great at giving advice to the women? Even in the advertisements, women are presumed to be the only ones who have body odors, or halitosis (bad breath to you) everywhere and anywhere the women get it pushed at them, how to hold your husband's love, in ten easy lessons.

If you use someone's face cream, if you use someone else's tooth-powder, someone's flour, everything and anything if you just buy their product, some goon will take you out, or stay faithful to you. It's an insult to women's intelligence.

Why should it all be left to the women? Men have had breath and perspiration odors just as well as women. They used to advise women to get all fixed up before their husband's came home, even to putting a flower in their hair, then greet their husband at the door with a big kiss, not a little one mind you, but a big one.

Huh, I'd just like to see the look on some of the men's face if they found their wives doing some of these things. Any woman has sense enough to change her dress in the afternoon, that's as it should be. But if they raced to the door to kiss their men, the men would most likely say "What in heck's the matter with you? Been doing something you shouldn't and now trying to get around me, I'll bet."

Marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition. If the women should do thus to hold her man, then the man should do this to hold his woman. The man confers no bigger favor in marrying a decent woman than she does in marrying him.

Each comes out of circulation when they take each other for better or worse, both of them dress and act to attract the other before marriage and it is up to them both to attract each other, to get rid of bad habits, to please the eye and ear, so as to keep the marriage from going on the rocks the woman cannot do it all.

So, let us have a little more fair-play between the sexes. Women are pretty tired of having all the faults piled on them, when they know that men have just as many, only of a different kind. The trouble is, that each expects perfection from the other, and, when you come to think of it, a perfect person would be a pest to live with.

So, when men assume all the virtues, they too, become a pest to the women in their lives. Men accuse women of conceit, but I say without prejudice, that men are far more conceited than women.

Take any little boy and tell him he is a good boy, and he will agree with you fully. Tell a little girl how good she is, and she will look to see if you are really in earnest, or if you are telling her this to get her to do something for you.

And it sticks them as they grow up A woman is expected to be a wife, a mother, a nurse, a cook, a comforter, a shoulder to lean on, a person to stay in the background when she is not wanted. A man thinks he fulfils everything in just being—a man. He does not want to act as a father to her, nor any of the other things, he's her husband, and that is that, and what does she expect him to do about it? Break down and cry? Heigho, I sometimes wish I'd been a man, but I am just,

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Rhine-Danube Canal To Realize 1000-Year-Old German Dream

2,500 - Mile Waterway Will Open Arabian-Nights Treasure House To Near East

NEW YORK, April 6—(CP). — When history finally appraises Adolf Hitler's regime it may easily record that he could have done few things contributing more to the might of Germany than bring to fruition the 1,000-year-old- German dream of a navigable waterway through the heart of Europe.

Hitler's dictatorship has provided such a rapid succession of epochal events that it is hard for the outside world to recognize another milestone in anything so prosaic as a waterway.

Still, there is vast importance in the announcement that work is to be rushed on the canal which will connect the Rhine and Danube Rivers, thus providing a passage for ships a distance of some 2,500 miles, from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

This will mark a seven league stride in der Fuehrer's program for the creation of a great Germanic confederation. The significance of the river project is this:

A Vast Treasure House

It will open up an Arabian nights treasure house of commerce for Germany throughout the Balkans and near east.

It will enable her to undersell competing countries because of cheap transportation and easy access to markets.

It will give her the materials she needs to make her independent of other powers.

It will be of invaluable assistance to her in extending her economic and political dominance in the Balkans.

Take one item alone—though a most important one—that of the wheat for lack of which Germany went hungry during the Great War. The Danubian states grow more of this grain than any of the so-called big wheat countries, barring the United States.

A lot of experts were amazed in 1933 when the world wheat conference in London told the story of the production in the Danubian territory. The so-called big four in wheat production are the United States, Canada, the Argentine and Australia.

But Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria together have been growing some 300,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. This is half the American crop and more than is grown by any of the others of the Big Four.

The mighty Danube will open up a lot of territory for Germany. It flows from Germany across Austria, along part of the Czechoslovakian border, through Hungary, across a corner of Yugoslavia, along the Rumanian-Bulgarian border, and through Rumania to the Black Sea. Sixty navigable streams join it from the north and south.

Control of this waterway and of the Balkans would make Germany virtually invulnerable in war, so far as supplies are concerned.

During the Great War the Danube was of great military importance, and might be again. Germany proposes to re-organize the Danubian naval forces.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, April 7

According to the lunar aspects, there may be perplexing conditions with much of benefit and contructive effort, together with stubborn obstacles, setbacks, postponements or disappointments, to contend with on this day. There may be much adventure in store, especially in promoting new projects. Tact and diplomacy may iron out tenacious difficulties, but be careful with finances and expenditures.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find a year of much opportunity awaiting in spite of obstructions, postponements and frustrating circumstances. It is probable best results may come from dealing with secret bodies, fraternal, political or diplomatic circles, or through methods of tact and subtlety. It will take strict regulation of budgets and wisdom in expenditures to gain success.

A child born on this day, while having much depth of character, may also be disposed to boastfulness, extravagance and excessive generosity, which may be the cause of fluctuating fortunes.

Queen Of Roses

Miss Mary Wright is pictured with the huge bouquet of roses presented to her on her coronation as queen of the annual pageantry of beauty held at St. Petersburg, Fla. She was chosen by a jury of artists and writers from a bevy of beautiful entrants.

FIND GUN HIDDEN IN CHIMNEY AFTER RIGGER'S MURDER

VICTORIA, April 6—(CP).—Sobbing bitterly and supported on the arm of a police matron, Mrs. Sidney W. Colebourne was led from a detective office in suburban Oak Bay police station early today after she had been questioned for two hours about the slaying of her husband Her head hung limply on her shoulder as she was led back to jail where she has been held since Friday as a material witness.

The tall, thin mother of a five-year-old daughter was questioned after a police search of the frame cottage where her husband was slain in his sleep last Friday, revealed a revolver hidden in a chimney.

Police sought to match the revolver with a crushed lead projectile which killed Colebourne as he lay sleeping in his squad, cottage home.

The .28-calibre weapon, found in a stove pipe chimney, was taken to Vancouver by Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance of the Vancouver Police Bureau of Science along with the revolver slug taken from the base of the 43-year-old steamship rigger's skull.

Will Test Gun

In his Vancouver laboratory Vance planned to determine whether the hidden revolver was the one which fired the shot into Colebourne's forehead as he lay asleep beside his wife and five-year-old daughter, Hilda.

A previous, cursory investigation of the bullet taken from Colebourne's head had showed it was fired from a .32-Calibre weapon.

The revolver was found by police in search of the Colebourne home which also revealed hidden articles reported earlier by the slain man's widow as having disappeared after the shooting.

The woman stuck during questioning to the story she told police when they questioned her at the home of neighbors after she notified them of the shooting.

At that time, police quoted her as saying she was awakened by the sound of gun-shot. She said she slept with her daughter. Her husband, lying on a couch beside the bed, was dead. An inquest will be held today.

BOMBER CRASHES KILLING 5 CREW ON NIGHT FLIGHT

LEEDS, England, April 6—(AP). —Five men were killed to-day in a Royal Air Force bomber crash at Tibthorpe, Yorkshire. The bomber had been on a night flight.

It was the 32nd R.A.F. crash since Jan. 1, with a total of 52 deaths. Intensive training under the rearmament program is generally ascribed as the reason for the large number of accidents.

Those killed were Flight Sergeant Edward Merchant and members of his crew: Ronald Marshall, Ronald Fish, Walter Greaves, and George Humphries.

Three Villages Receive Free Flour Under Fear Of 800-Year-Old Curse

Tichborne, Eng., April 6 (CP)

AN 800-year-old curse lay behind a ceremony held here in which flour was distributed to 800 villagers of Tichborne, Cheriton and Lane End, in Hampshire.

Sir Anthony Tichborne, 23-year-old holder of an ancient baronetcy helped to distribute the historic Tichborne "dole" instituted in the 12th century. Each adult received a gallon of flour; every child half a gallon.

In the 12th century the aged and ailing Lady Mabella Tichborne crawled around part of the estate while a torch burned. Her husband, Sir Roger de Tichborne, had offered to give to the poor a portion of the produce of the land enclosed by his wife's crawling journey. Lady Mabella vowed if the gift from the estate were discontinued the Tichborne family would lack male heirs.

"I shall continue the custom," said Sir Anthony at this year's ceremony. "If I fail legend says all sorts of dreadful things will happen to the family.

BLUM FIGHTING LOSING BATTLE

PARIS, April 6. (AP).—Premier Leon Blum battle with parliament today for dictatorial powers over the economic and financial life of France, predicting bankruptcy and civil strife unless radical measures are taken.

Blum demanded that the lukewarm Chamber of Deputies and the hostile senate vote him full decree powers. Rightists reacted at once with the charge his program is "a plan for a Marxist (Socialist) dictatorship and revolution."

The general political opinion before the struggle began in the chamber was that the bill would be passed by the chamber and voted down by the senate. Political experts accorded the premier only a slight chamber majority, however, and predicted a heavy adverse vote in the conservative upper house, bringing his automatic resignation.

The premier's bill by which he hopes to attain sweeping authority contains only 80 words. It gives him the right to decree all measures "judged indispensable to meet the necessities of the national defence, protect the holdings of the Bank of France and rehabilitate the nation's finances and economies."

The bill stipulated only that the decrees must be taken before July 1, 1938, and ratified by parliament before Dec. 31, 1938. The government's primary need is to raise 36,700,000,000 francs (about $1,101,000,000) this year for the treasury, aside from refinancing of maturing bonds.

CLAIMS SMOKING HURRIES DEATH

NEW YORK, April 6. (AP).— Perhaps smoking does not shorten life, despite recent statistical discoveries that even moderate tobacco smoking brings death sooner.

So said Paul D. White, M.D., of Harvard University Medical School, today to the American College of Physicians. He referred to the report by Dr. Raymond Pearl, of John Hopkins University, a few weeks ago, who presented the first "life tables" ever made on smoking and found it always bad.

Dr. White did not dispute the correctness of the death tables. But, he said:

"Can we blame the tobacco itself necessarily for this? Isn't it more probable that persons who are intemperate in the use of tobacco are more likely to be intemperate in other respects as well, thereby jeopardizing their health?"

He left the answer to this riddle for the future to solve.

Why Use A "Sissy" Laxative?

Chronic constipation has to do with the colon or large intestine. Unless the large bowel is thoroughly emptied from time to time you become a victim of chronic constipation and poisoning of the system which results in colitis or other serious diseases.

Mild or "sissy" laxatives merely cause a movement of the bowels without effecting a thorough cleaning out of the colon or large bowel. For this reason you are misled into thinking that you are doing all you can to overcome a constipated and poisoned condition of the system.

Those who know Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appreciate the value of a real medicine which not only effects a thorough cleansing of the colon or large bowel but also arouses the liver and kidneys to activity in filtering poisons from the blood.

Once you have proven the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will never return to the use of "sissy" laxatives. Used regularly once a week this medicine ensures pure blood and freedom from constipation and the pains, aches and serious diseases which accompany it.

War Secrets Act Threatened To Curb Press

Defence Minister Mackenzie Resents Reports Of "Feverish" Movements of Arms on Both Coasts

OTTAWA, April 7—(CP)—"If scurrilous articles such as this are repeated it may be necessary to resort to the provisions of the Official War Secrets Act," Defence Minister MacKenzie told the House of Commons yesterday during discussion of a Halifax Star editorial dealing with alleged movements of armaments in that garrison city.

Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) read a part of the editorial published Tuesday, while a number of members, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King, objected on a point of order. Mr. Green questioned its accuracy and references to Vancouver defences.

Mr. Green said he believed the Halifax Star was "the evening edition of the Halifax Chronicle" whose news story on the same subject, carried in The Canadian Press service Monday, was denied by the minister in the House Tuesday.

Under the title "What Goes On Behind the Scenes," the editorial told of "feverish movements" of armaments to and from Halifax for Vancouver to protect British Columbia and Ian MacKenzie's constituents from the yellow peril."

"This is the most absolute nonsense," Mr. MacKenzie declared. There had been some movements about Nova Scotia of reserve armaments in Halifax. Yesterday he declared nothing had been done to impair the defences at Halifax but that they had been strengthened.

During debate on the point of order challenging Mr. Green's right to read the editorial, Opposition Leader Bennett said he had taken the stand when first in opposition and later as Prime Minister, that editorials should not be read. He still believed it was undesirable but it had become a custom and when he was Prime Minister the Liberal Opposition had taken 'much glory" in reading editorials attacking him.

That part of the editorial Mr. Green succeeded in reading follows:

"During recent weeks there has been much ado in military circles around Halifax. Giant guns have been uprooted from their emplacements along the harbor mouth, munitions have been moved to and fro about the waterfront.

"Most of the activities have been conducted under cover of night and everything done with the utmost secrecy—barring what gets told to every Tom, Dick and Harry around military canteens.

34TH R.A.F. CRASH KILLS THREE FLIERS

LONDON, April 7—(AP)—Three Royal Air Force fliers were killed today when their reconnaissance plane exploded and fell into the North Sea.

The air ministry officially identified the plane, object of a widespread search near Dudgeon light, off the Humber estuary, where it was seen to burst into flame. Searchers found only oil patches and bits of wreckage.

The crash was the 34th in the Royal Air Force since January 1, and raised its death toll to 58.

The plane had been on a night routine navigation flight and last had wirelessed all well.

Continued Royal Air Force accidents again received the attention of the House of Commons when Norman Hulbert, Conservative, served notice he would ask Earl Winterton, spokesman for the air ministry, to cease publishing details of accidents.

He said other countries suppressed similar information and publication here was "likely to give foreigners an erroneous impression regarding the efficiency of the R.A.F."

Police and Royal Air Force planes began a hunt for the attackers.

629 TAXI-DRIVERS PLAN 5 P.M. STRIKE TO TIE UP TORONTO

TORONTO, April 7.—(CP).—Unless agreement is reached in the meantime, 629 organized Toronto taxi-drivers will go on strike today. Heads of the Taxi Cab Drivers' Association said only about 80 independent cabs would be operating after five p.m.

At a meeting 500 cab-drivers voted unanimously to strike until cab-owners signed agreements with the Association providing a $12.50 minimum wage, a 10-hour day, six-day week and a 10 per cent commission on all loads.

The drivers also voted to have their Association affiliate with the Joint Council of Teamsters', Chauffeurs', Stablemen and Helpers' Union, a unit of the American Federation of Labor.

Two hours before the strike deadline representatives of the men will meet the Ontario Labor and Industry Board in a last-minute conference in an effort to avert the walk-out.

At the conference, the drivers will demand setting up of a temporary minimum wage of $17 a week. They will be satisfied with a $12.50 minimum in an agreement signed by cab-owners.

Wallace Purdue, president of the Independent Taxi Owners' Association, said his organization would do as the strikers told them. It was understood the independent cabs would be allowed to operate.

REFUSE TO KILL BILL

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP). —The House of Representatives refused yesterday to kill the United States government re-organization bill. The teller vote was 191 to 169.

The ballot, a victory for the administration, was on motion by Representative O'Connor (Dem., New York) to "strike out the enacting clauses—without which the bill would have been ineffective and meaningless.

Backers of the bill said the vote was a sure indication the House would pass it eventually.

Detroiters Walking In Trolley Strike

2,700 Quit in Move Affecting 700,000 Citizens; Extra Police Called After Violence Threatened

DETROIT, April 7—(AP)—A strike of 2,700 employees of the Detroit street railway—which serves 700,000 persons daily—virtually halted movement of the municipally owned street cars today.

Cars were moving on only one line, but buses operated by the city system were running under police guard. The street railway commission called an emergency meeting but no report of progress in its endeavor to settle the dispute was made. The commission was meeting with representatives of the strikers.

Twenty-two cars on the Michigan avenue line left a west side barn for the terminus in Dearborn before starting for downtown Detroit.

A prolonged dispute between the two unions precipitated the strike.

The strike vote was taken by Local 26 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America at a tumultuous meeting last night over the protests of its officers.

A majority of members of the Amalgamated, which claims a membership of approximately 2,700 in the Detroit street railway system, are trolley conductors and motormen. Some of them drive buses.

The rival union, the Motor Coach Operators' Association, has about 600 members and all are bus drivers. Both belong to the American Federation of Labor.

Extra police were called on duty in anticipation of threatened violence.

SHOT IN STOMACH GUNMAN'S VICTIM LIES NEAR DEATH

BRAMPTON, Ont., April 7.—(CP).— Police organized a widespread search of the district to-day for an armed man who shot Gerritt La Merse, elderly service station operator, in an unsuccessful holdup of Gerritt's Brittania station last night.

Shot in the abdomen, Gerritt was in a critical condition in hospital. Medical attendants said there was little chance his life could be saved.

La Merse and his wife were in their living quarters adjoining the service station when the masked robber walked into the office. Mrs. La Merse said she heard the man say to her husband who went out to wait on him: 'This is a hold-up. I want your money."

A moment later she heard a shot and she rushed to the office to find her husband leaning against the door frame, holding his stomach. The bandit threw her against the counter and she fell while he still demanded money from the wounded La Merse.

When he foun dthe office till contained only a smal amount of money, the robber rain from the service station. Mrs. La Merse said her husband was carrying money but had not been searched.

Provincial Police under Sergeant Roy Elliott, left here for Driftwood to investigate the shooting, details of which were not known here.

It was learned the horses were in the possession of Dan O'Keefe, 65-year-old Driftwood district settler.

C.B.C. PREFERS C.P. NEWS DUE TO ITS MERITS

Women As Announcers May Be Given Trial

OTTAWA, April 7.—(CP).—The Canadian Press news broadcasts were given preference only because of their merit, Major Gladstone Murray told the Parliamentary committee on radio to-day. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation general manager was questioned by C. E. Johnston (C.C.F.-Bow River) who suggested other "more efficient and up to date" news broadcasts were available from United States sources.

"There are other agencies," Major Murray said, "but the service we get from the Canadian Press is most accurate and trustworthy and perhaps built more in accordance with our requirements.

Mr. Johnston: "What do you have to pay?"

Major Murray: "We don't pay for them."

Mr. Johnston: 'You would have to pay the other agencies?"

Major Murray: "Yes."

Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East): "I think The Canadian Press is by far the best because it avoids comment and is straight news broadcast. I think it should be given preference on all Canadian stations over United States broadcasts such as trans-radio and that they (MCP broadcasts) should be heard more frequently."

News Right Up to Date.

Mr. Johnston wanted to know if material in the Canadian Press broadcasts had already been published in newspapers. Major Murray replied that the news was right up to date and was carried to 33 Canadian stations by "ticker" service.

(Major Murray was referring to Canadian Press daytime bulletins. Night bulletins are broadcast from Toronto to the national network and Vancouver to the Western network.)

Sensationalism and comment were avoided, Major Murray said. He agreed newscasts should be more frequent.

"Every encouragement we can give the Canadian Press is given, but it is not the desire of ourselves or of the Canadian Press to set up any monopoly in restrait of trade," Major Murray said.

"In my district," Mr. Johnston said, "the majority prefer the Texaco news broadcast."

"That," Major Murray replied, "would be the Trans-radio."

Senate Throws Out Premier's Bill For Decree Powers

Extra Guards Thrown About Luxembourg Palace As Leftists and Fascists Battle Through Streets

PARIS, April 7—(AP)—A thousand leftists massed outside the Senate fought today with a group of Fascist students.

The clash, in which several were injured, came soon after the Senate finance committee, unmoved by the threat of a mass demonstration of leftists, rejected Premier Leon Blum's demand for decree powers over French finance and economy by a vote of 25 to 6.

Responding to the summons of Socialist extremists, leftists moved on the Luxembourg Palace, housing the Senate, while strong police and mobile guard reinforcements surrounded the building.

Communists, Socialists and Anarchists turned on the Fascist students when the latter strode into the demonstration, giving the Fascist salute.

While the police strove to restore order, leftists pursued their enemies into a cafe. Flying chairs and seltzer bottles snatched from tables struck some of the students, although most of them succeeded in barricading themselves inside the cafe. More police and guards were called in.

GERMAN GESTAPO WORK IN BRITAIN STIRS UNEASINESS

LONDON, April 7 (CP Cable). — German secret police activities in Great Britain are creating uneasiness. Allegations accumulate that the Gestapo are working through German servant girls employed in the homes of British officers, through compulsory registration at German Consulates of Germans and Austrians resident in Great Britain.

In the House of Commons yesterday Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, faced a series of questions. He was asked about a manufacturing firm which was alleged to be a centre for German propaganda. He was asked whether the refusal to allow a German general to land at Dover was because of his connection with a Nazi-financed organization.

To both questions Sir Samuel replied that the matters were still under investigation.

"Are there not far more dangerous organizations in this country financed by Russia?" demanded Vice-Admiral Ernest Taylor, Conservative.

Was it not true, questioned Viscountess Astor, Conservative, that there would not be anything heard of Fascism if it had not been for Communism?

Ships Coming For Votes.

Inquiries turned to the German cruise ship Wilhelm Gustloff, coming to England to collect the votes of German Nationals in Sunday's plebiscite on the Austro-German Anschluss.

As voting is compulsory, Arthur Henderson, Labor, questioned, would the Home Secretary not take steps to ensure that all German citizens are allowed to exercise their votes without being subject to interference and restraint?

Sir Samuel replied that when the German voters board the Wilhelm Gustloff the ship will proceed to beyond the three-mile limit, where voting will take place outside British jurisdiction.

"There can be no question that German Nationals in this country under our laws have complete freedom," the Home Secretary declared. "The police take the proper steps to ensure them the freedom to which they are entitled."

"Is it not without precedent for a foreign ship to come to this country to collect votes?" Mr. Henderson persisted. "Does it not constitute a most objectionable form of propaganda?"

Sir Samuel Hoare: "It is certainly true there is no precedent."

2 MEMBERS BALK ON RADIO REPORT

OTTAWA, April 7.— (CP).— J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) today told the House Radio committee that because it refused to hear evidence from witnesses other than Canadian Broadcasting Corporation officials he would take no part in preparation of its report to Parliament nor be a party to the report.

A. M. Edwards (Con. Waterloo South) said he, too, would be unable to sign a report unless representatives of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters were heard.

Mr. Lawson and Mr. Edwards said they were 100 per cent behind nationalized radio but believed the committee was doing a dis-service to the Corporation by refusing to let both sides be heard.

The controversy came as the committee was about to conclude its public hearings after Major Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Corporation had completed its evidence. Chairman Arthur Beaubien (Lib. Provencher) ruled yesterday that the committee had no power under its terms of reference to call others than officials of the Corporation.

A motion by Mr. Lawson and Mr. Edwards yesterday, that the head of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters be called as a witness was ruled out by the chairman whose decision was upheld by a 6-2 vote.

Had Sessions Arranged.

Mr. Lawson said he understood the Canadian Manufacturers' Association had intended to make a submission and had arranged meetings during the Easter season to prepare a brief.

The committee would be in no position to judge, Mr. Lawson said, whether or not the Corporation was justified in recommending a license fee increase unless it had heard from interests other than the C.B.C.

"I am compelled," Mr. Lawson concluded, "to take the position I will not have anything to do with the preparation of the report or be a party to it."

Mr. Edwards said it was unfortunate the committee had so narrowly interpreted its terms of reference. He believed the private broadcasting interests and radio manufacturers should have been heard. That industry, he understood, expected a depression in radio manufacturing due to the new license fee regulations requiring a license for each individual set in a household.

British Shanghai Official Is Found Stabbed

Terrorists Also Slay Chinese University Head In Heart Of Settlement

SHANGHAI, April 7 (CP-Havas) —Body of Harold Porter, 59, British vice chairman of the Shanghai Municipal Council, was found in the Whangpoo River today. He had apparently been stabbed to death and thrown into the water.

Discovery of his body followed by a few hours the assassination of Herman C. Liu, president of Shanghai University and one of the leading figures in the Chinese community, who was killed, presumably for political reasons, by terrorists who opened fire on his car in the heart of the international settlement.

Inspector Wade, British member of the municipal police, was wounded while pursuing the terrorists. Police managed however, to wound one and arrest two of Liu's assailants.

There was no evidence as to the reason for the murder of Porter. The well-known Briton had served with distinction in the consular service in China for nearly 30 years before retiring in 1929 to become general manager of the Pekin syndicate Ltd., a coal mining concern.

'Franco Has Everything, Loyalists Nothing,' Says Californian After Escaping Gandesa Slaughter

PERPIGNAN, France. April 7—(AP)—An American who had acted as political commissar for the Washington and Lincoln battalion of the Spanish government's international brigade reached France today with a story of death among his comrades.

Johnny Honeycombe, 37, of Los Angeles, said only a few hundred out of several thousand Americans who had fought since the beginning of the Spanish civil war as volunteers for the government were still alive.

(A dispatch to the New York Times from Barcelona said yesterday that about 100 members of the MacKenzie - Papineau battalion, composed of Canadians, had been accounted for following the insurgent offensive towards Tortosa, in the same area as Gandesa. About 50 Canadians and 100 other Spanish government supporters held up an insurgent drive for a whole day, permitting the withdrawal of thousands of government troops in safety.)

Tattered and hungry, Honeycombe crossed the frontier after what he

Dublin Grates Official Teeth Each Time Eire Is Used

Words Fail To Describe Feelings At Seeing Terms "Eirishman" Or "Anglo-Eirish"

DUBLIN, April 7.—(CP).— If you want to make teeth grate in official circles here be sure to use the word "Eire" instead of Ireland.

Increasing use abroad of the term "Eire" to describe the 26-county area under the jurisdiction of Dublin is officially deplored and words fail to describe feelings at seeing the terms "Eirishman" or "Anglo-Eirish circles."

Just before the new constitution came into operataion the government notified the League of Nations the title of the country would in future be "Eirie" in the Irish language and "Ireland" in the English language. But it seems everyone prefers to use the Irish word.

Those who object to using the word "Ireland" on the ground it may give rise to misunderstanding while six counties are still part of the United Kingdom are asked: "But is Germany any the less Germany without Eupen and Malmedy or would England cease to be England if Yorkshire hopped out?"

Headline writers, however, will find it difficult to abandon "Eirie." Some of them here hailed the neat word with the remark: "Well, it was about time the government did something for the newspapers!"

JAPS WORRIED LEST U.S. SHOVE ITS RULE WEST

Stay-at-Home Policy Opposition Featured

TOKYO, April 7 (AP) — Japan feels it "imperative" she maintain command of the western Pacific and is concerned gravely over the possibility the United States might expand its sphere of influence there, Rear-Admiral Kiyoshi Noda, admiralty spokesman, said today.

Discussing the speech of foreign policy by Cordell Hull, United States secretary of state, on March 17 and his letter on April 3 to Chairman David Walsh of the senate finance committee, opposing a stay-at-home policy for the navy and holding it must be free to defend Americans anywhere, Admiral Noda asserted:

"The fact Mr. Hull sent a letter at this particular time is of special interest to us. Formerly the United States seemed to regard the mainland coasts and Panama as the sole points necessary to defend.

"As late as Jan. 31, Admiral Leahy (chief of U.S. naval operations) stated a strategical triangle running from the Aleutians to Hawaii, Samoa and Panama was the defence line. Now Mr. Hull expresses strong opposition to any such theoretical frontier. Hence, it appears America is advancing her sphere rapidly westward. Japan cannot but watch with gravest concern."

He declined to say whether Japan saw the possibility of collision with United States expansion, and reaffirmed Japan's "attitude remains as before—one of non-aggression."

He declined to say exactly what was the area Japan regarded as under her guardianship.

Bed Only Remedy For Colds

NEW YORK, April 7 (CP)—Sixteen hundred and sixty-seven Harvard students who lost 70 years of time in 3 months from common colds and respiratory infections were cited to the American College of Surgeons today as proof that for colds and the like there is only one preventive and one cure—rest.

The study was reported by Arlie V. Bock, M.D., of Boston.

In the Stillman Infirmary at Harvard the students were given every established kind of treatment, but only complete rest in bed had much real effect, Dr. Bock said. Bed for colds, he said, is the 'common sense' treatment that Hipocrates, father of medicine, started nearly 2,400 years ago.

"It saves," Dr. Bock added, "time, trouble and money."

Newspaper Advertising Directs the Buyer to the "Point of Sale".

Unless a person knows a thing exists, he will not conscientiously patronize it.

GOOD advertising, therefore, informs...persuades ...convinces but, in the final analysis, all publicity is of no avail unless the buyer and seller are brought together to complete the transaction. Then, and only then, does the cumulative benefit of advertising accrue.

Newspaper advertising, not only promotes the desires to buy but furthers the actual sale by telling the consumer where the product is available. It points to the retail outlet and, as the daily circulation blankets that outlet's trading area, the designation is most complete and effective, and greater benefit accrues to the product, the buyer, and the dealer.

ROEBUCK BEATEN ON MOVE FOR VOTE OVER POWER DEAL

TORONTO, April 7. — (CP). — Ontario's legislative machine was geared at high speed to-day as members prepared to plough through a mas sof legislation and consider estimates of expenditure in the 1938-39 fiscal year in preparation for to-morrow's planned prorogation.

A five-hour sitting which ended early to-day helped paved the way for ending the session.

Estimates totalling nearly $20,000,000, were approved in the session highlighted by an unsuccessful effort to hold up ratification of new contracts with Quebec power companies pending a plebiscite. A. W. Roebuck, former Attorney-General and Hydro Commissioner, made the proposal and was supported by the Opposition, but it was defeated by a standing vote.

Vote on the Roebuck resolution was the third of the night on the Hydro bill as the Opposition attempted unsuccessfully to amend the agreements with Beauharnois, Gatineau and Maclaren-Quebec Power Companies, replacing contracts cancelled in 1935 after a bitter legislative fight led by Mr. Roebuck. He did not vote on the two Opposition amendments designed to force Beauharnois to keep up its load factor and prevent a price increase to the three companies should the province pay other Quebec sources more money for power.

Chief debate during consideration of estimates came when Conservatives attacked the Government's highway expenditure. Conservative Leader Leopold Macauley declared extension of highway contracts reaching nearly $20,000,000 had been authorized by the Government a few weeks prior to last Octobers election.

Mr. Roebuck, member of the Cabinet until last spring, declared the Government departed from British practice when it campaigned in the election on a 'back to Niagara' power policy and immediately after the elected embarked on negotiations with the Quebec companies. The administration took a course of action that had no mandate from the people.

A Plebiscite First.

The validation bill should come into operation only after electors answered this question: "Are you in favor of the purchase by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario of an aggregate of 430,000 additional horsepower at $12.50 per horsepower from the Beauharnois

OLD DUTCH PARK IS REDEDICATED

NEW YORK, April 7 — (CP). — Bowling Green, the half-acre park at the foot of Broadway, where residents of the Old Dutch Settlement of Nieuw Amsterdam passed their spart time bowling, was re-dedicated yesterday as "the first public park to be established in New York."

A bronze plaque was unveiled and a pageant was held depicting a scene in Old New York.

The elaborate revival of midsummer Dutch Colonial days, was carried out despite snow. An assistant stood by brushing the snow from the keys as a pianist accompanied Lucille Manners in her portrayal of Jenny Lind, singing "The Last Rose of Summer."

A team of five bowlers from the Downtown Athletic Club, wearing knee breeches and other real or fancied accoutrements of Dutch burghers, including beer mugs dangling from the waist, stepped out on the green and bowled at the white jack through a one-half inch fall of snow, with notable lack of success.

"First the guns were torn from their positions put on flat cars and started off for Vancouver to protect British Columbia and Ian Mackenzie's constituents against the yellow peril. Then somebody changed their mind according to reports and the guns came trundling back again.

Guns For the East

"On top of all that, somebody began to rip out guns from emplacements at Vancouver and start them off for Halifax.

"Everything was done in feverish haste, almost as if the entire Imperial Japanese navy had already been sighted in Juan de Fuca Straits and heading for Victoria."

Mr. Mackenzie replied: "I think my honorable friend from Vancouver South knows as well as I do that there has not been a (gun) emplacement in Vancouver in all the years he has been living there.

"In the second place, of course, the reference to the entire Japanese navy being headed for Victoria is absolutely incorect. This is the most absolute nonsense.

"Any minister dealing with a very difficult problem concerning the reallocation of armament on a scientific principle should have the cooperation of this House and of the press as well.

May Try Using Curb

"If scurrilous articles such as this are repeated it may be necessary to resort to the provisions of the official war secrets act in order that the public may be protected in these matters.

"Some very reputable journals refused yesterday to publish this despatch."

Mr. Bennett: "This is not a despatch."

Mr. Mackenzie: "This is an editorial which was written, I think, though I am not sure, before I gave my reply yesterday afternoon. In any case the assumptions made are absolutely incorrect.

"What has happened is this. There has been a re-allocation of armaments, as I said yesterday. Guns were removed that were unallocated and in reserve at Halifax. Some have been removed to other points in Nova Scotia.

"Everything was done in accordance with a very scientific plan and it was not in the public interest at any time to disclose or discuss the exact details or the exact calibres of the armaments that have been transferred."

T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview: "May I ask if the minister is going to recall his fleet from the pleasure jaunt it is taking down to the West Indies?" The query was lost in cries of "order."

Gangland Slaying Brings 5 Arrests

BUFFALO, N.Y., April 7.—(CP).—Five men were under arrest to-day as material witnesses following the gangland slaying of John Barbera, 38, and wounding of a bystander, Frank Quelch of (7 Bond street) St. Catharines, Ont.

Zarbera was killed last night in a downtown tavern when gunmen walked in and pumped several bullets into his body. Quelch was shot through the hand when he tried to prevent the murder.

Detective John J. Whalen characterized Barbera's death as a "squeal" killing. He said he was convinced Babera was slain in reprisal for "squeling" in a robbery case several years ago. The man Barbera testified again, Whalen said, recently was released from prison.

He believed a comparison with the Canadian Press would prove the latter provided as fast and complete coverage of news. It was possible Trans-radio was more "entertaining," but in the judgment of some it was not "above suspicion" in connection with its coverage of foreign affairs.

Mr. Johnston asked if it were true the Canadian Press tried to keep Trans-radio out of Canada.

"There has been no attitude taken by the Canadian Press." Major Murray replied, other than to make the Canadian Press news so excellent that it would be only good policy for the CBC to give it preference. We do give it preference, but only on its merits."

No Interference.

There was no intention of interfering with news programs of Toronto newspapers, the witness told questioners.

To J. S. Woodsworth (C.C.F.-Winnipeg North Centre) Major Murray said he understood Trans-radio could be broadcast only as sponsored programs and the Corportation would have to pay the same price as a sponsor if it took that service.

J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) asked the witness if a statement made by L. W. Brockington, chairman of the Board of Governors, that some private stations were making $100,000 a year had been based on information or was a matter of opinion. Major Murray said the CBC had "no information on that subject."

In answer to another question by Mr. Lawson the general manager told of negotiations leading up to the arrangement for Canadian symphony concerts weekly over the C BC network beginning next month. Improved revenue prospects had made it possible for the Corporation to take full responsibility for the cost involved. Montreal and Toronto orchestras would start these broadcasts.

Outlining details for an ambitious program of broadcasts during the next year, Major Murray said the Corporation would shortly experiment with women as announcers. Efforts would be made als too discover "radio personalities" with which he believed Canada was righly equipped.

My Wife Was Right

"I remember the last thing my wife said to me when I left her and my six-year-old kid in Los Angeles," Honeycombe mused. "'You'll regret the day you left for Spain.' She was right."

As political commissar, Honeycombe, who said he once worked in the American Communist party in California, was left in charge of the battalion when its commander was killed in Gandesa.

"This cannot last," he said. "I have seen more than 200 planes at one time bombing and strafing our lines. That man Franco has everything. The Spaniards don't want to fight. They have nothing to fight with. They are finished."

It took him four or five days of hitch-hiking and walking to reach the French frontier, Honeycombe said.

"We Americans were surrounded by Fascist infantry 14 kilometres (about nine miles) west of Gandesa but a few of us found our way out. I saw only 28 men, besides myself, escaping out of the 560."

HAD NO TROUBLE WITH McINTOSH

GUELPH, Ont., April 7 (CP) — Ernest Gavin, an attendant, said he was not given an opportunity to examine Homewood Sanatarium record books during the night, as he resumed testimony today before the Ontario government inquiry into operation of the sanatarium.

He was the first witness during the day of the inquiry here before Commissioner F. H. Barlow, master of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Counsel for Homewood blamed a misunderstanding for Gavin not seeing the books.

Gavin pointed out record book entries he made for his brother, also an attendant for a short time who testified yesterday. Some entries concerned Angus McIntosh wealthy Montreal importer who charged he was held against his will in Homewood. McIntosh testified at the Toronto sittings last week.

Described as Pleasant

Some entries described McIntosh as "pleasant and co-operative" and "in his usual pleasant mood."

J. W. Pickup one of the counsel for Homewood, objected when the witness said the record book showed no doctor came to the ward on a certain night. Pickup said the book showed only official visits but not that no doctor came. Gavin said all visits were entered.

Gavin indicated an entry he said he wrote for his brother, William, describing McIntosh as more talkative, discussing his case and having broken sleep. He showed other entries concerning McIntosh he wrote for his brother, who was special night attendant for McIntosh.

Gavin said a supervisor named Wilding had a dispute with McIntosh. Wilding, he said, called McIntosh a "vile name." McIntosh chased Wilding and tripped, skinning his knee. Then Wilding apologized.

"Was it customary for Wilding to use such language to patients?" asked Col. Thomas Vien, Montreal, one of McIntosh's counsel.

"Yes, I would say so," the witness said.

McIntosh's attitude toward other patients was good and "he looked after the other patients like an attendant," said Gavin.

Col. Vien produced a Homewood advertisement stating there were 75 nurses and five doctors at Homewood.

Mr. Pickup examined the witness concerning the entries written for Gavin.

"The reports you set down for your brother are true reports?"

"Yes."

"Based on what your brother told you?"

"Yes."

Gavin said he wrote the reports because his brother was not a good writer. Gavin said his brother made one report on McIntosh on February 10 and on March 24 the witness said he told his brother that he had been told his reports were not strong enough.

The next witness, Harry Bolton, said he started work at Homewood as a waiter in the dining room at $30 a month when he was about 19. He left Homewood in March 1936.

He said he was associated with McIntosh during the time he was on the ward where McIntosh lived. Witness said he never had trouble with McIntosh and "McIntosh was always pleasant as far as I was concerned."

REWARD OF $2,000 IN TEXAS KILLING GETS SIX ARRESTS

EL PASO, Tex., April 7—(CP).—A co-ordinated effort to solve the week-old robbery-torture slayings of Mrs. Weston G. Frome, 46, and her 23-year-old daughter, Nancy, was started today.

Peace officers set up a central bureau of information and delegated to Sheriff Chris Fox of El Paso the task of handling the records and data.

Spurred by offers of $2,000 rewards officers held six persons for questioning in three states.

The latest arrests were at Laredo, Tex., where Constable Ed Wormser held a 23-year-old salesman and his 19-year-old wife for questioning. They said they lived in Berkeley, Calif., the Fromes' home town, and that they had been in the same social circles with Nancy Frome and that they knew the mother and daughter planned a trip to South Carolina to visit relatives.

Some Of The Baggage?

At Rankin, Sheriff W. C. Fowler said he did not believe a 30-year-old man arrested at McCamey was implicated directly, but that a bag found in his possession fitted the description of some of the Frome luggage. Fowler said the bag, which the man had attempted to sell, probably had been stolen. The man might be instrumental in the arrests of "two or three others," Fowler added.

A 46-year-old filling station operator, who said he just had returned from a trip to New Mexico, was held at Cordell, Okla., by Sheriff Oscar Doran. The arrest as made at the request of Alamogordo, N.N., officers, who were holding a man described as a Fort Sill, Okla., army deserter. The Cordell man said he had travelled with the man held at Alamogordo.

The women's semi-nude bodies, bullet-pierced and beaten, were found six miles east of there. Their cash and some of their jewelery was missing. Luggage had been taken from their abandoned automobile.

Plan Huge "Blackout"

Poring over the map are England's air defence heads and the mayor and deputy mayor of Southampton. They are shown as they discussed a huge "blackout", a defence measure in which no light would show for hundreds of square miles in the event of an air attack, by an enemy force, on the area near the Portsmouth naval base. The area includes Portsmouth, Southampton, the Isle of Wight and about 600 square miles of inland territory, the biggest "blackout" yet planned. Capt. Phillips' air raids precautions officer, is pointing to a house which was theoretically bombed. Next to him is Councillor G. E. H. Prince and in the uniform, Admiral R. Leatham, chief of staff at Portsmouth.

SHOWER IS HELD ROSENEATH BRIDE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, April 7 — Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baptie, nee Jean George were the recipient of many beautiful gifts on Friday night when a miscellaneous shower of gifts and a dance were held in their honor in the Orange Hall. The bride wore her wedding gown of white net over satin. During the evening the bride's Sunday school class members and the members of the Women's Institute, honored her with gifts and addresses. The gifts of the Sunday school class, an end table and jardinere were presented by Miss Ruby Blodgett, while Miss Marie Mouncey read an address conveying the good wishes of the class.

Mrs. Barton Thackeray president of the Women's Institute of which the bride is a member read an address from that society which also conveyed the congratulations and good wishes of the members, and Mrs. C. Sandercock on behalf of the members made the presentation of a carving set.

Jean expressed her appreciation to both organizations in her usual sunny manner.

Both bride and groom thanked the company for the many tokens of good-will, displayed on the stage. Among the gifts was a dinner set of dishes, presented by the friends who greeted the bride and groom on their arrival in Roseneath with a charivari serenade. Included also among the gifts was a tea set of dishes from the bride's aunt, Mrs. Fred Brown, Warkworth.

Mission Circle Meeting

The members of the Mission Circle entertained the members of the W. M. S. at the regular meeting of the Circle on Saturday afternoon. The meeting was held in the home of the Circle Leader, Mrs. R. Crego.

Miss Ruby Blodgett, president, presided, and following the opening exercises, graciously welcomed the guests and thanked the W. M. S. members for their interest and assistance to the circle.

The business session was brief, the minutes of the previous meeting were adopted, as read by the secretary Jean Carew.

A chapter of the study book was dramatized by a number of the circle members, assisted by Mrs. Crego.

The dramatization depicted the work carried on in a settlement house in Tokio, Japan, while the story as told by the girls illustrated how the students in the settlement house are taught to see that life is more abundant than they have ever known, it also taught the circle members and their audience something of the mission work in Japan.

The girls presenting the story were: Jean Carew, Gwendolyn Varcoe, Alma Thackeray, Lavigne McMillan, Golda Thackeray, Audrey Mouncey and Shirley Brisbin.

Mrs. Stewart Thackeray, program convenor, presided over a short program, during which Mrs. C. W. Varcoe and her daughter Gwendolyn sang a duet, "Dear Land of Home"; Mrs. C. Sandercock, read "Don't Hurry", and the convenor conducted a humorous contest.

Mrs. L. W. Scott, W. M. S. president thanked the circle members for their kind hospitality, and congratulated them on their ability in carrying on their meetings in such a capable manner.

Worth Thinking About

The Legal & General Assurance Society of London, the existence of which dates back to the year 1836, has sent notices to its Canadian agents stating definitely that all automobile insurance risks are to be transferred or cancelled. The notice is not dealing with something which may or might be done, but it is a plain record of a decision already arrived at and from which there will be no departure.

The letter does not go into details explaining that automobile insurance has been found unprofitable, but the meaning is there as plain as a pikestaff. This company is in business to make money, the same as any similar organization, and if it were making money by the insuring of automobiles it would not depart from the field.

The drivers of cars have that situation pretty much in their own hands and they are not making much of a job of it. Some of the awards made in courts within recent months have been for large amounts and it would take many people paying good premiums quite a while to equal the amount which these cases call for. An insurance company is strict regarding payments and it will contest any cases which seem contestable. But in spite of that this London company desires to get out of the Canadian field. The next time you are inclined to speed up and take a chance you might pause a moment and figure the meaning of that letter out for yourself. The starting point for such a process of thinking might be that this old established company does not consider you are a good risk.

Yet It's A Fact

There are many high-salaried people on the radio. They play instruments; they sing and at times—worse luck—they croon. Others tell jokes and play their part in sketches of one sort or another.

But the greatest attraction at the moment is Charlie McCarthy a wooden dummy, being a revival of the old art of the ventriloquist.

And there are scores of stars in the moving picture world. They are described as being glamorous and dazzling. There are few adjectives which could be brought into use which would say anything which has already not been said in superlative degree.

And yet the attraction which is taking the most money to the box office just now, and which is causing people to develop fallen arches from standing in line is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," in which the glamorous ladies and the shieks have no part at all for it is all the work of a group of cartoonists.

The stars of radio and the stars of the film world can extract what comfort they can from this situation.

Getting Over Fences

There was a banquet in Toronto the other evening and representatives of the various Protestant denominations attended, also a Roman Catholic layman, a Salvation Army officer and a Jewish rabbi. When a gathering of that sort takes place it attracts attention; the papers are sure to have something about it. And the speakers all said something about the unusual gathering, but they all approved of it. Sponsored by the Men's Association the gathering was held in one of the United Churches.

Truth is such gatherings are not unusual, nor are they entirely unique. There are a number of meetings each week where a man's religion, his race or creed make no difference at all. It is so in nearly all the service clubs, and the men who gathered at such places have long since ceased to wonder—if they ever did—why the man who sits next to him does not attend the same church where he worships. He has probably found him to be a gentleman and may have come to the conclusion that his brand of religion has worked well indeed if the man himself is a fair sample of it.

Since time began people have succeeded in building a good many fences of one kind and another in the world. People are hedged off into churches, lodges, clubs, political parties, and all manner of associations but their daily problems are pretty much the same; the same sun shines for them all and if they look out into the night the same galaxy of stars greets them. The man is fortunate who reaches the point where he can get along quite well with most people he meets if they conform to the usual standards of decency.

It Means Paying Bills

When a government decides on a course of action it can be taken for granted it is going to cost money. Governments are not working factors in the sense that they carry into effect the policies and plans which they design. They depend on others to do that. The decision is made to have a commission investigate a certain complained-of situation, and that means the naming of the commissioners, providing for their travelling and living expenses and salaries.

That point is too often overlooked—the naming of a commission means also the paying of the commissioners.

The Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act is a fair enough example. It began operation in the fiscal year of 1934-35, and in answer to an inquiry in the House of Commons the cost of administering that Act was given as follows:

1934-35	$ 269,141
1935-36	713,124
1936-37	555,315
April '37 to Feb. 28, '38	430,386
Total	$1,967,966

And during the same period there has been paid $12,653 for legal services in addition to the figures given above.

No matter what the Act has accomplished there is the blunt fact that its administration alone has cost almost two million dollars in a period one month short of four years of operation. For that reason we can take it for granted that when a government names a commission, a board of inquiry or brings into existence some new legislative enactment which calls for supervision—then we are in for the spending of more money.

There's More To It

A group of refugees from Austria reached New York on the British liner Antonia. They considered it better and safer to leave Austria after Hitler took possession of the country. One of the number was Baron George von Halban; he had been an officer in the army and was a Monarchist sympathizer. He may have had means in his own country but when he fled he was able to secure just enough to buy a ticket and he landed in a new country with $6.20 in change.

Fritz Hertz, his wife and son of three years had fled from Stuttgart. Fritz had been in business there making casings for sausages, but when the change of government took place he was allowed to secure no more material because he was a Jew. The business by which he lived has gone.

Most of the people in the party spoke no English; they have no relatives or friends in United States, but they took advantage of the offer of political asylum offered by United States. They will at least be free from persecution.

We read of these extensions of national boundaries; we see pictures of marching troops and of thousands cheering for Hitler, and yet we are apt to ignore the human element. We do not see the homes which are smashed, the families which are shoved about, the hopes and plans which are cracked and blistered. Friends, home, tradition, the associations of a lifetime, love of country, the tie of language, property rights—all these things are booted into the discard. Self preservation finds utterance only in flight—flight to a new and unknown land thousands of miles away—where the people, language, customs are strange and unknown and where work is difficult to secure. And on top of that these folk are low in funds and numbed in spirit by reason of the experience through which they have passed. Yes—there is more in it than the cheering masses as the conqueror goes his way. People are hurt and crushed and broken. And all this in the year 1938.

Not Suppressing News

Ald. Clifford Harman at a meeting of the Oshawa city council made this remark: "At the first meeting of council this year we passed a motion asking the press to come to all meetings and we have no right to keep asking them to keep things out of the paper." The question under review at the time had to do with a report on tenders for insurance on city property. One report had come but another had not arrived, so the feeling probably was that nothing should be said of the first proposal until the second had been received.

In a case such as that any newspaper would agree to omit reference to the matter until the full report had been received. That is not suppressing news; it is merely waiting until the transaction has been finished before giving the complete report. It is quite understandable that there are items which a paper will not insist on publishing. We presume every paper has dealt with the same matter. By way of illustration we mean this: The city perhaps is desirous of securing a piece of property but if it were generally known then there might be a rise in value and the city would find itself having to buy at advanced price. We believe the larger interest of the taxpayers in general would be best served by saying nothing about the intention to buy, reserving mention of the matter until the deal had been completed. Not only city councils but those of townships and counties face similar problems. The newspapers through their reporters know all about it, and they are usually willing to allow the council to proceed and work out its plan without embarrassing it by giving publicity at a time when it would serve no good purpose. News is not being suppressed. It is merely waiting until such time as the entire story can be properly related.

Purifying Elections By Law

Ottawa is going to pass some more laws about elections; it aims to appoint an inspector-general to scrutinize funds, after which anything which sniffs of corruption in elections is supposed to pass out. For a long time we have been doing our voting under the shadow of posters which warn against bribery and corruption during the holding of an election. The posters are always so close to the place of voting that we must cast a shadow upon them as we come and go. Whether any individual has ever read these posters we do not know, but in a general way they breathe out warnings and mutterings regarding what may happen to the individual who transgresses the law when casting a vote.

A number of provisions may or may not find their way into the new enactments. There is one proposal already which would do away with the practice of submitting questionnaires or pledges to candidates prior to an election to find out where he is going to stand on this question or that. We cannot see why such a custom should be legally frowned upon or legislated out of existence. If a number of people or a single individual wants to know how a candidate is going to deal with some matter then that individual or that group has a right to secure the desired information. It would be entirely wrong to create a situation whereby such people would be told by law that they could ask no such questions but must be content with voting in the dark. We have not much faith in the binding power of many pledges and questionnaires, but the principle behind such things is as democratic as can be and should be left alone.

It is also suggested that there shall be limits placed upon the amount of money which may be spent in promoting the election of any member for the House of Commons. We admit it will take a nicely balanced set of scales to weigh out the sinews of war with any degree of equality, but that proposal touches on something which deserves attention. It is not a sign of good national health when it can be urged that the size of the available campaign fund has much to do with a man's chances of being elected. Neither is it desirable to have expenditure so unregulated that a man without means will be counted out as a candidate. We believe the House of Commons would be better and more representative of all the people if it had in its membership a sufficiency of men who had become convinced from actual experience that the struggle for existence was a hard and sometimes painful issue to face. If such candidates were elected they would speak for the mass of the people.

Whether the passing of new laws and the naming of new officers will bring about a state of positive purity in our elections and all their ways is another matter. All the nations of the world have at one time or another tried to make their people good by legislation and none has succeeded. The desire on the part of the individual to be just is greater than the passing of a law which says he must be just. And right there the new election laws will meet the same test that other similar statutes or regulation have encountered. We do not believe it is possible to make people wholesome by law if they have no desire to be wholesome.

THEY SAID SO

(By A. R. K.)

¶ A started down the street with B, and shortly after they met C, no need for them to think; they were not headed anywhere, and had an evening free from care, decided on a drink.

¶ Now A said he had some at home, he never took a drink alone, they took a little stroll; A said he feared he might get sick, and then he'd need some liquor quick, he exercised control.

¶ Then B said he had quite enough, they better come and taste his stuff, he had two bottles home; he never took in much said he, 'twould be as easy as could be, to leave the stuff alone.

¶ Then C told of some ancient gin, suggesting that they come with him, it was of good report; he said 'twas seldom that he drank, or poured the stuff within his tank, just took a little snort.

¶ And it was nigh to twelve o'clock, when they assembled down the block, their breath was rather strong; they talked of politics and trade, events that passed in gay parade, they then broke out in song.

¶ They all declared ere they went home, that they could leave the stuff alone, and be forever through; and yet with C and A and B, it was an easy thing to see—that's what they didn't do.

Provinces Deal With Apprentice

From Official Parliamentary Report.

Mr. MacNICOL May I ask the minister a question in that regard?

Mr. ROGERS: Certainly.

Mr. MacNICOL: I have in mind that perhaps twenty-five to thirty thousand skilled men—toolmakers, machinists and so forth— have returned to the old country to work in the munitions plants there. What method has the government been following or what has been recommended to train youths between eighteen and twenty-five along these lines? I do not know of any — and I am thoroughly acquainted with many machine shops—who are being trained in these vocations. If we should need them to fill these positions we shall not have them.

Mr. ROGERS: The observation of the hon. member—which perhaps is rather an observation than a question—is quite properly made. There is no doubt that there has been an exodus of trained mechanics to Great Britain; but is my hon. friend also aware that in past years we have in the main drawn our trained mechanics from Great Britain?

Mr. EDWARDS: The technical schools of Ontario are supplying them.

Mr. ROGERS: They are training them to some extent; but I believe the hon. member for Waterloo South will find, if he consults with officials of trades unions and heads of industries, that many of our finest mechanics were drawn from Great Britain. In the last two or three years, in particular, with the great expansion of certain trades, especially the iron and steel industries, in the metal trades, in Great Britain, they have been drawn back to that country.

Mr. MacNICOL: The minister does not intimate that any skilled mechanics of that kind are being drawn from Great Britain to Canada?

Mr. ROGERS: Oh, no, not at the present time. The movement is rather the other way. But apprenticeship, as the commission report indicates, follows in the first instance upon industry. That is to say that industry in this country, if it feels it has a lack, either now or in prospect, of trained mechanics, is in its own interest surely under an obligation to take some measures to train boys who will take the place of those mechanics who, as my hon. friend has said, have gone back to England and of those who are advancing in age and will soon retire. Some of our industries have recognized that problem.

Mr. STEVENS: How many young men or young women, as the case may be, have been or are being trained under these agreements with the provinces which the minister has cited?

Mr. ROGERS: I have all this information here and I shall be glad to place it before the committee.

Mr. COLDWELL: What steps are being taken to follow that work up? This training is good. What follow-up is there? If it is not followed up, it is lost.

Mr. ROGERS: First, as to the question put by the hon. member for Kootenay East, these questions which naturally call for an answer, and an answer will be given. I have the information as to the total number who are receiving training, and I propose to give it to the committee. Certainly I have no desire to withhold it.

Mr. STEVENS: Why the secrecy now?

Mr. ROGERS: The matter of time is surely not so important. I should like to continue along the line that I had intended to follow. But as to the general question which has been put, as I have said, the first obligation for training mechanics lies upon industry.

In the second degree that obligation has always rested upon the provinces, which, as this committee is aware, now control the relations between employer and employee, wages and hours and industrial conditions generally. For that reason I want to say frankly to the committee that we as a government did not feel it was desirable, at this stage at any rate, that we should by dominion legislation seek to invade the field of apprenticeship. There have been cases before—and they have been brought to the attention of the house—where the dominion government has by a grant in aid induced provinces—at least they have occasionally told us afterwards that they were induced—more or less, the assumption has been, against their will, into new directions of expenditure.

I need only mention agricultural instruction and technical education. Once we have gone into those fields the tendency has always been to make what was designed as a temporary expenditure into a permanent expenditure, and in this way to bring about as it were a transfer of provincial obligations to the dominion by a back-door route, and that has not been a satisfactory method of dealing with the situation.

HOME

It belongs not to the stately hall,
Or mansion grand and fair,
Or treasures that by wealth are bought,
However rich or rare.

'Tis not confined to clime, or race,
To high, or low degree,
But may be found in any place,
Wherever we may be.

Where kindly thoughts, and helpful deeds,
From loving hearts do spring,
Where each the other's sorrows share,
And love rules everything.

Where father, mother, boys and girls,
Each their own quota bring,
And share their smiles, their tears, their joys
Where Jesus reigns as King.

Yes this is home, where hearts can rest,
Where troubles are forgot,
And those who share this home how blest
How happy is their lot.

MR. ELLIOTT'S SPEECH

Editor Examiner:

Sir: The speech and vote of Mr. Alex. Elliott, M.L.A. (or is it M.P.P. or M.P.) which he made and recorded on the sweepstakes question not only ranks him with those who condemn sweepstakes but with those who condemn every form of venture no matter how good the cause. If every ticket carried something with it even a tooth pick the objectors would be silenced. There must be a reward in it. The uncertainty is called gambling whereas gambling means living by playing for money, not chances. When Mr. Elliott put in his money on the election he took a chance and won. He however condemns Mr. Hepburn as a delinquent and of course will not support him any longer.

It is sad to think that so many worthy people like the Kiwanis, Rotary and the like are merely wolves in lamb's clothing. Away with them and all the dear old ladies with their crazy quilts. Give us Barrabas. The theory of chance on which life insurance is founded will have to go too.

STRIKES AND RELIEF

Editor Examiner:

Sir: I would like to make a few statements about a report in the paper regarding the action of a textile organizer concerned with the Woodstock strike. I certainly don't approve of such strong arm tactics, but there are two sides to every story and the strikers should not be blamed too much. It's only human nature for workers to forget themselves and lose their tempers when they see a minority group of their own number continuing work when a strike is on, thus prolonging a strike when the majority of workers are trying to raise their standard of living.

On the other hand if they all stayed out the strike would be soon over. Regarding strong-arm tactics strikers might sometimes use — if a person follows the history of the labor movement and strikes, you will find that time after time big companies will enlist professional strike-breakers at great expense to break a strike and to break picket lines, when the workers are trying to better their conditions.

So there are two sides to everything. The Welfare Department at Queen's Park certainly wasn't helping much when they declared no relief for strikers in the Woodstock strike. They must have forgotten that strikes are still legal and it's outside their jurisdiction to pass judgment on the labor activities of citizens applying for relief. It was their intention to warn workers no doubt in other parts of the Province, if they went on strike they would get no relief. However the workers will always overcome such obstacles and labor will have one day, its day of reckoning.

AT A FARM SALE

Editor Examiner:

Sir: In attending a sale of goods and chattels of a farm sale, there were some outstanding features. Some grain bags without a single hole in them after being in use for twenty-one years brought fifty cents each and they, only cost twenty-five cents each when new showing what a little care will do.

There was also a large number of implements in splendid condition. One wagon which was some fifty years old had the same box and spring seat in good repair and the original paint was still on it.

A set of sleighs, twenty- one years old, but looking like new sold for twenty dollars.

There was sold to one of the brothers of the man who had the sale a Buffalo robe and in a passing remark he said it had kept him warm many a cold night when he was a young man some seventy years ago.

The roads became a terrible mess after everyone coming over them to the sale and some fifteen cars were stalled in the mud in about three miles when attempting to make the return journey home. The auctioneer had to have a team draw his car about three miles in order to get home, taking four hours to go about ten miles. The people who could not obtain teams had to return to the farm house where the sale had been held and stay until morning.

Spring is here again, and maple syrup making is in full swing and my how good it is when made in the old iron pot, but an amusing thing happened at one place of maple syrup making. While the man who was in attendance at the sugar bush was away gathering sap, two small boys while playing around the pot of sap accidentally threw a red toque into it and it sank to the bottom and then they beat it to the house. The man returned and when stirring the sap discovered it to be a pretty red color. On further investigation he came upon the red togue and his kettle of sap was consequently no good.

Cutting Down On Salaries

(Letter in Chatham News.)

DEAR SIR:—It is not my intention to enter into any controversy with the prolific Mr. Ball who, almost constantly, infests the "Voice of the People" column with irresponsible twaddle in regard to salaries of public servants, workmen and others who are too busy trying to promote the success of our country to spare the time to either preach blue ruin or pen an answer to Mr. Ball's pernicious attempts to undermine the foundations of society that permits him to exist.

All Mr. Ball's talk about reducing salaries has been open to serious question but, when he recently expressed the idea that the depression could have been averted had those receiving salaries of over $1,000. per year taken a cut of 50% of any sum received in excess of that amount, he revealed his colossal ignorance of the whole subject.

I happen to be a salaried man who has worked up, in the course of twenty years from an initial salary of $840. to a present salary of $1,800. per year. Most of my associates and friends are in about the same salary class so I should know a little more about salaries than our economic Don Quixote, Mr. Ball.

Under Mr. Ball's 50% salary reduction plan, a man receiving $1,500 per year, would have had his salary reduced to $1,250 per year meaning, approximately, $104. per month. Surely Mr. Ball will concede that a man is entitled to maintain a living standard equal to or as near Mr. Ball's standard as possible. I presume it must be no higher however. If this $1,250 a year man has a wife and only one child to support, it should be interesting to see how he spreads his $104 per month. Here's about how it goes.

Rent	$25.00
Electricity	2.00
Fuel (summer)	2.50
Fuel (winter)	10.00
Water	.75
Milk	3.00
'Phone	2.00
Groceries and meat (At about $10 per week).	40.00
Amusement (I show a week for 3)	4.25
Church and Charity	2.00
Insurance (Just $1,000).	3.00
Total	per month
Six winter months	$92.00
Six summer months	84.50

At $104 per month he has $12 a month extra in the winter giving a total of $72. In the summer he has $19.50 a month extra giving a total of $117. The grand total extra for the year would then be $189. Quite a nice saving but how about doctor, dentist and clothing. Let's work some of it out as cheap as possible.

Man's coat	$15.00
Man's suit	21.00
Underwear	4.00
Shoes	4.00
Hat	2.50
Shirts, sox, ties, etc.	10.00
Wife's coat	15.00
Wife's dresses	20.00
Underwear	4.00
Shoes	5.00
Hat (2)	5.00
Stockings, belts	6.00
Child's coat	6.00
Dresses	5.00
Underwear	3.00
Shoes	4.00
Hat (2)	2.00
Stockings	5.00

Incidentals, such as rubbers, garters, handkerchiefs, umbrellas, scarves, gloves, mending materials and other unlisted articles will easily run at $10. for each member of the family, totalling $80.

Adding up the above gives us a total for clothing of $166.50 which, substracted from the extra $189. leaves just $22.50 for doctor and dentist bills for three people. The wife should have a little face powder and some cold cream. The child should have a few toys or something to play with. The man should have an odd smoke, soft drink or perhaps a glass of beer. If the child is of school age, there will be pencils, scribblers and other school books. A car is absolutely out of the question so it should be possible for the family to have a few outings of some kind during the year.

It will be especially nice of Mr. Ball to figure out a $1,250. yearly budget for a family of six or seven. Considering the hundreds of thousands of salaries that are spent to support our basic industries, it would be interesting to have Mr. Ball figure out how his salary reduction would affect their markets and the economic structure of our country. It would also be interesting to have Mr. Ball figure out how his salary reductions would affect the furniture and automobile industries that, in turn, pay salaries that are spent for meat, eggs, butter, groceries, clothes and other products of agriculture and industry; salaries that go to pay taxes or rents to pay taxes, that go to increase mercantile business so that merchants can pay their property and business taxes.

As a professed and self-appointed student and teacher of social economics, Mr. Ball would do well to give the question considerable more study before voicing further fallacies that might tend to influence many uninformed readers to help hasten the blue ruin that he so glibly predicts.

Yours very truly,
—A Salaried Man.

CANADA'S WAR DEBT.

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

AS SHOWN by the Canada Year Book the war and demobilization expenditures of Canada up to and including the fiscal year 1920 totalled $1,670,406,236. In the next three years, 1921-23, there were further expenditures of $23,000,000 odd and since then there have been additional small items chargeable to war. These figures apply only to actual war expenditures. To get the cost of the war there would have to be added to them the large, continuing, outlays for pensions. From 1914 to 1920 the gross debt of Canada rose steeply from $544,391,369 to $3,041,529,578. This enormous increase was chiefly but not entirely due to the war expenditures.

English Recruiting Stations Kept Busy

A top hat stands out in just about any surrounding and especially so in this one. The scene is the recruiting station outside the London Stock Exchange and pedestrians stop to look at the enticing pamphlets prepared by military officials to induce young England to join the army. An increase in the nation's territorial army is earnestly desired by the government and this particular station was seeking recruits for the London Rifle Brigade and the Queen's Westminster Regiment.

LOW-COST HOME BUILDING ACTION SOUGHT IN HOUSE

OTTAWA, April 7 (CP). — From Opposition speakers the Government yesterday heard a story of increasing unemployment, complaints of lack of action in dealing with the problem and demands for a venture into the building of low-cost houses.

The discussion came on the resolution of Labor Minister Rogers, preceding introduction of the annual measure to authorize the Government to make grants and engage in undertaking for the relief of unemployment.

A. A. Heaps (C.C.F., Winnipeg North) urged housing development as the surest method of dealing with unemployment and suggested it could be promoted out of funds from the public treasury obtained by a new issue of currency.

Denton Massey (Con., Toronto-Greenwood) said the Government waited two years for the final report of the National Employment Commission and now was going to wait for the Rowell Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations before taking action.

Like a Double-Play?

This, he said, sounded like a double-play in baseball, "Rogers-to-Purvis-to-Rowell."

He declared 200,000 Canadians would reach the age of 16 this year, and of these he believed 100,000 would leave school because of financial necessity. The Government was spending $1,000,000 a year for youth training, which meant only $10 each for those reaching the age of 16.

He believed this sum was entirely inadequate, considering the number of young people and their lack of training for jobs. Conditions today were worse than when the Dominion granted more money to the provinces for technical school education.

Many workers in Hamilton were already on short time owing to a slackening in industrial activity, Albert Brown (Con., Hamilton East) told the House. They would soon be on relief, adding to the burdens of the municipality.

Failure of the Government to provide adequate protection for Canadian industry was a big factor in unemployment. Proper steps were not being taken to prevent the dumping of foreign-made goods in Canada at prices which forced Canadian manufacturers to close down their plants.

The debate continues today with Ralph Maybank (lb., Winnipeg South Centre) holding the floor.

Proceedings of the Public Accounts Committee of the Quebec Legislature created a flurry in the House when Edouard Lacroix (Lib., Beauce) rose on a point of privilege to protest against references to himself made in the committee.

Mr. Lacroix denied he had unlawfully exported wood from Quebec to the United States and that he owed money to the Quebec Government in respect of his timber operations. He charged Premier Duplessis with following the methods of Stalin Russia.

Hastings County Court House Was Completed 100 Years Ago

Plans Are Already Being Made To Celebrate The Centenary

BELLEVILLE, April 7.—To commemorate the centenary of the Hastings County Court House, plans are under way for a ceremony early this summer at which either the Governor-General of Canada or the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario is expected to attend. The huge stone structure was completed in 1838, and through the past century has been regarded as one of the finest types of architecture in Eastern Ontario.

Built at a cost of $23,640, the Court House today would cost more than $200,000 because of increased cost of material and labor, it has been estimated.

First court in this distict was held at Adolphustown, then centre of Midland district and originally called Mecklenburg.

Magistrate's Board

The first board of magistrate's for the district sat at Adolphustown, in Prince Edward County, on January 14, 1794. On the board were Richard Cartwright, Jr., Neil McLean, Hector McLean, John Walden Meyers, Hazelton Spencer, Alexander Chisholm, Bryan Crawford, Alexander Fisher, Nicholas Hagerman, Caleb Gilbert and William Bell.

Capt. John Walden Meyers was a leading resident of the locality, and directed the first industry at the site of the present city of Belleville. The centre bore his name until 1816 when it was re-named Belleville.

Samuel Sherwood, also on the board of magistrates, was a lumberman at Belleville, and is credited with having floated the first raft of timber from the Bay of Quinte to Montreal. Caleb Gilbert was the first deputy registrar of deeds for the county.

At the time of the first board of magistrates, not only judicial duties came under the board's jurisdiction, but power to legislate for the needs of the locality was also vested in the board.

Although a hundred years have passed, and old landmarks have passed into history in Belleville, the court house today remains one of the city's most imposing buildings. It is in an excellent state of repair.

Varied Races At Coast University

VANCOUVER, April 1. — (CP). —Varieties of nationalities at a League of Nations Assembly is rivalled by University of British Columbia undergraduates here.

Twenty-five nations are represented. Eighty-seven per cent of the students are of British origin, but 281 have parents of other nationality.

Americans and Japanese lead the non-British groups with 49 students each. There are 28 Chinese and three East Indians.

Nearly every European country is represented in the balance.

Playwright Sees Sedate Ireland

NEW YORK, April 7 — (CP). — Peace is bad for Ireland, according to Paul Vincent Carroll, Irish playwright now in New York to see the Broadway production of his hit play "Shadow and Substance." To the political restlessness of the past he attributed much of the force behind the Irish dramatic, literery and cultural revival of the last decade.

"The Dublin rolled in the smoke of battle and suspicion—the Dublin I knew—was a very exciting place," Carroll said. "As things are going at present, Ireland will become just a small republic."

Carroll, whose play nets him $800 a week, will return to Glasgow soon, to resume a teaching job he has held for 17 years at $37.50 a week.

NEW YORK STARS LONG ON BRAINS

NEW YORK, April 7 — (CP). — George Jean Nathan, most severe of American drama critics, has fostered a tradition that Thespis' sons and daughters are most cases of arrested mental development.

If Mr. Nathan were to try to prove his case in court, a neat nomination for star defence witness would be Elissa Landi, now on Broadway with a new play about Catharine of Russia, "Empress of Destiny."

In addition to being beautiful (which Mr. Nathan isn't), Miss Landi speaks French, German, Italian and English, and has four published novels to her credit. A couple of other good witnesses would be Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Maurice Evans, two actors from the sceptred isle.

Sir Cedric, for instance, is as much of a critic of audiences as Mr. Nathan is of what goes on behind the footlights. In a recent essay (he writes too), the leading player of "Shadow and Substance" made the interesting observation that although an audience is a "heterogeneous collection of individuals," from all classes of society, of various ages, degrees of sophistication, virtue, "once a play has begun to take effect, the spectators respond to the business and emotions of the stage in unison."

Maurice Evans, who has been touring the United States and Canada in Shakespeare's Richard II for the last five months, is a close friend of George Bernard Shaw, who finds no deficiency in his intelligence. Mr. Evans would be able to tell Mr. Nathan that, as a result of his tour, he has reached a conclusion that the "Broadway point of view toward the continent as a whole is too often misguided." People in other cities have ideas about the theatre too.

One also could mention Alexander Woollcott, now an actor in a Theatre Guild play, to raise the general I.Q. of the defence. But Mr. Woollcott, who was a drama critic once himself, is very busy these nights in "Wine of Choice," because when he is on stage with his glasses off he can't see a thing, doesn't even know how many other actors are around, unless they are talking.

You even could call in Norah Anderson, who was known as Denise when she did such sinnous dances in Manhattan night clubs. She is an amateur poet, painter and sculptress in her spare time. Think of the weight she'd carry with a jury.

PIRATES' HURLER SUFFERS INJURY IN ROUGHOUSING

(By the Associated Press.)

Sweetwater, Tex. — Pittsburgh Pirates, who start an eight-game series to-day with Chicago White Sox, are looking to the season's first pay day with mixed emotions. Manager Pie Traynor has announced he will wait until then to announce which players are to be fined for the rough-housing on Pullman's which was the cause, among other things, of Pitcher Russ Bauer's knee injury. Pie isn't fooling—and now the Bucs aren't either.

Spartanburg, S C. — General Manager Warren C. Giles, seeking to bolster Cincinnati Reds' outfield, has made overtures to New York Yankees for Ernie Koy. But the Ruppert Rifles—possibly with a view to Joe DiMaggio's continued hold-out siege—haven't yet committed themselves on the rookie who has just missed out in three tryouts.

Lakeland, Fla. — Tommy Bridges, Detroit right-hander, gets a chance to-day to see if a chipped elbow bone interferes with his pitching. He's slated to start against Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, his first service since he hurt his arm nearly two weeks ago.

Clearwater, Fla. — Brooklyn officials, with time to reflect to-day the Dodgers took a day off before breaking camp to-morrow, were wondering when Dolf Camilli would begin living up to his reported purchase price of $75,000. The former Philly first baseman has an average of .160 on five hits in 43 times at bat. He left seven men stranded yesterday, as Brooklyn lost its seventh straight, to Detroit.

Orlando, Fla. — Owner Clark Griffith was putting the accent on youth when his Washington Senators reported here six weeks ago. To-day as the Nats squared off against Boston Bees, all the rookie prospects had gone glimmering, and old-timers Ossie Bluege and Goose Goslin were being counted on to play a good part of the season.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

ANOTHER PRO rasslin' promoter dropped in to see us yesterday. Those gees, like garden weeds, just won't stay down. However, this fellow represented Toronto Queensbury A.C. a rather reputable house—in fact the big rasslin' company of Ontario. Grapplers like Dan O'Mahoney, Christie, Robert, and other headliners on their list. He was angling for a spot for a few indoor shows here this spring, and then some outdoor cards come summer. Checking on the Brock St. rink and the lacrosse arena. He told us they'd have Jack Dempsey back on a tour as rassle referee—same as last autumn—in June, and might work him in here for a show. The Queensbury A.C. staged some fine matt bouts in Peterborough some five years back, Jack Corcoran giving local fans the best. But since then, other fly-by-night outfits nearly ruined rasslin' in this town by smelly tactics.

* * * * * *

FOR OUR part, professional rasslin' is a racket, and we refuse to run a temperature over any bout. But we will give the grapplers credit, they put on a good evening's entertainment when they so desire. Which is more than you can say of pro boxing and lots of other moneyed games. Even hockey. The merry maimen practically murder each other in an effort to get the cash customers standing on their seats and roaring approval or threats. If run by a legitimate stable, we will boost the wrestling gentry, but we still refuse to get excited over their ring tactics. However, there are all kinds of folk here, and everywhere, who do. They put on fine shows at times. No doubt there will be a few cards anyway staged locally ere too long.

* * * * * *

LIKE DOPEY, the seventh dwarf in Snow White—as they headed home from that scrumptious diamond mine—rasslin' is last in the list of our favorite sports. On account of, strictly speaking, it isn't a sport at all. Strictly business, but quite often right entertaining business. When the brawny behemoths put on the works we'll admit it is something of a something. Like the first robin, we'll even hurry to go out on the limb and predict that this Queensbury crew (if they get located here) will give fans and fannettes all the fun and excitement that is good for mere humans in one evening. The gang want a stop-over between Ottawa and Toronto, so they figure on Peterborough. With plenty of headliners enroute. Which is okay by us, if the customers crave it. But no more riff-raff rasslin' shows here.

* * * * * *

AND WE hear the Riverview A.C. has a new improved clubroom for its local boxers now, over the Service Cigar Store, down near Charlotte St., with all the latest equipment. Club re-opens Monday night and everyone is invited to give it a look-see. They expect to boost their membership, the cost being a buck a month. The gang are planning to run a mitt card at the lacrosse arena around May 24th, and they hope to put some of their scrappers in against some Peterborough A.C. pugs, the latter club being run by Bill Horrocks, whom we mentioned a short time ago. If not that, then they'll line up a few Toronto and Campbellford fighters for the opposition. More again about this outfit, which has already staged two fine fight cards here.

IT STRUCK us yesterday like a bolt of lightning locating our brain (sure, we got one) that the Petes came mighty close to having a trip to Winnipeg. Seems the Allan Cup finals will be held there this year, and the local puckists were right in line for the jaunt to meet the Western winner. Two more goals, and Pick Hines' boys would have rubbed out Niagara Falls. Then, if they licked Chatham for the senior "B" title, they would have met Falconbridge. A win over the Northerners would have put 'em right in against Cornwall, and then a victory would have meant the Quebec Aces in Eastern Canada finals. See how close it was? It fairly takes one's breath!

* * * * * *

ALFIE MOORE, hero of Hawks' 3-1 win over Leafs in the first Stanley Cup final the other eve, played against the Petes 12 years ago in London when the locals won the senior O.H.A. title. In fact, Moore fanned on one in the first three seconds of the game when Frankie Collins shot from outside the blue line to score one of the fastest goals on record. After that Moore played a bangup game in goal, but London lost out. Here's another angle faintly connected with the Chi-Hawks, too: Bill Tobin, the battling vice-prexy of the present Hawks—he caused Stewart and Smythe to swing fists Tuesday eve—was brought in here some couple of decades back to play goal. Peterborough had such imports then as Tobin, Duke Keats, Red Briden, Montgomery and Spec Baillie—but the O.H.A. tossed 'em out early in the season as Keats had signed a pro contract. Jerry Coughlin was about the only Peterborough puckist on that short-lived squad!

* * * * * *

THIS IS a baseball item from Kingston: "Peterborough is reported as the first club to make a move to take advantage of the new set-up with Dit Clapper, Boston Bruins, expected to locate in the Liftlock City. Other professional players, who formerly played baseball, will also likely locate in the Central Ontario League, as well as other parts of the province to play ball. Pro hockey players like Pat Patterson of Kingston and Mickey Blake of Barriefield may be able to strengthen the Ponies." We haven't heard of the Petes' officers going after Clapper, though he might be an okay first-sacker and would certainly be a drawing card. However, we don't know Dit's ability in baseball. He has played plenty of softball and is a first-rate lacrosser, though.

THE CAGE sport locally is on the wane for this semester. It may wind up Friday with a couple of playoff contests by girls' outfits at the Y.W.C.A. Quaker Debs tangle with Quaker Maids at 7.30 in a junior sudden-death final. At 8.15, St. John Teenites meet Westclox in the second of their best-in-three senior finals, Teenites having taken the first. If Westclox lose on Friday, the season is ended. It was for the men's City Basketball League last night at the Y.M.C.A. with C.G.E. winning the round over St. Paul's, 81-70. But the Saints won the final game by a 43-41 count and didn't bow out without making it a real battle. A 13-point lead by Electrics in the first fixture was certainly something put by for a rainy day—as it rained hard on them last night!

* * * * * *

PICKING 'EM off the grapevine: Honey Tompkins, of the local junior Colts last winter, has been approached by Montreal Canadiens . . . . Some soccer players already are doing a little practising these nights at King Edward Park . . . . Oshawa won the Eastern Ontario O.J.H.A. finals from Belleville Hi-Speeds, 4-1, last night in a sudden-death playoff at Oshawa . . . . The Oshawa Generals have their second junior playoff at Ottawa this e'en . . . . Powassan evened up the O.H.A. intermediate "B" finals with a 4-2 nod over Elora last night; next one is Friday . . . . Cornwall sewed up the senior puck series with a 5-2 chuckle over Quebec Aces . . . . Joe Krakauskas, Ontario southpaw who looked like a sure bet with Washington this year, will probably be shipped back to the minors any day owing to wildness . . . . Bill Nowak, the Detroit sandlotter who was invited here some four years ago, is with Fort Smith of the Cotton States Loop, a Giant farm . . . . Church Puck Loop banquet date isn't definitely set yet . . . . Leafs certainly ought to win over Hawks tonight, if they're ever gonna . . . . R. A. Elliott of Deloro writes to tell us the Falls' baseball executive entertained royally at the recent O.B.A.A. convention there . . . . NOTE: Ball players are invited to start indoor exercises Monday eve at 8.15 in the ""; more on it tomorrow . . . . They found Moore in a beverage room before the first Stanley Cup game this week—and he sure handled more shots a bit later at the Gardens!

NEW YORK, April 7—(CP).—A talking picture has been translated into a talkng book for the first time, so the blind can enjoy "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." The talking books for the blind are long-playing discs somewhat resembling phonograph records. Their titles are in braille, and they are easily played, on an electric reading machine.

GOOD PROSPECTS ON SEALS' CLUB AT ST. BONIFACE

WINNIPEG, April 7. — St. Boniface Seals, in becoming 1937-38 Western Canada junior hockey champions, wrecked a regal ice dynasty in drubbing Winnipeg Monarchs, last year's Canadian junior titlists, in a renewal of their battles that thrilled thousands of fans last season.

Last year it was Harry Neil's Monachs who won out in Winnipeg's civil war — Monarchs being winners of the south group title and Seals in the north division. As all Canada knows, Monarchs went on to win the Memorial Cup.

But this year St. Boniface Seals left little doubt as to their superiority over Monarchs. Under Coach Mike Kryschuk, Seals faltered but few times in their drive along the icy trail that leads to sectional and possibly a Dominion hockey title.

Earned Their Laurels.

After their conquest of last year's titleholders, the Seals continued their march through the Western Canada hockey ranks, turning back Port Arthur West-Ends, Thunder Bay champions, in two straight games, and then trouncing Edmonton Athletic Club decisively three games to one, to become champions of Western Canada. They feel confident they can pick up where Monarchs left off in Toronto last April, and return the Memorial Cup to Winnipeg for the sixth time since the competition was inaugurated in 1919.

Collectively, St. Boniface Seals are not a bruisingly heavy squad. They do not pack the all-round speed of the Winnipeg Monarchs who thrilled Eastern hockey fans in the Memorial final. But they have one of the finest defences ever to play junior hockey here, with Wally Stanowski rated as just about the best junior player ever produced here, and that is saying plenty.

Chief powers behind the Seals are Defenceman Stanowski, Defenceman Bert Janke,, who captains the team; Herb Burron, centre; Bill Reay, a left winger, and Hermie Gruhn, right wing. Stanowski weighs 170 pounds, and is highly prized by the Toronto Maple Leafs. Wally is headed for Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens when he moves out of the amateur ranks. His work throughout the Monarch series, and in the play-off for the north group title with Brandon Wheat Kings, was brilliant.

Bert Janke weighs 180 pounds. Chunky and hard to knock off his pins, this boy is in his last year of junior hockey, and is on Boston Bruins' negotiation list. He is rated as certain big-time material. Both Bill Reay and Hermie Gruhn are wingers, being sought by Detroit Red Wings. They each pack about 160 to 165 pounds, and flank 175-pound Bill McGregor on one of Coach Kryschuk's ace lines.

More Pro Prospects.

Herb Burron, who tips the Toledos at between 175 and 180 pounds, is on Boston Bruins' negotiation list. Burron plays centre on a real pinch-hitting line, being flanked by Jack Messett and George Gordon. Messett's 175 pounds served him well when he sparked Seals to victory in the Manitoba title series. Gordon weighs 145 pounds, the lightest man on the squad, and he, along with utility man Jack Simpson, are players who really came into their own during the playdowns with some mighty important goals.

Patch Couture is a defenceman who can rush and block effectively with his 160 pounds. When Couture was injured, for a while Janke and Stanowski alternated at doing the full 60 minutes defence duty.

Getting Ready

It looks as if the powers that be will be fighting over the 1940 Olympic games right up until the time they are scheduled to be held, but that's not worrying little Miss Hideko Mineshima, champion girl discus thrower of Japan. Alfie Moore A Standout As Hawks Down Leafs 3-1

EIGHT PLAYERS AFTER THE ELUSIVE DISC AS IT BOUNDS IN FRONT OF MR. MOORE

"WELL DONE, ALFIE", SAYS MIKE

Those surprising Chicago Black Hawks continued their unpredictable tactics against Toronto Maple Leafs in the first game of the Stanley Cup finals by skating off with a 3-1 victory. Their grand old veterans, Johnny Gottselig, Paul Thompson and the rest were winging along in fine style, but nobody could mention the win without bringing in Alfie Moore, last minute goal replacement for Mike Karakas, who stepping into the breach and turned in a grand game. Mike, LEFT, is congratulating Alfie after the game in the lower picture. Action is the keynote of the TOP picture as eight of the 12 players go after the puck. LEFT to RIGHT, on their feet, are Bob Davidson, Gord Drillon, Alex Levinsky, Bill Mackenzie, Johnny Gottselig, Syl Apps and Paul Thompson. The player on the ice, needless to say, is Man of the Moment Moore.

CRICKETER FOOLS ENGLISH UMPIRES

LONDON, April 7—(CP).—W. A. Hadlee, member of the New Zealand cricket team that played in England last summer, has a novel souvenir of the tour. Following an epidemic of leg-before-wicket decisions given against him he sought out the umpires before each game.

To obtain photographs he said to each umpire: "I am taking back an album of the world's leading umpires. Will you please stand for me sir, with arm upraised as if you were giving the batsman out?"

Hadlee met with no refusals, but what would the officials have said had they known their pictures were to be placed in an album the front of which carried the inscription: "The Rogues' Gallery."

Sign-Stealing Is A Basebll Art Meant Many Hits For O'Doul

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7. — Now that baseball is nigh you may be assured Frank (Lefty) O'Doul will steal his share of signs that aided him a few years ago in winning the National League batting crown.

The successful, likeable manager of the San Francisco Seals learned with the New York Giants that every little movement of a pitcher, catcher or baserunner may, and usually does, have a significant meaning.

O'Doul and his chief aide, Larry Woodall, former star catcher of the Detroit Tigers, insisted many ball games are won through ability to detect signs and mannerisms of opposing players.

"I remember big Flint Rhem, the Cards' right-hander," reminisced Lefty.

"When he threw his curve he looked at the bal las he drew his arms over his head in his windup. When he threw a fast one, he brought his arms up naturally over his head and let er fly.

Tongue Betrayed Dodger.

"There was a pitcher named Watson with Brooklyn, who had a habit of sticking his tongue out the corner of his mouth when he threw a curve."

The informatin was mighty helpful and added points to O'Doul's batting average.

He was smart about it, too—he didn't tell anyone.

"I knew if I did the world would get around the circuit and Rhem and Watson would cover up their give-away signs. And I wanted to—and did—win the batting championship."

Woodall—who still is capable of playing major league ball if his work is spaced—recalled catching Dutch Leonard during the fiery regime of Manager Ty Cobb.

"Roger Peckinpaugh, Cleveland shortstop, was one of the toughest hitters Leonard ever pitched to.

Leonard was pitching against Cleveland, and he had a world of stuff. Peckinpaugh was not in the game, due to injuries, but coached at first base. The Cleveland hitters were cracking, Leonard and Cobb was raving. He opened up on me about the fourth inning.

"'You've been around this league long enough to get wise to yourself and hide your signs,' Cobb fumed. 'They'll steal your glove before the game is over.'

"We had plenty of words, for I knew the Indians weren't getting my signs.

"The next day in one of those general talkfests that ballplayers have, we discussed Peck's ability to hit Leonard and commented that he was coaching on first during the game. We learned later that Peckinpaugh discovered Leonard dipped his knee a bit in tossing his curve and that he passed the word along to the Cleveland hitters."

WISE FOX CARRIES CANADIAN HOPES IN KENTUCKY DERBY

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP). — Carrying the silks of A. G. Tarn, Wise Fox goes out after the Kentucky Derby May 7 in an effort to bring Canada its first win in the Blue Grass classic since victory went to Sir Barton, owned by J. K. L. Ross of Montreal.

No one could call a victory by the Winnipeg-owned Wise Fox exactly an upset. He has been getting better play in the future books than more highly-regarded Derby eligibles and already this season has shown fine form.

Wise Fox, a bay out of Minerva, last month raced 1⅛ mile—one-quarter mile les stha nthe Derby distance—in 1:51 1-5 to win Tarn his second Louisiana Derby. In that $12,000 Race Wise Fox left behind such Kentucky Derby eligibles as Bourbon King and Sir Raleigh.

The Winnipeg sportsman's horse, purchased from William Woodward during the winter, showed little worth as a two-year-old, but since Wise Fox won the Louisiana Derby, Tarn has become enthusiastic over his Kentucky Derby chances.

Jockey Johnny Longden, crack rider from Taber, Alta., was up on Tarn's Rushaway—now a five-year? old and so-called iron horse" of the United States' turf—to win the Louisiana Derby. He also handled Wise Fox to make it two out of three for the Winnipeg owner and in all likelihood will get the mount on the Fox for the Kentucky Derby.

Since doing so well with Rushaway which also won the Illinois and Latonia Derbies in 1936, Tarn has made a reputation for winning with horses whose owners thought none too well of them, and to win the Derby with the Fox would be a tremendous feather in his cap.

Dauber, Can't Wait and Bull Lea are other promising nominees for the May 7 race. William Dupont, Jr., paid $29,00 last fall for Dauber, which finished second to Stagehand in the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby and as two-year-olds, Can't Wait, from Myron Selznick's barn, and Warren Wright's Bull Lea, performed well.

Rivulettes Repeat In Ladies' Hockey

GALT, Ont., April 7 (CP).—Charlottetown Islanders gave the best battle of any women's hockey team to come to this district in years, but they were defeated 5-1 last night by Preston Rivulettes, three times holders of the Dominion title. The stiff opposition aroused keen interest in the second game here tomorrow night in the two-game, total-goal series for the Eastern Canada Ladies' Hockey Association title, the winner to play Winnipeg for the Canadian championship.

Goose McInnes, petite forward for the Prince Edward Islanders, was one of the speediest and most effective players on the ice, dangerous every time she got the puck. She scored the visitors' only goal, midway through the second period.

The stellar Preston front line of M. Schmuck, Hilda Ranscombe, and E. Pitcher was again the heavy artillery for the champions, accounting for all five goals. Miss Pitcher was high scorer with three goals.

ELECTRICS WIN 81 TO 70 ROUND IN FINAL SERIES

C.G.E. won the championship of the City Basketball League last night in the "Y" gym, though St. Paul's took the final game of the playoffs by a 43-41 score. The round score for the Electrics was 81-70, the latter gang having a 13-point margin from the first fixture. A fair-sized crowd saw a wide-open tussle last night between two good teams, with both sides being minus some of their stars. St. Paul's were again without Thorburn, who was injured some time ago; while C.G.E. missed Cadd, Crowe and Hunter.

With their big lead, the Electrics were in control all of the way, though St. Paul's, who outplayed them, might have made it closer but for some poor shooting. The Saints failed to capitalize on their advantage in this fray but turned in a fine performance, nonetheless. Jakafby, Galley and Holmes flashed fine combination and shooting for the champs up front, the former scoring 17 points and the other two 12 apiece. They got 11 on free throws, Jakafby getting seven of nine tries.

Leads Scorers

Sedgewick got 14 for St. Paul's with Weir scoring 12 and Pulkinghorn getting 10. They had nearly twice as many shots as the other side and could have almost doubled the count with more accuracy. The score was 19-14 for C.G.E. at half-time after a rough first frame, but it tamed down in the second half, with play fast and cleaner. St. Paul's took a lead in the game early in the second half but failed to materially reduce the round score. There were a dozen fouls called on each team with strict officiating. Cameron and Magee of C.G.E. and McIntyre of St. Paul's all drew the gate for four fouls. Good defensive work was shown by Pulkinghorn, Galley, Marsh and Archibald. The teams:

St. Paul's: Sedgewick, Marsh, Ascott, McIntyre, Broadley, Weir, Gemmell and Pulkinghorn.

C.G.E.: Jakafby, Galley, Holmes, Archibald, Cameron, Tranter and Magee.

Referees, H. A. Craig and J. C. McClenaghan.

ANZACS MAY GO TO OLD FRANCE

SYDNEY, Australia, April 7 (C.P.). — Suggestion that a detachment of Australian war veterans should go to France for the unveiling of the Australian War Memorial at Villers Bretonneux on August 8 has been made here and representations may be made to the Federal Government.

Returned Soldiers' League has already arranged for the scattering of ashes over the graves of Australian dead in the Villers Bretonneux Cemetery. Ashes will be obtained from the burning of ribbons attached to floral offerings at war memorials in Australia.

WINS THE TOPPER

TORONTO, April 7. — (CP). — Captain Bob Wright of the Steamer Coalfax brought a cargo of coal into Toronto harbor to-day and won the Toronto harbor master's 63-year-old topper for being the first skipper into port with a cargo.

"I got a hat at Brockville also," commented the captain, who opened incoming navigation here last season and in 1930. The Coalfax came in from Oswego, N.Y.

Cornwall Flyers Tie Series With 5-2 Win Over Quebec

Winners Outplay Opponents In Late Frames—Aces' Goalie Stars

OTTAWA, April 7 (CP)—Unless Quebec Aces regain their lost power before next Friday night Cornwall Flyers' task of reaching the Allan Cup finals will be nothing more than a pleasant work-out.

Tied at one game each in their Eastern Canada final, Aces and Flyers meet here Friday in the deciding contest of the two-of-three series for the right to travel to Saskatoon and Calgary for the Dominion final against the Western champions. The third game was necessitated by Cornwall's 5-2 victory last night after aces won the first contest in Montreal Monday night.

Down two goals in the first period after a shaky start, Flyers came back to outplay their opponents and but for the vereran goalie Alex Bolduc, the score might have been much larger in favor of the conquerors of the Northern Ontario titlists, Falconbrdge Falcons.

The noisy crowd of 9500 just 30 short of the all-time record for the Auditorium went wild when Conny Brown cut Quebec's margin to one goal 39 seconds before the end of the first period. He got the equalizer in the second. The little centre was all over the ice and made the Brennan-Taugher defence look bad on a number of plays.

Not satisfied with the one-goal margin earned when Harvey McLelland got Cornwall's third Coach Don Penniston sent his Flyers after more goals and they got them. First Brown notched his third goal and the veteran Farrand Gillie completed the scoring for the game with Flyers' fifth marker.

Oshawa Juveniles Defeat Belleville

OSHAWA, April 7.—Oshawa juveniles won the Eastern Ontario O.H.A. title here last night when they defeated Belleville Hi Speeds 4-1. As a result of the win Oshawa now meets the Western Ontario winners in the Southern Ontario finals.

Despite the score, Belleville gave the Oshawa kids a great battle and with any kind of scoring luck would have made it much closer. Belleville took the lead at the halfway mark of the second period when Eathier pushed the puck past Turner. Late in the period Oshawa drew up on even terms when McBrien tapped in Jackson's pass.

In the last period McMullen put Oshawa ahead in the opening minutes when he slid Wilson's pass home. With Belleville trying desperately to tie the game, Wilson and McBrien each scored.

The teams:

Belleville— Goal, Cook; defense, Goyer and Warren; centre, Walton; wings, Kiniski and Clare; subs, Everett, McTier, Storms and Eathier.

Oshawa—Goal, Turner; defense, Murphy and Morris; centre, Wilson; wings, McMullen and Peters; subs, McBrien, Jackson, Cory, Delmonte and Daniels.

Officials—Alex. Weir, Belleville, and Earl Hurst, Oshawa.

FATHER-SON ACT ON PATRICK CLUB FOR NEXT SEASON

NEW YORK, April 7 (CP).—Lester Patrick left New York today to join hockey's bewildered thousands at Toronto witnessing the Stanley Cup playoffs that couldn't happen—but did—between the Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks.

But the Rangers' boss doesn't intend to see the world series through. After tonight's game he'll head for his Victoria home, returning to New York in a month to attend meetings of the National League board of governors and minor league heads.

As Patrick left Madison Square Garden to be taken over by a circus, he did not announce plans for the team he will send after the Stanley Cup next winter. But there is a possibility Ranger fans will see the outstanding father-and-son act in sport.

Muzz, as dark as Lynn is fair, joined the Rangers for their unsuccessful playoff stand against the Americans. He didn't quite fill the shoes of the injured Art Coulter, but he impressed the cash customers with his aggressive style.

"Speaking as the boy's manager, he shows promise but has lots to learn," said Lester, when asked as to the chances of Muzz making a regular job with the Rangers. "They all start at scratch in training and no positions will be decided until next fall."

Bill and Bun Cook sparked the Ranger attack for years, but grey-haired Lester said he "wanted no more brother acts after the passing of the Cooks." The Cooks were finally separated but Patrick seemed doomed to feature brother acts whether he liked it or not.

Through his chain system, Lester inherited the Colvilles. Neil and Mac and the Edmonton brothers form two-thirds of one of the N.H.L.'s best front lines. Neil makes the plays for brother Mac and Alex Shibicky.

But with Lester as boss and the two younger Patricks on the same lineup, it would probably be hockey's outstanding attraction. A forward now, Lynn scales around 200 pounds and has played defence. Both he and Murray like to rough it, and together would form a colorful rearguard.

ALLAN CUP DATES

EDMONTON, April 7 (C.P.). — First game of the Allan Cup finals will be played at Saskatoon, probably on April 13, Prof. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced here last night. He added there was a possibility the best-of-five series might start on April 12.

Professor Hardy said the second, third and fourth games will be played at Calgary, but dates will depend on when the first game is played.

AL MOORE TO GUARD HAWKS' NET TONIGHT

TORONTO, April 7 (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs have been in front of the National Hockey League so long now their ability to face a little adversity should provide one of the burning questions of tonight's Stanley up game against Chicago Black Hawks.

For the first time this season Leafs are on the spot, a game down in the best-of-five series for the world hockey championship. The gallant Hawks have shown their spirit advancing this far; Leafs must answer tonight.

On the face of it the problem is not too hard. Hawks, victors 3-1 in the first game Tuesday night, are playing a spare minor-league goaler in place of the injured Mike Karakas and Pete Palangio, also from the minors, in place of Mush March, their injured star right wing.

Hawks scored their upset victory with Alfie Moore in goal and without using March after the first period when a groin injury was aggravated, so Leafs have their job cut out. Fight and a goodly portion of skill among their veterans make Hawks dangerous.

Can't Afford Loss.

As partisan a Leaf fan as their manager, Conny Smythe, admitted a second straight loss would all but finish the league champions. "If we don't win that second game we won't win the cup," said Smythe.

Leafs were in perfect condition, suffering nary an injury in the hard bumping of the first game. From their training quarters at Preston, Ont., Coach Dick Irvin promised a "'different" team would tie the series tonight and send the team to Chicago for two more games.

Irvin blamed a week's layoff after the Boston series, when Leafs won three straight, for taking the edge off his youngsters and leaving them stale for the fighting Hawks, kept in trim since the season ended by hard-fought play-off victories against New York Americans and Montreal Canadiens.

Chicago's Bill Stewart, gunning for hockey's highest honor in his first coaching season, still refused any prediction on the series outcome. There were no changes planned for Hawks' play, a combination of sound defence, ceaseless checking and swift offensive breaks.

'RECKLESS AND CRAZY LIFE' OF PAIR ENDS AMID FRAUD

Daughter of Famed Preacher Leaves Husband for "Other Man"

MISUSED CREDIT

Watchet (Somerset).—A woman who threw up a good living, ran away with a married man, and lived a "reckless, crazy life," was revealed at Williton, near Watchet, as a daughter of Joseph Hocking.

Her father, who died a year ago, aged 76, was famous as a Nonconformist preacher who turned novelist. Some of his books, particularly "The Scarlet Woman," brought him severe criticism from Free Church people.

His daughter, Mrs. Alison Johnson, appeared in court at Williton in the name of A. Duff Arnott, accused with Ian Duff Neil Arnott, of obtaining money from Herbert Bere, of the Blue Anchor hotel, Old Cleeve.

Ian Arnott—who was also accused of obtaining credit without revealing that he was an undischarged bankrupt—was sent to jail for six months.

The woman was bound over on condition that she paid Mr. Bere £16 ($80).

Both had pleaded guilty and Mr. John F. Eastwood, M.P., who appeared for them, said they met last July and became infatuated with each other "like young people of 17 or 18."

The woman, on whom had fallen "some of the mantle of her father," was separated from her husband but was earning a good living as a writer. The man also had a good job, but he threw this up and left his wife.

They lived together, hoping to make ends meet by writing, but "during the last six months of 1937 they lived the reckless, crazy life of two young people, going from place to place, paying where they could, leaving debts, and hoping to settle things when their ship came home."

Ian Arnott, it was revealed, had served two prison sentences in England, two in France, and one in Belgium. He was expelled from France.

CELEBRATING MOVE PRIEST IS ARRESTED

Sherry, Creme de Menthe and Whiskey Lead to Drunk Driving Charge

Brighton. — A Roman Catholic priest gave evidence at Brighton police court denying charges of driving a car while under the influence of drink and of driving dangerously.

He is Father Joseph Anthony Henry, 35, assistant priest at the Church of Our Lady, Blackheath, S.E., who until a few weeks ago was at the Church of St. John the Baptist, Kemp Town, Brighton.

H. Rogers, prosecuting, said that at 11.30 p.m. on a Sunday, a car driven by Father Henry collided with a 'bus in Brighton. Afterwards he told a police officer: "I am in the wrong. I must have been in the middle of the road. I have been celebrating as I am leaving Brighton.

Dr. S. L. Hicks, the police surgeon, said that he formed the opinion that Father Henry was unfit to be in charge of a car.

Father Henry, in evidence, said that he went in his car to the house of a Mrs. Vaughan, a parishioner, who had invited him to play bridge. He had some sandwiches and a glass of sherry, and with coffee he had a glass of creme de menthe. Later he had two whiskeys and soda.

While driving back to his garage he noticed a heavy pull to the right on his steering, which forced him into the middle of the road. That was responsible for the collision.

The hearing was adjourned, bail being allowed.

MOURNED WAR DEAD SON RETURNS HOME

Didn't Know Mother Alive, Says Victim of Official Mistake

Crook (Co. Durham).—Trembling with excitement, a widow, Mrs. Jane Vasey, 82, went to the door of her cottage in High Hope St., to embrace the son she had given up for dead.

In 1915 a war office telegram told her he had been killed in action.

Since he left home in 1911 to follow a theatrical career, Arthur Vasey, 54, neither communicated with nor heard from his family.

He returned to find his father and two sisters dead, but he did not know he was officially "dead."

Mr. Vasey, widower with four sons, said:

"When the Plymouth theatre where I was employed closed down I had a sudden desire to return to Crook. I did not know my mother was alive.

"Now I am back home I hope to stay."

ATACK CATTLE DISEASE

Nairobi, Kenya.—By a trapping and vaccinating campaign on a 40-mile front an inter-territory conference here hopes to exterminate rinderpest (cattle plague) from East Africa.

COULDN'T HIRE SON AS ANCESTOR JEW

Great-Grandfather's Faith Is Blamed for Crime

Croydon.—A German, who, it was stated, could not be employed by his father owing to the Nazi anti-Jew laws, was accused at Croydon of smuggling.

Gerhart Maas, aged 21, a student at Bradford Textile college, was fined £40 ($200) for attempting to evade customs duty on two cameras.

A. Rawlence, in mitigation, said Maas had only a small allowance.

Though his parents were baptized and brought up in the German Evangelical church, they were under disabilities, because the defendant's great-grandfather was a Jew.

The father, a mill-owner, was not allowed to employ any more non-Aryans, not even his own son.

ZOO HEADS HOPEFUL OF 'BLESSED EVENTS'

Think From Antics Both Black Swans and Alligators May Lay Eggs

London.—The pair of Australian black swans at the zoo are building a nest of twigs and straw which a keeper placed in their enclosure. It is hoped that the female bird is about to lay. She frequently sits on the nest, as though testing its comfort, and then rises to make some alteration in the structure.

Last year these birds built a nest, but although they had no eggs, their work was not wasted. They live in the waterfowl enclosure. Some of their housemates were lazy enough to save themselves the trouble of building by adapting the swans' nest for their own use.

One of the zoo's alligators is also believed to be about to lay, and she has been provided with a thick carpet of sand. She will bury her eggs in this and they will have a chance of being incubated by the heat of the cage.

Normally they would be buried in sun-baked sand and the alligator would remain on guard over them. When ready to hatch, baby alligators make a chirruping noise. The mother then scratches away the sand so that they can emerge.

BRITAIN PREPARES FOR MARKED INCREASE IN ROYAL AIR FORCE

This mighty fleet of British warplanes is only a part of the powerful air armada now in construction and planned as the answer to the aggressive action of dictator countries. Prime Minister Chamberlain declared this week Britain will meet might with might. Already the Royal Air Force numbers 169 squadrons of bombers, pursuit aeroplanes and other types. So large was this review of military aircraft near London that ships in the front ranks were in the air several minutes before those at the rear were able to take off. The British air force is said to include the fastest fighting craft in the world. Even so, the British cabinet met recently for the express purpose of considering a marked expansion of the $7,500,000 rearmament plan. In the House of Commons, members pointed to Canada's "strategic position" as a manufacturing source for fighting aeroplanes.

THIEVES USE PEPPER GET AWAY WITH $30

Blind London Store Manager Then Hit Him on Head

London.—Blinded when thieves threw pepper in his face, F. W. Adams, manager of a wine store in Brent St., Hendon, N.W., was robbed of £6 ($30).

Three men walked into the shop while another stayed at the wheel of a car outside.

After the pepper had been thrown in Mr. Adams' face he was hit on the head.

His forehead was cut, and while he was in a dazed condition the men opened the till and ran out with the money.

A woman assistant in a neighboring shop said "that she heard a commotion outside, and the sound of a car being driven quickly away.

"I went out, and saw Mr. Adams at his shop door covered with pepper, and blood was running down his face," she said.

"No one seemed to pay any attention to the car when it stopped because cars are always parking outside here."

LEAPS ON MAD BULL'S NECK GIRL RESCUES COMPANION

Struggles for Ten Minutes Until Coat Is Thrown Over Animal's Head

THREE MAKE ESCAPE

Carlisle.—Three girls were attacked by a bullock when crossing a field at Dalston, North Cumberland. The animal is believed to have been alarmed by a red hat worn by one of them, Jessie Jardine.

It broke away from a herd and chased the girls. It reached first Dorothy Parkin, and tossed her into the air. Jessie's wire-haired terrier snapped at it, and was also thrown. Jessie jumped on the bullock's neck to prevent Dorothy being gored.

Eventually one of the girls threw her coat over its head, and they escaped while the beast tore it in ribbons.

Dorothy was severely bruised. The bullock caught her as she was running from it in fear.

Jessie Jardine said that when she saw the bullock was going to trample on Dorothy she grasped its neck and ears. The animal butted her several times with its head and knocked her down.

She kept hold of both its ears, but it pounded her with its head, keeping a hoof on her foot as it did so.

She struggled with the beast for ten minutes, only getting away from it, with a sprained ankle, when the coat was thrown over its head.

SUSPECT SMUGGLERS BUSY AT CHICHESTER

Unlighted Ships Sighted by Fishermen in Harbor

Chichester.—Smuggling from the French and Dutch coasts is suspected in the lonely creeks of Chichester harbor.

Local fishermen have reported that they have seen men land at night from ships bearing no lights and that cars have been seen crossing fields going down to the sea.

The night patrol by preventive men is to be strengthened.

A request for more customs and excise men to be drafted into Wittering and Thorney island, where the new R.A.F. base has just been completed, is being made.

GIRLS HIS WEAKNESS WEDDING IS HALTED

Pair Wait Four Months to See If Swain's Ardor Remains

Uxbridge.—Evelyn Davies, 22, and Albert Browne, 19, of Harefield, near Uxbridge, Middlesex, want to marry.

They went to the Uxbridge magistrates for consent.

They were ordered to return to court again in four months' time to prove that they were still in love.

Brown's mother and father objected. Mr. Browne said:

"I have no objection to Evelyn, but I know that if my son marries her now he will be wanting to pack her up in three months' time.

"During the past three years he has proposed marriage to five different girls. He has no mental equilibrium where girls are concerned."

Albert said he earned £2 17s. 6d. ($14) a week as a gardener and had known Evelyn for seven months. "I swear I will always look after her," he declared.

PAL JUMPS INTO ICY SEAS BUT RESCUE EFFORT FUTILE

Fisherman Ties on Rope, Goes Into Arctic After Drowning Man

Hull.—A fisherman's plunge into icy seas in a vain attempt to save a comrade's life was described when the steam trawler Cape Chelyuskin docked.

Hugh Carmichael, the vessel's mate, was the hero of this episode, which had as its setting the Arctic waters southwest of Bear Island.

Great waves were keeping the trawler's decks awash in a gale and it was freezing so hard that the skipper ordered every man below.

But Carmichael's friend, Sidney Poskitt, a 23-year-old learner, ventured on deck and was swept overboard.

Carmichael heard his cry as the sea caught him. Dashing on deck he grasped a line and threw it, but Poskitt was too weak to respond to rescue efforts.

Then Carmichael tied the line around his own waist, gave the other end to another fisherman and leaped into the sea.

So cold was the water that time after time Poskitt slipped from his grasp. Here is the rest of the story as he told it:

"I did what I could to help my friend, until everything went black.

"I was hauled on board unconscious. The skipper, I was told afterwards, got a boat alongside Poskitt and tried to get him out with boathooks.

"They tried to get the hooks into his oilskin coat, but it tore and my poor friend sank.

"It took seven of the crew to haul me aboard."

MAN SERIOUSLY ILL SAVED FROM TRIAL

Crown Drops Prosecution on Blackmail Charge—Three Convicted

Winchester.—A man lying seriously ill in hospital has been spared, by a rare application of English law, the ordeal of standing his trial for attempted blackmail.

He is George Hardy Bain, 58-year-old London solicitor, who, but for his illness, would have appeared at Winchester assizes last session with two men and a woman.

All were accused of trying to blackmail "Mr. X," a Portsmouth naval officer.

As he lay in University College hospital awaiting an operation, he was served, on the instructions of the public prosecutor and by leave of the attorney-general, with a document known as "nolle prosequi," which he has signed.

This means that he will not be tried. The action was taken because of the seriousness of his illness.

The two other men and the woman charged with Bain were sentenced at the last assizes:

Thomas Ronald Hyman Max Davies, aged 34—four years' penal servitude;

Charles Thomas Duke, 43-year-old taxi driver—18 months;

Gwendoline Edwards, platinum blonde, whom Davies bigamously married—nine months.

RECTOR, 64, MARRIES HIS SERVANT, AGE 29

"Needed Someone to Help Him in Parish," Clergyman's Family Explains

Morton, Derbyshire.—Until a few weeks ago a domestic servant at the rectory here, 29-year-old Miss Nellie Checklin, daughter of a mine-worker, was secretly married recently to the 64-year-old rector, the Rev. William Latham.

The ceremony took place early in the morning in Mr. Latham's church here, and they were on their way to London for their honeymoon before the villagers heard of the wedding.

Mr. Latham was at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, and is now rural dean of Alfreton. He lost his first wife a year ago, and has a grown-up family of one son and four daughters.

"My brother needed someone to help him with the work of the parish," Mr. Latham's sister said. "In view of the fact that it is not long since his first wife died, the wedding was kept very quiet."

A friend of the rector said: "Nellie has been a servant at the rectory for about five years, and she knew the first Mrs. Latham very well. The engagement became known several weeks ago and they were to have been married shortly afterwards, but the ceremony was postponed."

POLICE NOW CARRY POCKET RADIO SETS

Brighton Equipment May Soon Be Introduced in Other County Cities

Brighton—The first step has been taken towards the equipment of every police force in Sussex with radio, to be served eventually by a central broadcasting station operating from Brighton.

Hove has equipped its flying squad cars. Soon, it is expected, the Hove police will follow the lead set by Brighton three years ago with the introduction of pocket radio for individual constables.

At present all Hove police messages are telephoned to Brighton headquarters and transmitted by G.T.N., the special police short-wave transmitting station.

The system is so efficient that as soon as the direction taken by escaping thieves is known every mobile patrol in the two boroughs can be sent in pursuit within a few seconds. It has resulted in many speed duels between bandits and police on the main London-Brighton road.

Last year 1,996 messages were transmitted by Brighton police. They led to many important arrests.

Other large Sussex towns, from Eastbourne in the east to Crawley and Horsham in the north and Chichester in the west, are expected to join in a scheme to complete the county's wireless chain.

CARRIED 'GAS GUN' WEDDING POSTPONED

Racing Enthusiast Goes to Jail for Three Months Instead of Altar

Chester — Maurice Davenport, wealthy 30-year-old Macclesfield racing motorist, went to jail for three months at Chester assizes for possessing a gas gun—"a weapon adapted for discharging a noxious gas"—refused to allow counsel to mention his romance.

He was to have been married soon to pretty May Bailey, a Macclesfield hairdresser. She sat outside the court as her fiance was sentenced.

Davenport was found not guilty of harming two gamekeepers.

They alleged that, watching for poachers, they chased Davenport, who discharged a gas gun—his own invention—at them.

It was said that four bottles of benzyl bromide, a chemical which gives off a form of "tear gas", were found at Davenport's home.

Mr. Justice Atkinson said: "Your counsel says you were merely going to use the gun for pheasants, but it is difficult to swallow that."

NEWS AND VIEWS FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE WORLD

138-YEAR-OLD BRITISH WRECK HIDES $8,500,000 TREASURE

Giant New Dutch Tin Dredger to Salvage Frigate From North Sea

FOUNDERED IN 1799

Amsterdam. — Plans are being made to salvage treasures estimated to be worth over £1,700,000 ($8,500,000) from the 138-year-old wreck of a British frigate.

H.M.S. Lutine was wrecked on a sandbank near the Dutch island of Terschelling, in the North Sea, in October, 1799.

Parts of the cargo have been recovered in earlier salvage attempts, but the greater part of it—mostly gold and silver—remains in the wreckage.

In June a giant new vessel, Karimata, now being built in the Dutch shipyard of Kinderdijk as a tin dredger, will attempt to raise the Lutine's treasure, if the British government gives permission.

The dredger was being built for the Dutch East Indies, but in view of a cut in the tin quota she will not be needed there immediately.

The Billiton Tin Co., owners of the Karimata, therefore decided to use her in an attempt to salvage the Lutine.

The bell of the Lutine hangs inside the rostrum in the underwriting room at Lloyd's, and is rung when important announcements are to be made.

One of the most recent occasions on which the bell has been used was after the sighting of the Endeavour II which had been reported missing when homeward bound from America.

Tchimerine had been strangled. His body had apparently been in the water some weeks.

In his clothing, and also at his home, the police found letters bearing on the disappearance of General Miller, and it is thought Tchimerine may have been killed because he knew too much of this affair.

CHOICE FRENCH WINE SIX CENTS PER PINT

But You Must Be a Fisherman and Find It in the Sea

Ostend. — After paying full customs duty, Ostend fishermen have landed a "catch" of French wine which cost them just 48 cents a gallon, or six cents a pint.

Rough Channel weather in September last is responsible. Unable to fish owing to high seas the Ostend men were disappointed at the season's results.

Then one vessel came home with a few casks of wine fished out of the water after the wreck off the British coast of a French vessel carrying wines to England.

From that time on the Ostend fishermen kept watch. Now they have had their reward.

Ten drifters have brought to port about 70 barrels containing in all some 74,000 pints of rich French wine, which they had hauled aboard not far from the Noordhinder lightship.

The news spread, and wine merchants met on the quay, taking the entire stock from the fishermen.

CROOK OF MANY DISGUISES IN 350 BURGLARIES, IS CLAIM

Lived Double Life in Fashionable District, Entertaining Lavishly

FABULOUS HOARD

Paris.—The double life of a man who lived with his wife and family on the first floor of a fashionable block of flats in Grenoble and kept another flat on the sixth floor from which he directed a gang of international criminals was revealed here.

The man, 37-year-old M. Raoul Saccarotti, was in his sixth-floor flat with thousands of pounds' worth of stolen goods when police arrived.

He ran up to the roof, jumped to a neighboring building, and escaped.

He has committed at least 350 burglaries in the last three or four years, and his exploits have earned him the title of "Gentleman Raffles of France."

Married to a member of one of the best-known families in Grenoble, he entertained lavishly bankers, jewellers, and industrialists whom he questioned casually about their jewelry and other valuables, and later raided their premises.

An official in touch with the case said: "Even his wife had no idea that, five storeys above his home, he had one of the most amazing collections of stolen property ever gathered together by one man.

"He used extremely clever disguises. Sometimes he posed as a French army officer, sometimes as a monk."

WRITER PREDICTS FRENCH MAJORITY IN A FEW DECADES

LONDON, April 7—(CP). — "If English-speaking Canada is serious in the desire to preserve its racial preponderance its inhabitants will have to regard the duties of parenthood more seriously."

Thus wrote Sir Evelyn Wrench in an article given great prominence in The Times upon his return from a visit to Canada. The noted publicist and Imperialist declared "there is every reason to expect that the majority of the Canadian people will be French-speaking within 30 or 40 years."

He had gone to Canada, he said, to settle in his own mind the conflicting reports of disunity and unrest in that Dominion. And the founder and vice-president of the Overseas League, who enjoys a good hearing in this country where his interest in Dominion and Colonial affairs is widely respected, came back to write and speak not of Canada's disunity but of her need for renewed immigration on a planned scale.

Sir Evelyn was impressed by the fact that "at long last 'les Canadiens' were coming into their own." French-Canadian opinion was summed up to him as follows:

"Confederation was an absurdity. Neither economically nor geographically is Canada an entity. The real Canada is the St. Lawrence area, which should be a French-speaking Dominion. The rest of Canada should either form local Dominions or be absorbed by the United States. French Canada detests the 20th-century 'civilization' of Hollywood, American radio programs and a certain type of American magazine. . . . French-Canada is essentially conservative and proposes to preserve the spiritual heritage of its forbears, but it has no desire to cut off from the British Crown."

Sir Evelyn made it clear he was not alarmed by this increasing proportion of the French-speaking population. And he was glad to note that the French Motherland, "albeit after a long period of neglect, is taking more interest in her offspring." Eminent Franch writers and publicists were visiting Canada and distinguished French-Canadians were visiting France. The old and the new were being drawn closely together, intellectually and in sentiment. But Sir Evelyn declared there seemed to be no desire for a political rapprochement with the French republic.

Attached to Crown

"French-Canada is self-absorbed. The turmoils of Europe seem very remote. There is, however, a very real attachment to the British Crown, which for nearly 200 years has safeguarded the religious institutions of French-Canada."

There was real need, however, for a freer intellectual exchange between French-Canada and Great Britain. Lord Tweedsmuir had done good work by associating himself with French-Canadian life. But it should be carried on by others as well, and there should be a greater exchange of visits between representative figures of both countries.

"Canada is heir to two great European cultures. At a time when outward events seem destined to draw the two Western Motherlands closer together French-Canada, their joint offspring, should be a valued link. The intellectual coming together of old and new France is regarded in Great Britain with cordial sympathy. Nor is the passionate devotion of French-Canada to the faith of its fathers any bar to complete co-operation. In an age when a crude materialism threatens Christianity throughout the world the fact that on the banks of the St. Lawrence is to be found an essentially Christian civilization is reassuring."

Reviewing the much - discussed problems of defence and rather minimizing the significance of isolation talk regarding Canada Sir Evelyn proceeded to the question of migration. He found "much divergence of opinion" on the need for a greater population in Canada. But he ventured to sum up his own views in this way:

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick —"A very real need for new blood."

Prince Edward Island—"General prosperity offers opportunities for a limited number."

Quebec—"Useless to attempt immigration."

Ontario—"Perhaps a farm school for children."

Prairies—"Not before two or three good harvests have been gathered."

British Columbia—"Greatest possibility for large-scale immigration, preferably group settlement. . . . Cries out urgently for population to develop its untouched resources."

Sir Evelyn stressed that no migration from England should be done in haphazard fashion. It was a highly-technical subject, best met by group settlement and farm-school schemes—particularly of the Kingsley Fairbridge type.

He didn't hold Canada up to prospective emigrants as a land of milk and honey. Hard work and loneliness faced the would-be settler, together with strange and difficult conditions.

Wilkins Search Proving Costly

REGINA, April 7 — (CP). — Every time Sir Hubert Wilkins fills his huge ship with fuel at Aklavik, at the mouth of the Mackenzie River, it costs the Soviet Government $8,000, C. J. McFarlane, gasoline company representative said in an address here.

Mr. McFarlane travelled 7,000 miles by air, 1,000 miles by boat, and 1,000 miles overland to carry gasoline and batteries for the searchers. Gasoline costs between $4.00 and $6.00 a gallon in the far north, because of transportation difficulties.

At Fairbanks, Alaska, he said, earthquakes occur sometimes at the rate of 70 a day. Aside from broken dishes and cracked walls, little damage was done.

INDIA SEEKING COMMON PRAYER

LUCKNOW, April 7 — (CP.-Reuters) — A common prayer for India is being sought by the Congress party legislators. In some of the provinces where Congressmen have accepted office, this question threatens to become a major factor of disagreement between Hindus and Moslems.

"Vande Mataram"—a Bengali song said to be a salutation to the motherland—usually finds favor with all Congressmen. But Moslems object to it on the score that the word "mother" refers to the goddess Kali of the Hindus.

When this song was sung at the opening of the Madras Legislature, the Moslems walked out of the House. Later, the Speaker, B. Sambamurthy, gave a ruling in the House that the Moslem members might stay out during the prayer.

An attempt to mollify the Moslem section was then made, when, instead of the usual prayer, a portion of the Koran was recited. This, however, failed to satisfy them and they staged another walk-out a few days later as a protest when "Vande Mataram" was again sung.

The controversy continues, although a number of compromises have been suggested.

STORM IN AFRICA ON NATION'S HYMN

CAPE TOWN, April 7 — (CP). — Indignation swept parts of the Union over Prime Minister Hertzog's statement in parliament that "God Save the King," had never been regarded as South Africa's national anthem. The storm of protest which followed the statement was partly allayed following a conference between the premier and members of the government party.

"After I had fully explained my remarks, members of the delegation expressed themselves as completely satisfied with the position," Hertzog said.

They had sought an explanation of the premier's declaration that "Die Stem Van Suid Africa" (The Voice of South Africa) was generally recognized by Dutch-speaking people as their national anthem. He added, however, that as long as the King was King of South Africa and "God Save the King" remained an invocation to the Almighty, it would be played and sung when his Majesty's representatives were present.

The Cape Town Argus describes Hertzog's statement as an "inexcusable tactical blunder," and adds: "A coming, strictly South African anthem has always been foreseen but it need not oust God Save the King which for generations has been the anthem of the Cape Province and Natal, though not of the other two provinces."

Under the heading, "God Save Africa," the Natal Mercury says "the prime minister's somersault is surely the most amazing feat in his long career of political acrobatics." The Natal Daily News believes that if the people of South Africa had been from the outset a more homogeneous people they would have produced their own national song. "But the people of South Africa must grow together," the paper adds. "They cannot have their susceptibilities banged together with any useful immediate results."

Sympathizing with the premier's insistence on the need for a South African national anthem, the Johannesburg Star hopes, however, another anthem will eventually spring up to replace Die Stem Van Suid Africa.

Flotsam Of War

Boy refugees from Barcelona are shown in the small boat in which they rowed out to the British warship, Arethusa, off Barcelona to beg for scraps of food, clothing and cigarette butts. Boats like this one haunt foreign vessels every day as the situation in the beleaguered Catalonian capital grows worse. Thousands have fled to France since the series of bombing raids that killed more than 1,000 citizens.

Cobourg Gas Consumers Are Offered Hydro Subsidy

Few Attend Meeting Held To Protest Closing Of Gas Plant

COBOURG, April 7.—Attended by only about 60 people, a meeting was held in the opera house last night to protest against the decision of the H.E.P.C. to close the local gas plant. Harry Field was chairman.

Mayor Maurice Booth explained the offer of the H.E.P.C. to make a generous settlement with gas consumers who would change over to electricity in the way of subsidy on the purchase price of a stove. The consumer would get an electric stove at cost with a bonus of $20 plus the offer of the local Commission to contribute $25 of the cost of installation. Personally he felt the electricity was better, and although commercial consumers might suffer as a result of the gas plant closing, the domestic consumers would benefit.

J. E. Skidmore, once manager of the public utilities, stated that the gas plant used to operate on a paying basis, despite present claims to the contrary, and he couldn't understand why it wouldn't pay now. After considerable discussion, it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the town council.

ITALY CLAIMING FIFTY MILLIONS HELD IN BRITIAN

By FRANK GERVASI
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

ROME, April 7.—One of the long-pending problems begging settlement in tangled Italo-British relations concerns establishment of ownership and disposal of $50,000,000 in gold which the Italian government deposited with the Bank of England to help finance purchase of war materials in 1915.

The history of this bullion deposit, long and involved, is one of the most interesting sidelights on the financial ramifications of the economics of war. Settlement of the dispute as to whether the Italian government has a right to recover the sum from the Bank of England, it is believed in financial circles here, many hinge on the outcome of Anglo-Italian diplomatic negotiations for a rapprochement.

Not Topmost Question

It is doubtful whether the question will form one of the subjects to be discussed by Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister and Lord Perth, the British ambassador, when they get down to the business of conciliating the myriad differences between their governments.

It is deemed virtually certain, however, that the problem will be discussed and settled before anything like normal trade relations between Italy and England are resumed. At present value, the amount of Italian gold lying in the coffers of the Bank of England equals 1,613,500,000 lire, which in Italy is a very substantial sum.

MONTAGU NORMAN
Governor of the Bank of England

Italians Claim Gold

According to the Italian version of the story of the gold deposit, the bullion is still the "property" of the Italian government. The deposit was made on July 3, 1915, following an Allied convention at Nice, France, for the organization of ways and means of financing the war against Germany and her allies.

The conference was held two months after Italy's declaration of war against Austria, and the deposit was made by the Bank of Italy following a request of the Bank of England for a deposit of ten million pounds sterling in gold against which the British government issued notes for payment of war materials bought in foreign markets. The war materials were used in fighting the Allied cause.

Text of Agreement

A signed agreement stipulated that:

"The credit of the Bank of England in favor of the Italian government, arising out of the shipment of ten million pounds sterling in gold or any part thereof shall be a deposit not to be withdrawn until after the repayment of the advances as provided in article seven when the sum in question will be returned to the Italian government in gold."

When Italy deposited the gold in London, the British government opened credits to the extent of about $300,000,000 in favor of Rome against which Italy made purchases of war materials.

Under a subsequent agreement signed by Italy and England in December, 1915, London granted Rome additional credits of 122,000,000 pounds sterling, or about $610,000,000, against which the Bank of Italy deposited with the Bank of England another $60,000,000 in gold.

Italian Contention

The Italian government claims that inasmuch as gold sent to the Bank of England did not constitute a "guarantee" for debts contracted but merely a deposit to help England finance the war, and that subsequent debts contracted came under the category of "war debts" to be liquidated under special separate agreement, the original deposit is the property of the Bank of Italy.

Under the general war debt moratorium in 1932, Italy suspended servicing of the debt to England and pending a general settlement of war obligations Italy does not feel inclined to sacrifice the bullion in question.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 7. (CP).—Sault Board of Trade has passed resolution urging the Dominion government to appoint a commission to investigate the advantages of enforced co-ordination, unification, or amalgamation of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways and that Parliament take legislative action to make effective the recommendations of such a commission.

FULL OF FIREWATER

DETROIT, April 7 (CP)—Maybe it was homesickness for his native ice and snow, but when police found Mus-Soo-Nuk, an Eskimo, wandering in laborious circles last night, they ascribed it to an overdose of firewater. So Mus-Soo-Nuk spent a couple of hours on a prison cot of the great American trading post, then returned to his performances at the Sportsmen's Show here.

WARKWORTH Y.P.S. MEETS WITH CHOIR

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, April 7.—The St. Andrew's Young Peoples' Society held their regular meeting Monday evening. At this meeting the choir joined with the Young People to spend a social evening in honor of the recently married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Skinkle.

After a program of songs recitations and games, Mrs. C. E. Meiklejohn in a few well chosen words expressed appreciation of the work done in the society by Mrs. Skinkle. Little Jean Nelson then presented the guests of honor with a compact and candlesticks. After which Mrs. Robert Walker on behalf of the choir also spoke of the faithful work done by Mrs. Skinkle in the past years. Mrs. C. T. Maycock presented her with a linen tablecloth.

Mrs. Skinkle ably thanked both the choir and Young Peoples Society for their gifts. The singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," and the serving of a dainty lunch brought an enjoyable evening to a close.

Spring Wheat Sown In March For First Time In 35 Years

Fall Wheat And Clovers Throughout Province Wintered Well

TORONTO, April 7. — When farmers in Northumberland County sowed wheat on their lighter soils a few days ago, it was the first time in March in this district, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Wheat and clovers came through the winter in good condition in most southern sections of Ontario, and during the warm days of the latter part of March, started to grow. Much depends, however, on the weather the next few weeks.

A certain amount of growth has been shown in fall wheat in York County in the past few days of warm weather. A number of fields with considerable winter killing from ice were noted.

Mice Damage Trees

Considerable damage by girdling of young trees is reported from various sections of Halton County. Most of this is the work of mice. Plowing has been in progress for the past two weeks, but no seeding is reported to date.

Several loads of finished beef cattle have moved to market from Middlesex County, with best heavy steers being bought locally at $6 per cwt. Dairy cattle are in fairly active demand at livestock sales, with prices for best cows ranging from $50 to $85.

Good young horses are changing hands at very satisfactory prices in Prince Edward County, with a few pairs bringing as high as $400 a pair.

Hogs in Frontenac County are being bought for $9.75 to $10 per cwt., but few young suckling pigs are being offered for sale.

Many poultrymen are disposing of the bulk of their laying-hen flocks in Grenville County, due to the high price of poultry feeds.

No large movement of livestock, excepting calves and pigs, is reported from Lennox and Addington counties. Calve shipments were unusually heavy, with prices ranging from $3 to $5 per cwt. Farmers in this district report good success with young calves and lambs.

Livestock losses were considerable in Prescott and Russell counties due to flood waters from the Nation River. Horses, dairy cattle and hogs were drowned or seriously affected by exposure. The water level rose to 14 inches above the highest record.

Seed grain is plentiful in Temiskaming County, with a total surplus being reported of two carloads of Alaska oats and one of Abundance oats for outside shipment.

Looking Back
On This Date

APRIL 7

Seventy years ago today—on April 7, 1868—tragedy struck the then young and very small capital of Canada. Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee was assassinated as he was on his way home from the House of Commons in Ottawa. The Canadian Confederation less than a year old, was baptized in the blood of one of its fathers.

Fred Williams

This great Irish patriot, who had become a Canadian in soul and thought, who had done much to bring the Irish Catholics of Canada to accept Confederation, was killed because he would not betray his new loyalty. He had only lived in Canada 10 years, arriving at Montreal in 1857, but within a year he was elected to the Assembly for Montreal, at once becoming a leader in debate and within four years becoming a minister. First he was a Reformer under John Sandfield Macdonald, but he was ambitious for his new country and saw that John A. Macdonald was the more progressive even if labelled Conservative.

McGee attended both the Charlottetown and Quebec conferences and eloquently supported the resolutions in the Confederation debates in the Assembly, preaching tolerance, urging national unity and predicting in vivid words the development of the West and our growth into an independent nation within the British Empire. When the first Dominion cabinet was in formation, it was taken for granted that D'Arcy McGee would be the Irish Catholic minister; but he came from Quebec; that province already had its quota, and so McGee stood aside in favor of an Irish Catholic from Nova Scotia; but he was nonetheless one of Sir John Macdonald's closest advisers, perhaps more so than some of the ministers within the Privy Council. He had planned to retire from politics and devote his life—he was only 43—to literature; but instead he became the Dominion's first political martyr.

After his murder it was related that not only had Mr. McGee had many threats and warnings that his life was "forfeit as a traitor to the Irish cause," but he himself had two or three dreams which worried him exceedingly. One was that he fell into the abyss at Niagara Falls and was swept to his death. This only a few days before his murder, caused him much worry, for, like most Celts, he was inclined to the mystic, and he mentioned this dream as if it had been a warning. But he was marked for death and lay in the April snow at Ottawa for some hours before his body was found.

His assassin (or perhaps it would be better to say the man convicted of the murder), one P. J. Whelan, was hanged at Ottawa the next year, in the last public execution in Ontario. He died unshriven and hated, while D'Arcy McGee was given the tribute of a national funeral and the tears of a whole country.

THATCHER WHEAT HOPES RUN HIGH

WINNIPEG, April 7.—(CP).—Western Canada farmers are confident their Thatcher rust-resistant wheat production next fall will be graded No. 1 Northern, top export brand of wheat, desired by all importing countries for its excellent milling and baking qualities.

Their confidence grew from the associated committee on grain research announcement here last night that Thatcher had met approval of overseas millers and is entitled to classification with Canada's top-ranking wheats. The final decision will be made by the Canadian board of grain commissioners, which in the past has been guided by the committee's findings.

Farmers also rejoiced at the announcement Dr. C. H. Goulden's new rust-resistant varieties—"rust laboratory 1097 and 975.1" wheats—proved most promising.

Dr. Goulden of Winnipeg, senior cereal specialist of the Dominion rust laboratory at Winnipeg and noted for his work in development of Renown rust-resistant wheat and Vanguard oats, earlier claimed 1097 was superior to Thatcher, produced by the University of Minnesota.

Both 1097 and 975.1 wheats are resistant of leaf rust and covered smut to which Thatcher is highly susceptible, Dr. Goulden stated. Thatcher and the new wheats all have resistance to stem rust.

The two new grades were produced by a cross between H-44, a strain of United States Hope wheat, and Reward, a Canadian wheat.

SOME RAILWAY ACTION

STRATFORD, Ont., April 7. (CP). —Stratford residents, interviewed by a newspaper, had novel suggestions for the naming of the latest Dionne child. "How would Phinias do? Get it? Finis," suggested Harvey Hewitt. "One baby born after the Quints was named 'Telesphore' maybe they'll name this one 'telesphive,'" said Mrs. F. R. Chipvendale.

Had Indigestion Gas and Pains In Stomach and Bowels

The process of digestion depends largely on the condition of the stomach, and when it is unable to do its work properly there will be a rising and souring of food, a gnawing and burning sensation in the stomach, belching and pressure of gas, flatulency, etc.

Burdock Blood Bitters starts an increased flow of gastric juice so essential for the proper digestion of food.

Miss M. C. Weiss, Mapova, Alta., writes:—"For a long time I was troubled with indigestion. My stomach would not digest my food, and I would have gas pressure and sour stuff coming up in my mouth.

I used Burdock Blood Bitters, and after taking one bottle I felt a change for the better, so I decided to keep on, and after the third bottle I could eat anything and not be bothered with the rising and souring of my food."

MRS. JAMES HUTCHISON

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTREVILLE, April 7.—The unexpected death of Mrs. James Hutchinson on Monday, April 4th, came as severe shock to her many friends and relatives. For several months Mrs. Hutchinson had not been well and was confined to the bed most of the time.

Before her marriage the late Mrs. Hutchinson was Lila Ada Might, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Might.

Possessing a pleasant and charming personality and a fine christian spirit, she was beloved by a host of friends, and the large number of floral tributes and the great concourse of people at the funeral testified to the high esteem in which the deceased lady was held.

She was a member of Centreville Presbyterian church and was one of the most active and enthusiastic workers in the Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid.

She will be greatly missed in the home and community. Her noble Christian character and service of love radiated a benign influence.

MORE ABOUT— ROEBUCK BEATEN

Light, Heat and Power Company, the Maclaren-Quebec Power Company and the Gatineau Power Company?"

Seconder of the motion, Mr. Macaulay admitted he was not very partial to referendum or plebiscites. If validation could be deferred until the people "who were double-crossed by the Premier and his followers last October" could express their will he would favor any means of accomplishing that.

The Government received from the people last October a mandate to develop its own resources, Mr. Roebuck said. Stopped by J. H. Clark (Lib., Windsor-Sandwich), chairman of the committee, on the ground his remarks were irrelevant, Mr. Roebuck disclosed he would make the amendment. Reason for it was "the practice in British countries that a mandate that has been received from the people of the Province cannot be set aside immediately after the mandate has been received."

"That is the only way, I suggest, that members of the Legislature can justify themselves to their constituents, we who told our constituents we were going back to Niagara."

Mr. Roebuck also urged deletion from the bill of a clause saying the Power Commission Declaratory Act and the Privy Council Appeal Act did not affect the companies' rights under the contracts. The former Attorney-General argued that this in effect said every small litigant must obtain consent of the Attorney-General before bringing an action against the power companies, but the companies were excepted.

(The two acts he referred to were passed in 1936 during Hydro's troubles with the power companies. The Declaratory Act prevented suing, the Commission without consent of the Attorney-General while the Privy Council Act provided the province did not need to post bond for costs in event of an appeal to the Privy Council).

"In other words," interjected Mr. Macaulay, "these three companies are going to be taken care of by special legislation and those thousands of other people in the province of Ontario with contractual obligations are not going to be taken care of at all."

Premier Hepburn replied that even if the agreements were ratified this did not mean a settlement was reached. Bond holders had to ratify the contracts and he saw no purpose in leaving out the provisions.

Mr. Macaulay, who was joined in his attack on highway policies by George S. Henry, former Premier, said dozens of road-building contracts had been extended between Oct. 1 and Oct. 6, day of voting The Conservative leader urged the government to follow Ottawa's lead and "make it a crime for any candidate to promise any expenditure of public monies in his constituency during an election campaign."

"If we don't grapple with the problem soon it will overthrow democracy," he added. "Nobody can defend this outlandish spending on roads before elections. It's only a move of one party to defeat another and the only difference in the political parties is the extent to which they participate in the process."

Actual money voted for highways was $812,800, but there was a statutory provision for $22,837,200 on which there could be no vote. Mr. Macaulay protested against the House not being given a chance to vote on such big items and the Premier was inclined to agree with him.

Responding to a "hands off Windsor" plea from David A. Croll (Lib., Windsor-Walkerville) the government dropped a proposal to increase membership of the city's Board of Education from seven to 12. Mr. Croll, father of the bill which amalagamted four Essex border municipalities into greater Windsor, declared the measure interfered with the amalgamation act.

Mr. Croll, former Minister of Municipal Affairs, was uncertain whether his successor, Hon. Eric Cross, realized he represented a Windsor riding. He would not stand in the House and be ignored when new legislation affecting his city was introduced.

The Premier informed the House the Government was abolishing cemetery commissions and transferring their functions to local Boards of Health because the commissions "abused" the privileges granted them.

IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

Typist Accused of Headaches

(Before Mr. Justice Kruschen)

PROSECUTING COUNSEL: This, my lord, is a case of a young woman charged with habitual headaches. It is a sad case, because her affliction renders her unfit for work or play, a misery . . .

JUDGE: What is a headache? (laughter)

COUNSEL: The dictionary defines it as a continuous pain in the head.

JUDGE: (addressing prisoner): Why do you have a continuous pain in the head, young lady?

PRISONER: I don't know, my lord. It isn't my fault.

JUDGE: The question of whose fault it is will be decided by this Court. Do you admit the charge?

PRISONER: Yes, my lord.

JUDGE: What steps do you take to prevent these headaches?

PRISONER: I sometimes take a sedative, my lord.

JUDGE: Sedative? Do you really mean to tell me that a sedative prevents headaches?

PRISONER: No, my lord, of course a sedative doesn't exactly prevent them, it. . . .

JUDGE: Have you ever heard of Kruschen?

PRISONER: Yes, my lord. I used to take it regularly.

JUDGE: And did you have headaches then?

PRISONER: N-no.

JUDGE: Young lady, you may count yourself fortunate in being brought before me. In this court we regard preventable illness as a crime. The complaint from which you suffer is caused by nothing else but neglect—neglect of the very first rule of sane and healthy living. It is caused, like so many other afflictions, simply and solely by constipation—or that even more dangerous and far more prevalent condition of semi-constipation. A pinch of Kruschen Salts—as much as will lie on a ten-cent piece—taken in a cup of coffee, tea, or a glass of water, every morning will help to finally and completely rid you of your trouble. My ruling is that you go straightway and get a bottle of Kruschen and begin this necessary practice tomorrow morning.

PRISONER: (smiling through her tears): Oh, thank you, my lord.

COUNSEL: About costs. . . .

JUDGE: Quite insignificant. The cost of 'the little daily dose' is much less than 1c a day.

KRUSCHEN SALTS

relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have those salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter sells Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.

SNOW COVERS WIDE AREAS IN MID-WEST

CHICAGO, April 7 (AP).—Fresh snow blanketed a wide expanse of territory between the Rockies and the eastern seaboard today in the wake of a storm that turned the calendar back to mid-winter.

Rain, sleet, dust, hail and tornadic winds lashed at sections of the United States which escaped the snowstorm.

Heavy, wet snowdrifts three and four feet deep challenged highway crews in the Middle West. The snowfall broke April records in many cities and was the deepest of the winter at some spots. Counties in Southwest Michigan reported 30 to 36 inches of snow.

One death was reported in South Dakota and fears were felt for a man missing in the vicinity of Scottsbluff, Neb., where snow ranged up to a foot in depth.

Hundreds of telephone and telegraph poles snapped under the weight of snow and ice in Nebraska and Iowa. Many rural schools were closed in Iowa and South Dakota because of snow-choked highways. The storm disrupted bus service in Southern Wisconsin.

9.1 Inches in Chicago.

About 1,400 city workers and scores of streetcar and bus company employees tackled Chicago's 9.1 inch snowfall.

A gravel boat bound up the Chicago River crashed into the Lake Street Bridge when it failed to lift because of an ice coating. Virtually all roads 50 miles north and south of the city were almost impassable.

New York City called out 1,200 extra workers to augment the regular night crew of 300 engaged in clearing away more than four inches of snow.

A strike vote by transportation workers deprived Detroit residents of streetcar service during the kind of weather in which it is most needed. Three inches of snow covered the city and freezing temperatures prevailed.

Heavy Lamb Losses.

Some Wyoming sheepmen, now in the midst of the lambing season, expected to suffer losses because of the unseasonable weather. Livestock on the Sandhill ranges of Nebraska also was endangered.

Sections of Louisiana and Alabama were ripped by spring tornadoes. Torrential rains were reported in other sections of the south. Flood waters coursed over 4,000 acres and affected more than 100 families near Cardwell, Mo.

UNIFORM FISH LAWS

WASHINGTON, April 7—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill authorizing interstate compacts to establish uniform commercial fishing regulations on the Great Lakes.

Representative Luecke (Dem.-Michigan), author of the bill, said he was "very glad that this thing has gone through. The Great Lakes states are very anxious to proceed with something that will accomplish uniformity of regulations."

Howled Down

Although it is unusual for anyone to talk back to a dictator, M. The men were on strike in favor of intervention in the Spanish civil war.

LINDSAY

ALL-NIGHT PARKING ON MAIN STREETS MAY BE FORBIDDEN

LINDSAY, April 7. — Priming his victim with liquor and then robbing him of the sum of $25.00 was the charge laid against a resident of Eagle Lake before Justice of the Peace Jones of Haliburton this week. The accused was remanded and will appear before Magistrate Gee at Lindsay on Thursday. He is only twenty years of age, and it is charged that he persuaded his friend to drink too much liquor, knowing that he had the money in his possession. Provincial Constable Taylor of Minden arrested the accused.

Ald. Dick Butler is fathering a by-law forbidding all night parking on the main street of Lindsay, but the legislation is meeting with opposition from some of the merchants. Some of the merchants claim that the by-law might send visitors to other centres where a by-law of this nature does not exist.

John Sanderson of Donald met with an unusual accident on Tuesday in that village. He was taking stock of the stores of the Standard Chemical Company when a scythe dropped from a nail and inflicted an ugly gash on the back of his right hand which required several stitches.

The brick residence of Roy King at Maple Beach, Balsam Lake, was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday. Mr. King was at the barn when neighbors noticed the blaze. Very little of the contents was saved. The house was partly covered by insurance.

Three deaths in two years is the record in the family of Peter DuGuerre of Beaverton. The latest bereavement came suddenly when Clarence DuGuerre of Oshawa, aged 44, dropped dead after witnessing the Oshawa-Sudbury game at Toronto.

Total clearings passing through the Peterborough Clearing House during the past week amounted to $723,265, an increase over one year ago when the total was $697,431.

BLAME LOCKJAW GERMS IN SERUM FOR ELEVEN DEAD

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7 (AP).—A coroner's jury decided last night 11 persons died "as a result of cancer serum rex 152 being injected hypodermically into their bodies, said serum having proven to contain tetanus toxin in lethal quantities."

"We further find," the jury added, "that Dr. T. A. Neal is in no wise responsible for the presence of the tetanus toxin in the serum and we absolve him from all blame and negligence in connection with the administration of said serum and the resulting deaths."

Dr. Neal said he had given injections to 13 of 14 persons who became ill after undergoing cancer treatment. Ten witnesses, including eight physicians, testified at the inquest. The jury verdict said tetanus (lockjaw) was the immediate cause of the deaths.

A juror asked Dr. Neal if he thought tetanus toxin accidentally entered the serum before shipment.

"I don't think there is any other logical explanation," the physician replied.

Dr. J. N. Patterson of Jacksonville, State Board of Health Laboratory technician, said he performed autopsies on the bodies of five of the victims.

Lockjaw Symptoms.

The autopsies, he testified, showed "toxic changes in the viscera" and "swelling of the brain." Dr. Patterson said these conditions are found in the bodies of persons dying of tetanus.

"Rex 152 administered to these patients contained tetanus toxin," the witness said, "and that was the cause of their deaths."

Dr. Patterson said the serum was manufactured by a Philadelphia, Pa. laboratory. Three women still are being treated. At least one physicians said, is expected to recover.

Dr. Patterson testified tests with another series of rex produced no ill effects on guinea pigs. Nor, he said, did ensol hurt the animals.

The Philadelphia laboratory, Dr. Neal declared, had agreed to notify him of any change in the manufacture of the serum. He said he had received no notification, but learned later the last shipment he received had been manufactured from beef.

Dr. Neal said the serum was made from a process involving the use of meat proteins.

Dr. Patterson said "I think the serum must have been contaminated at the factory." He explained it was his belief the contamination was present in the proteins used in the manufacture. Tetanus bacilli, he said, could have been removed in a filtration process, but the toxin would pass through the filtrate.

FOUR YOUTHS HELD ON THEFT CHARGE PLEAD NOT GUILTY

St. Peter's School on Reid street was broken into during the night of April 5 and ransacked by the marauders who carried off a typewriter and a number of other articles.

As a result of investigations by the police, four local youths were arrested at their homes early this morning and were arraigned before Magistrate O. A. Langley at the regular session of police court, facing charges of breaking and entering and theft. The four were Joseph Fontaine, Leo. Tobin, Richard O'Rourke and John Harran.

All four pleaded not guilty and were remanded for a week, the Crown not being ready to go ahead with the cases.

One of the accused asked that his case should be disposed of at once but Magistrate Langley pointed out that the Crown wanted a little time.

"You were arrested only this morning," the Magistrate said, "and the Crown Attorney would not hear about the case until 10 o'clock so you can see how unreasonable it would be for me to refuse to grant the Crown's request for time to prepare the case."

Auto Insurance Companies Cancel Liability Clause

Five Of The Six Companies Cancel Existing Policies

Five or six companies in the field of general insurance have recently instructed their local agents to cancel existing policies covering liability for automobile accidents.

"And it isn't so easy to find some other company that will take the business," an insurance man told the Examiner today. "The whole trend is away from it, although I would not want the impression to go abroad that new insurance cannot be obtained.

The main fact is that automobile insurance has been abused and eventually the public as a whole will have to pay for what has been going on. Automobile owners may not realize that their insurance rates in Ontario are probably the cheapest in this country if not on the continent. A five per cent profit made by the companies is perhaps the general return, although up to six or seven years ago the companies were also making six to ten per cent on the investment of their surplus funds. Today they are not getting any more than three per cent.

Just A Lot Of Grief

Any general insurance agent could write a book about autombile liability claims. Long ago it got so bad that the background of insurance could not be mentioned in court actions for damages. Lloyds last year had a loss ratio of around 85 per cent, and so it goes, just to make a long story short. Companies that are going out of this branch of the business are by no means weak financially, but they have decided that automobile liability is just a lot of grief for them and they are content to let the others carry it.

We have to make out cancellations at once and then try to get our customers reinsured with other companies and it all means a lot of worry these days. Sometimes I think it may come to compulsory insurance, such as they have in Massachusetts where they are finally educating the people that, after all ,the cost of insurance is coming out of their own pockets and that they are the people to blame for increased rates.

What I can't understand is why the people of Ontaro fail to appreciate that right now they have the cheapest liability insurance and that it is in their own interests to keep it at that level. Right now losses are driving companies out of the automobile insurance, and I don't know how far this trend will go."

Moore Is Unable To Play In Nets

TORONTO, April 7 (CP)—President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League notified the Chicago Black Hawks today they could no longer play Alfie Moore as goalkeeper during the remainder of the Stanley Cup final against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Calder ruled ineligible because Hawks had Paul Goodman, their regular spare netminder, available to replace the injured Mike Karakas. Goodman played this season for the Wichita club of the American Association.

He could not be brought here in time for the first game Tuesday night which Moore, Pittsburgh Hornet goalie during the 1937-38 season, helped Hawks win 3-1.

CHEMONG BRIDGE PLACED A SCARE IN CITY COUNCIL

As an afterthought Monday night the city council withdrew its expression of approval of the Suburban Area Commission assuming the road from Bridgenorth to the Ennismore Cross, including the floating bridge.

Months ago a deputation from the county had sought the city's support as a partner in the Suburban Area Commission, then the council had its city solictor examine into the possible commitments and involvements in the event of the bridge being wrecked and a new one built, and the finance committee finally produced this resolution: "That this council recommend the Suburban Area Commission to take over the road from Bridgenorth to that part of Ennismore usually known as the Ennismore Cross."

The solicitor's report was favorable to transferring the road from the county to the commission, and it was definitely declared that the city could not be charged more than a certain amount said to be at present half a mill in the tax rate. With that assurance the city was prepared to give it sassent, but something happened over the week-end. The Chemong Bridge was considerably damaged and nearly wrecked, an untimely threat of the lake hazards to the floating timbers, pictures of it got in the paper showing almost no trace of the bridge. It remained for Alderman Wilson, as a watchdog of the treasury, to propose when the finance committee's report was read Monday by Alderman Cotton that the Ennismore clause be deleted. Although the council had agreed to the idea several days previously, apparently they had become "bridge danger" conscious and without a word of argument they struck out the clause leaving Reeve Gifford's plan without the city's assent.

FINANCIAL DRIVE OF THE Y.M.C.A. GOES OVER TOP

For the first time in the history of the Peterborough Y. M. C. A., the association's annual financial drive went over the top without supplementary meetings of the canvassers. Receipts totalling $7,338.70 were reported at Wednesday night's banquet. While the objective was $8,500, teams guaranteed sufficient additional income from outstanding accounts to bring the total well over the top.

Last year supplementary meetings were necessary to bring the total to the objective set, but this year's campaign has been so successful it ended a full two days before the date set for the last meeting on Friday, reported G. H. Roper, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. The special names committee, headed by W. A. Richardson, has promised an additional $950 over the $3,089 which they have already turned in.

Highest scoring team was headed by Bob Simmons, with members turning in a total of 118.2 per cent. of their objective. "B" division, of which Mr. Simmons' team was a part, was first with 109.2 per cent. Ken Kingston, its head, reported his men had still $72 to collect. "A" division scored 94.1 per cent., under direction of J. A. McKone. Highest scoring team in "A" division was that headed by Lt.-Col. J. A. Dewart. His team collected 98.4 per cent. of its allotment. Another $128 is still outstanding in "A" division, Mr. McKone reported.

WHEAT MAY BE DAMAGED.

F. C. Patterson, agricultural representative, hesitated to-day to estimate the effect on the fall wheat crop of the recent severe nigh frosts. "It certainly isn't doing any good, but I think it is too early to venture an opinion as to whether there has been any extensive damage," he said.

RUBBISH FIRES

The Peterborough Fire Department had several calls to rubbish fires in the past few days and everyone had been started without the knowledge of the fire department. Warning was issued today that persons wishing to burn rubbish must first obtain permission from the fire department.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS.

Traffic fatalities in Ontario so far this year have increased 21 per cent. over the same period of 1937, a Motor League official reports. Each day sees new costumes completed, although all will not be completed until the middle of May. Groups of women from George Street, St. Paul's, Trinity, St. Andrew's, St. John's, and Murray Street Churches are working each day to complete the elaborate outfits.

CASE DISMISSED.

After a number of adjournments the charge against Mrs. Alice Lipke of stealing around $250 from the house of Maxwell Vincent was finally disposed of at this morning's session of police court when no evidence was submitted by the Crown and the case was dismissed. Crown Attorney McElderry informed the court that the informant did not wish to give evidence. "The man who was charged with this woman has been sentenced in Toronto to two or three years in the penitentiary on other charges, he explained, "so it has been decided not to offer any evidence in this case."

ONTARIO PRESSED FOR LAW TO CURB DRUNKEN DRIVERS

TORONTO, April 7.—(CP). —The Ontario government was urged yesterday to enact strict legislation to meet the menace of drunk and reckless motor drivers. It was passing up a good opportunity if it did not pass such legislation this session, suggested Conservative Leopold Macaulay.

The House discussed highway safety problems during committee consideration of Highway Minister McQuesten's bill making vigorous amendments to the Highway Traffice Act. The bill was not advanced through committee stage, however, pending clarification of a provision for impounding cars of drunk and reckles drivers.

The House rejected a proposal by Dr. H. E. Welsh (Cons., Hastings East) that a blood test of a person suspected of being under influence of liquor be used as prima facie evidence in a traffic case. The amendment did not say this should be compulsory and Premier Hepburn observed that took the teeth away from it.

Waiting On Ottawa.

Mr. Macaulay made his plea for highway safety after the Minister said he had taken steps to include provisions in the Act to deal with drunk driving as the Dominion government planned a change in the criminal code. Mr. McQuesten said he was not satisfied with drunk driving provisions in the Ontario Act but wanted to wait and see what Ottawa would do.

"You are passing up a good opportunity this session if you don't go after reckless and drunk drivers," said Mr. Macaulay, former highways minister. "I wouldn't wait for Ottawa. I'd do something now."

Fatalities in Toronto were 28 per cent greater than a year ago, Mr. Macaulay quoted a newspaper report. The new middle road from Toronto-Hamilton — a four-lane highway with a boulevard separating traffic going different directions—was not as safe as the old highway. This was due to speeding and there had been fatality after fatality there.

William Duckworth (Con., Toronto Dovercourt) suggested pedestrians carry lights. The Highways Minister saw no need for including such a provision in the statutes.

Dr. Welsh, supporting his blood test proposal, said it had been discovered an alcohol content of .10 per cent. would show a person was under the influence of liquor. Mr. McQuesten thought the proposal went "pretty far" and doubted whether there was sufficient certainty of its scientific effectiveness.

Impounding Cars.

David A. Croll (Lib., Windsor-Walkerville) protested against the clause providing cars of drunken and reckless drivers should be impounded for three months. This would work hardship on the owner of a small business if he lost his only car for such a period.

Premier Hepburn was concerned with having the car released after it was impounded. If a person driving a car owned by a Fort William man, for instance, was charged with drunk or reckless driving it would mean considerable expense for the owner to come to Toronto and have it released. He favored an amendment making the provision apply only when the owner drove the car.

PROGRAMME

MILLBROOK

TRAINING READERS Y.P.U. SUBJECT

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 7.—Leadership Training was the theme taken up at the weekly meeting of the Young Peoples' Union on Monday, at 8 p.m., with the convenor of that department, Miss Phyllis Kidd, in charge.

The aims and purposes of training in leadership together with the responsibilities and privileges that go with such a course, were covered in detail in a constructive talk by Jean Burnham.

Soft music introduced the worship period, which concluded the program, Byron Foster eading the lesson, Dorothy Sisco taking the poem, Robert and Fred Ridge singing, 'Take my life and let it be," Phyllis Kidd telling an impressive story, "The Man who loved the lillies," and Earl Edworthy closing with prayer.

The president, B. B. Dawson, took charge of the business period, announcement being made of change of date for the finals in the Presbytery debating series, which will be at Millbrook, on May 4, the subject being: "Resolved that the pioneer woman contributed more to the welfare of the community than has the modern woman."

A contest on "Service," featuring Bible verses containing this word, brought a helpful meeting to a close, with 'Taps' sung as all joined in a big circle before dismissal.

CHILD-SPACING IS HELD LEGAL

NEW YORK, April 7. (CP).—The Citizen's Committee for planned parenthood started its campaign today to raise funds for the work of the American Birth Control League.

The campaign was introduced at a dinner in a midtown hotel last night when "planned parenthood" and child spacing were defended on legal, moral and economic grounds by speakers.

It is a moral duty, implicit in the Christian religion, to give to the poor and underprivileged information from which persons in higher income brackets have benefited, the Very Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving, Dean of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L.I., said. Although sincere religious persons condemn the scientific spacing and planning of children, he said, equally sincere religious person once condemed the use of lightning rods because they felt God had a right to strike any house he chose.

HAVELOCK GROUP RALLIES AT PARTY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, April 7.—The Havelock Home and School Association celebrated the completion of their first year in this village, with a "Birthday Party" on Tuesday evening, in the Town Hall. The local branch was organized on March 16, 1937, and the first meeting held on April 6.

The meeting opened with "O Canada" and prayer by Rev. S. A. Kemp, Mrs. Walter Nobes, president, occupied the chair, and after the regular routine business, a very interesting program was presented by the Middle and Upper School students.

A debate, "Resolved that the student's success depends more on the parents and home than the school and teachers," was won by Miss Debra Longmuir and Miss Marie McQuigge, of the affirmative, who were opposed by Howard Harnden and Graydon Harris. The girls won by a very small margin, both sides presenting a very good argument. Judges were Mrs. Rigby, Miss L. Wing and Mr. Yuill.

Other items on the program were: Vocal duet, "Romeo and Juliet," by Misses Bette Mathison and Lois Thompson; trumpet solo by Grey Kemp; a talk by Rev. Kemp on "Influence of the home and school on character building"; reading, "Rainbow land," by Miss V. Robinson. Miss Robinson and Grey Kemp were accompanied at the piano by Miss M. Williams, and Misses Thompson and Mathison, by Mrs. Goheen.

The parent attendance shield was won for the first time by Miss M. Roche's classroom, the presentation being made by Miss V. Robinson.

Aims And Purpose.

A very interesting and thorough address, explaining the aims and purpose of the home and school, was given by the president, Mrs. Nobes. "The Home and School Associations, she said, are organizations planned to consolidate the training of parents, the education of children, and the development of community life. That these things may be done there must be co-operation between children and teachers, between teachers and parents, between parents and children and co-operation between education, industry and the press of today. The objects of the organization are mainly to (1) to bring into closer relation the home and the school, that parents and teachers may co-operate intelligently in the training of the child. (2) To develop between education and the general public, such united efforts as will secure for every child the highest advantage in physical, mental, moral and spiritual education. (3) To study educational problems and to raise the standards of home life by strengthening public interest in the development of the boy and girl as individuals and as future Canadian citizens."

The secretary in her report of the year's progress said that the Home and School held eight meetings during the past year, with a total adult attendance of 380, an average of 47 per meeting. Twelve topics upon which talks were given were as follows: "Religion Begins at Home," "The King's Wife," "The Princesses," "Spinal Meningitis," "Child Recreation," "New Program of Studies," "Skin Diseases," "Vocational Guidance," "Dentistry," "Diphtheria," "The Radio as an Aid to Eduation," and "The Work of the Home and School." Mrs. Charles Taylor won the distinction of being the only member, with the exception of the executive, to have a perfect record for attendance.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting by a committee headed by Mrs. Charles Taylor, Mrs. H. Pollock, Mrs. George Iles and Mrs. William Forsythe.

DISGUISED TARGET PEPS UP SHOOTING

BISLEY CAMP, England, April 7 (CP)—A new type of target, without a bulls-eye or other clearly-defined aiming point, will be introduced for the first time in the United Kingdom at the Army Rifle Association meeting to be held here in June. It will be known as the six-foot convertible landscape target.

Since the light machine gun has largely replaced the rifle in the army's equipment, it is contended riflemen must now be trained to the highest pitch of efficiency in use of their weapons. The new target would supply such training.

The stationary bulls-eye target for years has been regarded as too far removed in appearance from any target on a modern battlefield, hence the adoption of the new target for the regulation course in rifle training.

At a distance the new target appears to blend with the color of the landscape The deception will call for keener concentration and more careful sighting, for although the target has rings marking the value of hits, these rings are not visible to the marksman.

ICE STALLS STEAMER

BUFFALO, N.Y., April 7—(AP).—A thick Lake Erie ice field stalled the steamer William F. Fitch last night about one mile off the port of Buffalo.

The steamship left Detroit Monday with a load of automobiles. A tug was sent out to aid the steamer but became caught in the ice jam and was forced to return to port.

3 NABBED AT CLUB

CHICAGO, April 7—(AP).—The gambling casino of the Chez Paree, swank night club, was raided early to-day by State's Attorney's police who arrested three men, confiscated equipment and turned out about 100 patrons. The raiding squad said the patrons were playing dice, roulette and card games.

Bulgarian Women Obtain Voting Rights

Bulgarian women, and members of the clergy, obtained the right to vote for the first time in the recent Bulgarian election, which was held on the "installment plan"; one every Sunday for a month. It was the first election in Bulgaria in seven years and at the time this photograph was taken King Boris' non-party government had won the first three instalments.

TORIES IN SENATE SNAG POWER BILL

OTTAWA, April 7 (C.P.).—Strong Conservative opposition in the Senate Banking Committee to the Government Bill vesting Parliament with authority to issue power export licences has held up the measure at least until after the Easter recess.

Led by Conservative Leader Meighen, critics of the Bill almost had it rejected in committee yesterday, but Government Leader Dandurand stepped in at the last moment and moved adjournment until following the Easter holiday.

Senator Dandurand said he would confer with the Government in an effort to reach a settlement on the matters which caused differences in the committee. The Bill would transfer the licensing authority from the Cabinet to Parliament.

Cautioning the committee against precipitous action on the Bill, the Government Leader said the principe the committee "was about to reject" had been passed by the Commons last week and he doubted the advisability of the Senate refusing to accede to the House's wish in this matter.

A Precedent?

"I have often heard of the reluctance of Parliament to divest itself of some authority in matters of legislation and give it to the Governor-in-Council (the Cabinet)," he continued.

"But this would be the first time we have seen Parliament refusing to assume some authority that has been approved unanimously by the House of Commons. The tendency is to allow the Cabinet to absorb too much authority over Parliament."

Senator Meighen said the principle of the Bill was wrong and nothing was more inappropriate than that a matter of this kind should be left to Parliament.

The question of Hydro-Electric power involved such intricate problems that only experts could figure them out. Parliament could determine the policy and then it should be handed over to the Board of Railway Commissioners.

Ottawa To Keep Million Radio Fees Before 1932

Think It Due Dominion For Work Keeping "Interference" Down

OTTAWA, April 7 (CP) — Money collected for radio receiving set licences prior to 1932 was not looked upon by the government as property of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the parliamentary committee on radio was told today in a memorandum from Transport Minister Howe.

At yesterday's session of the committee Major Gladstone Murray, corporation general manager, said the CBC had urged the government to turn over a sum of $1,000,000 unexpended from licence fees collected before nationalization of radio in 1932. It was the view of the board of governors, he said, that the money was the property of radio listeners held in trust to be spent for their benefit.

The minister's memo said the work and responsibility of removing radio interference was performed by the government at a considerable expense, and since 1932 all money collected for fees had been turned over to the national radio management. The minister could not agree that any balance left from previous collections was due the corporation.

BRITAIN TO TURN LOYALISTS' FINAL ARMS PLEA DOWN

LONDON, April 7 (CP Cable) — The Spanish Government's last despairing appeal for arms will be refused. The Chamberlain Government, it is intimated, does not intend to depart from its policy of non-intervention in Spain.

As General Franco, with German and Italian men, guns and airplanes, sweeps onward toward the sea, the Spanish Government appealed by radio to the peoples of France and Great Britain and to their governments by notes.

The Spanish Government protested against the unjust policy of "one-sided non-intervention" which denied them the right to purchase arms but did not prevent General Franco from getting help from Germany and Italy.

"Give us arms, there is still time," was the Republican Government's plea.

The Spanish note is now being studied in Whitehall. There is no likelihood, it is indicated, however, that Prime Minister Chamberlain will abandon his declared policy of non-intervention.

CHEESEMEN NAME TESTER FOR MILK

OTTAWA, April 6.—(CP).— The Carleton County Cheese Producers' Association, after discussing the importance of preserving and increasing the United Kingdom market for Canadian cheese, decided last night to appoint a specially qualified man to test milk received at the 40 cheese factories in the country.

"If Canadian cheese is to enjoy its former reputation in the United Kingdom market, it must not only maintain but improve its present quality," David Brown of Kars, Ont., past president, told the Association.

"If by selecting a competent man to inspect and test milk we can improve the grade of cheese, it is simple economy to do so. The quality of the cheese, after all, is dependent on the quality of the milk used in its manufacture."

Brown said Ontario lost $40,000 last year by manufacturing low-grade cheese.

JAPS RETREATING FROM SHANTUNG

SHANGHAI, April 7 (AP)—The Kwangsi military chieftain, General Li Tsung-Je n, reported today that Japanese were "in full retreat" from Taierchwang, the Shantung province village whose mud walls have been lattened by fnearly three weeks of battle north of the Grand Canal.

General Li said his troops charged at dusk last night in a third offensive and that the Japanese, unable to withstand the fierce night assault, began retiring toward Tsaochwang at dawn.

The victorious Chinese began mopping up stragglers along the narrow guage railroad which terminates at Ataierchwang and runs northward through Tsaochwang to connect with the main Tientsin-Pukow railway.

General Li reported his victory as the war entered its 10th month. The Chinese and Japanese armies are in a stalemate practically everywhere.

LOYALIST DEFENCE LINES CRUMPLING ALONG EAST COAST

HENDAYE, France, April 7—(AP)—Spanish Government defences crumbled before a fresh insurgent march to Spain's east coast to-day as insurgent red and gold banners fluttered at the village of Vallibona.

The village is 22 miles from the seacoast town of Vinaroz. General Francos armored columns there threatened to outflank the Government left wing defending the Ebro River delta city of Tortosa from positions in the Razas and Montenegrelo Mountains.

The insurgent right wing marched from Moretla while counter-attacks from reinforced government units staved off further frontal advances upon Tortosa.

Simultaneous action along the Northern Catalan front brought the city of Balaguer—northern end of the Governments new defence line between Lerida and Barcelona—under insurgent control. Here, too, General Jose Moscardos column was attempting an encirclement to outflank the strong prepared positions of the Government reaching southward to Borjas Blancas.

Mop-up squads continued operations in the North Aragon territory, threatening to send a fresh influx of refugees into neutral France. French border officials massed troops at Port de Plan, Bagneres de Luchon and Fos in expectation of the arrival of thousands of refugees.

On the Spanish side of the border Government militia threw up entrenchments about Puigcerda and Le Junqutra to hold a developing insurgent offensive to cut off from French the Government capital, Barcelona—already severed, by artillery fire at Tortosa, from the rest of Government Spain.

HEAVY EARLY ON "FAGS"

FRANCE SEEKING ADDITIONAL ALLIES AROUND GERMANY

PARIS, April 7 (A.P.). — France is pursuing efforts to get Czechoslovakia's neighbors to pledge defence against German encroachment in the little country, despite the acute domestic situation and the likelihood Premier Leon Blum's Cabinet will fall before the week is out.

The French plan is for an alliance of Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, and France to act if there should be an attack from Germany—(to further the German dream of uniting all Germans, including the 3,500,000 German minority in Czechoslovakia).

It was presented to the French Ambassadors to Moscow and Warsaw and the ministers to Praha and Bucharest by Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour yesterday, while Premier Blum was winning by only a slim margin in the Chamber of Deputies on the first test of his bill which would give him dictatorial control of the nation's finances for three months.

The diplomats were instructed by Paul-Boncour to sound out the governments to which they are accredited. Similar advices were sent to the French Minister to Yugoslavia.

(France already is pledged to aid Czechoslovakia if attacked, but there is no common agreement on this point with the other Powers.)

He will take the finance measure to the Senate on Friday, and faces amost certain defeat by the Conservative element which contends the powers he asks are too drastic. Blum wants to put a tax on capital, suspend payments on the national debt for two years, regulate foreign exchange, and revalue the Bank of France's gold. Political circles consider Defence Minister Edouard Daladier, Radical Socialist, as a likely new Premier.

ECUADOR TO HOLD FAIR

Cemetery Commission Set-Up Will Likely Be Abolished

Legislation Passes The Committee Stage Of The Ontario House

TORONTO, April 7. — Government legislation abolishing the present Cemetery Commission set-up in Ontario passed committee stage in the Legislature last night after Premier Hepburn revealed that the primary reason for the abolition was the tendency of inspectors and other officials working under the commissions to run wild with charges and expenses.

"They were given a swindle sheet," said he, "and they made use of it to the fullest extent. Now we are going to stop the practice."

"I agree with you," said Opposition Leader Macaulay, "but where you have an instance of abuse like this you can stamp it out."

"This sort of abuse obtained over the whole Province," said Mr. Hepburn.

Mr. Macaulay submitted that the cemetery boards, as appointed in 1931, had done good work, and if they were to be set aside, as the Government proposes, provision should be made in a separate Bill from the Department of Health. Instead, said he, the Government had provided for the abolition in a lengthy amendment to the Statute Law Amendment Act. The principle was all wrong, he added. The proposed legislation should stand over and the Minister of Health should further study the cemeteries situation.

"I have travelled up and down this Province," said he, "and I have been amazed at the run-down condition of scores of rural cemeteries I have seen. Oriental respect for our forefathers is long overdue in this country. The reason for many of the difficulties we find ourselves in to-day is that the present generation believes everything our forefathers did was all wrong. Just because we have passed from the horse-and-buggy stage to an era of gasoline buggies that is no reason why we should feel our forefathers knew nothing.'

The Minister of Health, Hon. Harold J. Kirby, claimed that the present Cemeteries Act, with its set-up commissions, was a dead Act. The benefits accruing from its early operation had vanished, said he, and counties were complaining against the high charges assessed against them by the commissions and their officials. His departmental staff had recommended an immediate change of conditions.

Attorney-General Conant modified the Bill to the extent of rendering its provisions inapplicable to cemeteries which in the Department's opinion were being administered by municipal councils in a satisfactory manner. Premier Hepburn admitted that little respect was being shown for the country's ancestors, but consideration also should be given, he said, by the present generation to those coming after it.

SAVE 30-MILE JOURNEY

St. Malo and Dinard, French towns, are to be linked by a mile-long tunnel under the River Rance. This will save a journey of 30 miles now necessary for highway travel between the two towns.

The House turned down a proposal by George H. Challies (Con., Grenville-Dundas) that changes in the Rural Power District Service Charge Act's regulations receive legislative approval rather than be made by Order-in-Council. Hon. W. L. Houck, vice-chairman of the Hydro Commission, sponsor of the bill, said the change would be unworkable as the commission would be forced to wait months until the Legislature met.

The bill concerned the Government's budget announcement of making requirements for rural Hydro service two consumers to the mile instead of three. A. W. Roebuck, former Attorney-General and Hydro commissioner, suggested the Challies amendment would destroy long-established Hydro practice.

A provision in the bill said any deficit would be paid out of the province's consolidated revenue fund. Mr. Houck said each Hydro district would be charged separately for its Hydro and the surplus would belong to the commission.

Oppose Trustees' Expenses.

Disapproved also was a provision in Education Minister Simpson's School Law Amendment Act. It would have allowed trustees and officers operating under the High School Act to be paid for travelling expenses.

This was opposed by Mr. Macaulay, who said the Toronto Board of Education spent a large part of its time arguing over disposition of board cars, over what car should pick up what trustee and so forth. Provincial Secretary Nixon refused his request to move the amendment killing the section, but added: "Some of the Toronto board's expenses are ridiculously high."

Champion of legislative dignity, Col. Fraser Hunter (Lib., Toronto St. Patrick) withdrew his bill to have members called M.P. instead of M.L.A. or M.P.P. Mr. Nixon and the Premier opposed it and Mr. Hepburn suggested he withdraw the measure and the House could pass a resolution clarifying the title to be used.

Among bills passed through committee were those amending the Game and Fisheries Act to provide a closed moose season in certain parts of Northwestern Ontario and Nipissing district, and a bill permitting establishment of a board of reference to settle disputes between teachers and school boards in event of dismissal. Another committee-approved bill carried out the Government's intention to remove from municipalities the cost of treatment for tuberculosis patients in sanatoria.

INCOME INCREASES

HALIFAX—(CP).—An increase of $583 in the income of the Nova Scotia Board of Censors for the last fiscal year was noted in a report before the Provincial Legislature. Revenue during the 12-month period ending November 30, 1937, was $175,893, as compared with $175,310 for the previous year.

Planning Stratoflight To London

Clarence Chamberlin, one of the early transatlantic fliers, is shown, LEFT, telling Vincent Bendix, noted aeronautical leader, of his plans for a stratosphere flight to Europe this fall. Chamberlin believes he can maintain an altitude of 50,000 feet, using a hermetically-sealed aeroplane and special oxygen equipment, during the flight. He estimates that he can make the water jump across the Atlantic in four hours.

Sleigh, Automobile And Snowshoes Used By Doctor To Reach Patient

SYDNEY, N.S., April 7.—Dr. J. L. Leblanc has written another chapter in the life of a country physician, using everything from snowshoes to an automobile to hurry over snow-bound roads and trails to an urgent maternity case in an isolated Cape Breton village.

Word received here said the Cheticamp village physician received a call from a nurse at Pleasant Bay in Northern Cape Breton that she was unable to care for a difficult maternity case. He left Cheticamp Monday afternoon and reached Campe Rouge an hour later.

From there, Dr. Leblanc and his guides, Charles Bourgeois, Duncan Fraser, John Hinkley and his son, continued by snowshoe. Later they changed to horse and sleigh and afterward to horse and wagon.

On the return trip, Dr. Leblanc used an automobile, horse and saddle, horse and sleigh and snowshoes. The round trip took 15 hours.

The mother and the child, a boy, both were reported "doing nicely."

(Examiner Correspondence.)

A very representative gathering were present at the meeting held in Lynch's Hall. Plans for the coming bowling season were also discussed. Messrs. J. L. Doherty and Howard G. WOMAN SOCIALIST WRESTS FULHAM FROM TORY LISTS

LONDON, April 7 (C P.). — The Labor Party, aggressively fighting the Government's foreign policy, took encouragement to-day from victory in the West Fulham by-election where Dr. Edith Summerskill, Socialist physician, wrested the House of Commons seat from the Conservatives.

Because of the intensive fight on the issue of foreign policy, the by-election campaign was watched as the first sampling of public opinion since Anthony Eden resigned as the Foreign Secretary rather than open negotiations with Italy.

Dr. Summerskill yesterday polled 16,583 votes to 15,162 for John Busby, Conservative. Her majority of 1,421 compared with the margin of 3,483 in the 1936 general election for Sir Cyril Cobb, Conservative, whose death vacated the seat.

Victory for Labor in the London seat where the voters are mostly small wage earners—waiters, taxi-drivers, seamstresses, and barbers—was interpreted in party circles as strengthening the campaign for more liberal treatment of the Spanish Government which has appealed for the right to buy munitions in Great Britain.

The successful candidate regarded the voters' decision as an ultimatum to the Government to go "back to the League" of Nations.

People Lost Faith.

"I won because the people of Fulham, speaking for the rest of the nation, have no faith in the foreign policy of the National government," she said, as thousands of voters gathered to cheer the result. "The people have delivered their ultimatum — back to the League or get out."

Dr. Summerskill's election, which made her the 12th woman in the House of Commons, was the eighth time since 1935 that Labor has gained a seat. The last previous occasion was in Feburay when R. R. Stokes took Ipswich from the Conservative column. There have been 45 such contests since the general election, the great majority returning candidates of the same political persuasion as those who vacated the seats.

While the by-election was regarded by Labor as a tremendous moral victory it made little difference in the House of Commons standing where the National governmenth has a huge majority.

The unofficial standing shows 421 members who support the government against 194 on the Opposition benches in a House of 615.

Negotiators Return From Mexico

GOOD WIFE WORTH 30 CTS.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., April 7.—(CP)—"Wanted: Young woman, not over 30; to marry."

Simon Daniel, 25-year-old farmer, said today it had taken him five years to get up nerve enought to insert that advertisment in a Hopkinsville paper. He succeeded yesterday in mustering his courage. The add cost 30 cents.

"If I get a good wife, it will be worth it," Daniel ventured.

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Barbara Kingsley, pretty young society editor of the Martinsville Post, has just "covered" another wedding. She is tired of the routine but Peter Baxter, managing editor, cheers her fading spirits. Garry Page, New York newspaper man in town for the wedding, misses his train back and Barbara, at the train to pick up pictures, offers to drive him to the Junction to catch the last train that night. They have dinner and, at the Junction, run into the wedding party, including Barbara's proud cousin, Julia. A few weeks later Natalie Kendall, a close friend of Barbara's who is a New York fashion columnist, wires Barbara of an opening on a child magazine. Barbara decides to take the position and Natalie meets her upon her arrival in New York. Barbara learns that Garry Page is a good friend of Natalie's. He learns from a book note in a paper that she has joined the magazine in New York. He sends a note for her to phone.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 5

Mrs. Corbett pushed her telephone toward Barbara but she shook her head. She must call Garry some place where no one could hear. But out on the street she walked several blocks before she found a drug store with telephone booths. She beat a man to a booth and dialed Garry's number.

"Hello," he was saying.

"Garry Page?" Barbara asked as she held the telephone receiver to her ear in the drug store booth. There was no need to ask, though, when she knew that voice so well.

"It is." Then: "Is this Barbara Kingsley?"

He gave her little chance to talk, though. He was taking the conversation into his own hands. She heard him say that he would pick her up at half-past seven and they would have dinner—that she shouldn't dress because it wasn't necessary and anyway he didn't have much time, unless she wanted to, then he would—that it was his right to introduce her to New York.

"Why didn't you tell me you were coming?" he asked. "Too busy?—got it out of the book news in the papers."

How could she say she had thought it might be presumptuous? She began: "But, it seemed — it seemed . . ."

"Never mind. You're here. I'll see you at seven-thirty."

While she got ready, Barbara wished that Garry had asked her to dress. The yellow frock which Natalie had given her was by far the best looking thing in her wardrobe. She voiced this thought to the older girl, who began to rummage through Barbara's clothes. She held up a rust colored crepe at last.

"Wear this with the new sandals. They match. I have a green beret of silk and straw that will do more for you than it ever did for me, and some lace gloves that blend. You'll put the breakfast food heiress out of the running."

"Oh, yes . . ." For a little while she had forgotten her.

"Don't look so tragic honey. She doesn't mean a thing—not a box of whatever it is she represents."

Barbara was ready when Garry came. He was as clear-eyed and natural as she had remembered him. His eyes approved the rust dress and the green hat. He was friendly to Natalie and when he and Barbara were alone in the elevator he looked down at her and grinned.

"Why do I feel as though I'm greeting somebody from home?" he asked. "I do—and I knew you three hours."

Three—so he hadn't forgotten the number, either.

"We're going to have to work fast tonight, Barbara," Garry told her. "There are so many things I want to show you."

But they didn't move very fast. They sat for a long time, at the end of an out-of-door garden, down in the Italian section where they went for dinner. A musical comedy moon, too big and golden, came up and hung over the little garden, and the proprietor, who cooked the food on a great stove in the kitchen that opened into the garden and served it, too, came to sit with them a few minutes.

They had minestrone, chicken cachitorre, vegetables cooked in their own juices.

"Will you come here with me when I get back, Barbara?" Garry asked. "We'll have spaghetti— half a bushel of it. What do you want to do now?"

"Anything!" she answered.

"Then I have an idea. We'll go to the top of the RCA building and see the view."

There was a cool fresh wind smart with the smell of salt blowing on the RCA terrace and Barbara took off her green beret and held her curls back. She and Garry stood side by side looking over the parapet. She thought of last night when she had searched and searched for him. Life was so much better even than you expected it to be if you only trusted it far enough. She must not forget again.

Garry put his hand over hers, and there was strength and protection in the gesture. Together they watched the row of white lights winding up the Harlem, the yellow pageantry that went up the sky where the Skyway began across the New Jersey flats, and the play of ships' lanters where boats waited in the ricers for the morning treks to begin.

Garry counted the streets for her until he found the pier where the Normandie was docked. She could see it, waiting quietly for morning, and unconsciously her hand tightened around the fingers that held hers.

"I'll just be away a month," he said simply.

"Yes," she answered.

They dropped in at Toni's, on West Fifty-second street, for a few minutes but there were few people there tonight that Garry knew so they didn't stay. And in the end they took a hansom cab at the Plaza and drove around Central park. The leaves were heavy on the trees and the park was quiet. Barbara found herself wondering how many other times Garry had driven through the park with other people. She would have this ride to save, anyway, no matter with whom she came later. For a moment she wondered what the park looked like in a snowfall. She would find out some day.

"You're coming to see me off, aren't you, Barbara? The boat sails at 11 but there will be some people gathering around 10."

Strangely enough she didn't want to. She wished that she had an excuse for not going. To say goodbye now would be to keep her friendship with Garry fresh and happy.

"I don't know anyone, Garry," she answered, "and you'll be so busy. Let me wish you bon voyage now—"

He interupted her. "Then it's high time you met some people. I'm not saying goodbye, for I'll be watching for you tomorrow Promise?"

"I promise."

In the morning it was raining. It was a downpour that plainly intended to last all day. Taxicabs were in a tangle in the streets.

"Start early and give yourself time," Natalie cautioned. "Traffic will be in a jam on the cross-town streets and at the pier."

Barbara had a brown wool crepe suit which she wore with a yellow blouse and a brown felt sports hat and brown sandals.

Finally her cab drew up in front of the steamship offices. The elevator was crowded so she walked up the long flight of stairs to the floor which connected with the gangplank.

Far at the end she saw the boat. Then she was giving a steward the cabin number following him through palatial halls and rooms to an elevator. She could hear sounds of laughter and voices before she reached the party. Girls' voices, high and gay. Men's voices, deep and gay. It was light-hearted chatter, the kind that comes when everybody knows everybody else, or a second Barbara hesitated. Then she threw her rust curls higher. Garry had wanted her and here she was! She knocked at the partly opened door.

A girl reached out her hand and opened the door wider.

"Oh hello," she said. "Come in."

A boy, tall and good looking with merry eyes, waved at her. "I don't know you but I want to. I'm Ray Lipton."

Barbara did not see Garry. She wondered if he had not arrived. She opened her mouth a time or two to ask about him but nobody was paying any attention to her. Maybe she had the wrong room! But no. Gary's name was being mentioned. Then, just as the steward began his warnings that passengers must leave, Gary came.

He stood in the doorway, careless in expensive brown tweeds, and Barbara felt her heart slipping from its moorings as surely as the boat would leave its berth presently.

He came straight to Barbara. "You did come! I had to see the purser or I'd have been here to welcome you. I bet you haven't met anyone. There's no time for introductions now but I want you to know Ruth Merryweather." He turned to a girl whose hair was as yellow as Julia's, but whose eyes were friendly and sympathetic and warm in their blueness.

Ruth Merryweather held out her hand. "I want to know you lots better and maybe I can manage some other introductions while Garry's scooting down the river."

The crowd was moving into the corridor, squeezing into the elevator or walking down the steps, and Garry was saying goodbye to everyone.

Ruth smiled her farewell. "Garry, I have to dash to a Junior league meeting. We'll do the introductions later, Miss Kingsley." She turned back to Garry. "Have a grand time and if you don't get seasick after the breakfast you ate this morning you should patent your stomach."

So Garry had met Ruth for his last meal on shore! Barbara wished that she had not come.

Follow Healthful Diet—Reduce the Modern Way

Declare War on High Calories

Mrs. Slim, formerly Mrs. Stout, champions the cause of low-calory foods.

"When you want to slenderize, it's not how much you eat, but WHAT," she says.

And here's a fine example: One cup of lima beans (200 calories) adds almost twice as much to your poundage as a cup of carrots (60) plus a cup of string beans (43).

It's fun to count calories when you know you don't have to starve and that by limiting meals to 1,200 calories a day, you lose 2 pounds a week.

And it's easy if you stick to lean meats, take your potatoes baked instead of creamed or fried. And if you watch rich desserts and in-between-meal snacks. Just compare 2 plain cookies (100 calories) with a single piece of chocolate cake (350); an apple (100) with a frankfurter and roll (300)!

You'll find complete, delicious reducing menus for 2 weeks in our 32-page booklet. Three-day liquid diet. Calory chart for common foods. How to gain.

DOROTHY DIX

If a Husband Proves a Loafer, No-Account Sponger and Parasite to a Working Wife, Then It Is Time for Her to Bring Him to His Senses or Divorce Him

DEAR MISS DIX—I am 31 years old. Have been married for two months to a man who was the only boy in a family of four sisters and who has been badly spoiled by them. hours a day in an office doing very difficult work on financial statements that must be absolutely accurate, so I am under a great strain. My husband has no job. I support the family. He does not get up in the morning until 10 o'clock and spends the balance of the day loafing around. He takes my pay envelope and refuses to give me back even enough money to buy my lunches, but when he gets any money he never even lets me see the check. He treats me with absolute indifference. Reads at the table. Grouches. Seldom speaks to me. Never does a hand's turn of housework and I have to get the meals when I come home tired from the office. I am getting discouraged and nervous. What can I do to better the situation? I have never said a word to my husband about not working. A PERPLEXED BRIDE.

Answer:

I had supposed that Patient Griselda left no lineal descendants, but evidently you are her daughter and inherited all her meekest characteristics. Your place is neither in a home nor a counting house. You should be in a museum of Human Freaks where people could go and look at you, and wonder how you got that way and what made you stand such a husband any longer than it took you to put on your hat and leave.

No doubt humility and self-sacrifice, self-abnegation and the martyr spirit are all very admirable abstract virtues, but when you concretely put them into action they can be the most deadly crimes that any one can commit.

They can sap manhood. They can kill ambition. They can do away with incentive. They can foster selfishness. They can develop tyranny. They can make a weak person weaker; a grasping person more greedy; a mean person meaner, until they blot out every good quality in the individual.

That is what you are doing to your husband by your slaving to support him and making a doormat of yourself for him to kick around, and by your taking all of his arrogance and ill-temper without any protest and by your encouraging him in his spoiled-baby ways.

I am all for peace in the family; for a wife making every reasonable effort to get along with her husband and biting snappy comeback to a man who comes home tired and her tongue half in two to keep from making a snappy comeback to a man who comes home tired and nerve-racked after a hard day's work. But there is a time for silence and a time for speech. The psychological moment has come for you to stiffen your backbone and read the Riot Act to your husband.

Begin by telling him that you are not going to support him another day and that he can go back to Mama and stay with her until he gets a job; that you are not going to stand for his lying in bed until 10 o'clock waiting for work to come and rout him out. That he has got to get up and look for it. Furthermore, that he has to look pleasant while he stays around your house. And, above all, keep your own money.

You have to use drastic methods to wake up this Weary Willie whom you have married in order to make him make a man of himself, and you owe it to him to do it. If there is anything in him, he will thank you for bringing him to his sense. If there isn't you are well rid of a bad bargain.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am one of a large family, all of whom are married. My husband and I live at the old home and take care of my mother, who is past 80. She is a dear and it is a great happiness for me to do what I can for her. The other children are all in good circumstances. They come to see Mother and tell her about their money, their cars, their fine houses, their trips, and so forth, until I could scream, but they never bring her any little treat or contribute to her support in any way. Worse still, it takes all that my husband and I can make to pay for their entertainment, for they often stay two or three weeks at a time. What can I do about it, for they are literally eating us out of house and home? WORRIED.

Answer:

I think you should write a note to your brothers and sisters telling them that you love to have them come, but that you just simply can't afford to feed them, and that you will appreciate very much if they will make things easier for you by paying a moderate board when they visit Mother. They must be very selfish if they do not see this for themselves and refrain from deadbeating their way.

* * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Have you any statistics to show that marriages made in December and May don't last? I have been reading a book by a certain doctor on eugenics and sex harmony and he says marriages in these months are rarely successful. I married in December and I am worried about it. ANXIOUS WIFE.

Answer:

It isn't the month you married in that matters, it is what you put into your marriage of love and understanding that counts. Our marriages are what we make them, irrespective of the time of the year.

DOROTHY DIX.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S APRIL SHOWER

Uncle Wiggily, first making sure his fur was neatly parted and his pink nose brightly twinkling, stuck his head out of the window.

"Hello!" grunted Mr. Twistytail, the fat pig gentleman, who was passing the hollow stump bungalow just then. "Hello, Wiggy!"

"Hello, Twisty!" said Uncle Wiggily.

"Are you looking for the Fox, whose tail you shaved with the razor of Mr. Littletail, the mouse barber?" asked the pig gentleman.

"No," answered Uncle Wiggily, "I am looking to see if an April shower is coming."

"Why do you want an April shower?" asked the pig.

"To make my garden grow," the rabbit gentleman answered. "I have planted flower and vegetable seeds in my garden and you remember the little verse. I suppose, about April showers bringing May flowers."

"A very pretty verse," grunted the fat pig as he waddled on. "But do you see an April shower coming, Wiggy?"

"No," answered Mr. Longears, "I don't. So I think I shall have to make one."

Makes His Own

"How can you make an April shower?" asked Mr. Twistytail.

"With the hose," answered Uncle Wiggily. "I don't see a cloud in the sky and there must be clouds for April showers. So I shall make some myself."

Uncle Wiggily hopped out to his garage and started to fasten the hose to a faucet so he could wet the dry ground of his garden as an April shower would do.

"The seeds will find it much easier to push up the carots and flowers if the ground is soft and moist," said the rabbit.

While Uncle Wiggily was getting ready to water his garden, along back of the garage sneaked the Fox and the Bob Cat. The Fox carried an open umbrella. The two Bad Chaps were hungry and soon smelled Uncle Wiggily. For wild animals, like the Fox and Bob Cat, can smell much better than we can.

"There he is!" whispered the Bob Cat.

"I see him," whispered the Fox. "I want to pay him back for shaving all the hair off my tail so I'll sneak up and catch him."

"All right," agreed the Bob Cat. "But, mind you, I must have some nibbles. No fair you keeping Uncle Wiggily all yourself."

"I'll give you some nibbles!" promised the Fox. "And I'll give that rabbit a couple of extra bites for shaving my tail. It doesn't look like a dusting brush now."

Dislikes Chuckles

"It looks more like the tail of Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy!" chuckled the Bob Cat.

"Don't you laugh at me!" warned the Fox.

"I was laughing at your tail," mewed the Bob Cat.

"Well, don't laugh at that, either. You have no tail to brag about. But here I go now to get that rabbit."

"Better leave your imbrella with me!" said the Bob Cat. "It will only be in your way. I don't see why you carry an open umbrella, anyhow. It isn't going to rain. There isn't a cloud in the sky."

"I carry the umbrella so my thin, shaved tail won't show so plain," said the Fox. "But I'll leave the umbrella with you while I catch Uncle Wiggily. As you say, it isn't going to rain!"

Leaving the Bob Cat to hold the umbrella, the Fox sneaked up to get the rabbit. And just then all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily turned on the hose to water his garden and the water squirted all over the Fox.

"Wah! Wah!" cried the Bad Chap as he got soaked. "You fooled me, Bobbie! You said it wasn't going to April shower but it did. I had no umbrella and now look at my poor tail! Oh, Wah! Wah! Wah!"

The wet Fox ran away and so did the dry Bob Cat and the rabbit gentleman laughed. And if the lipstick doesn't start talking in its sleep and wake up the nail polish, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Susie's dress.

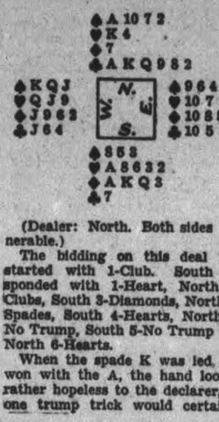
"The Authority on Authorities"

A LESSON TO REPEAT

ONE LESSON worth repeating is on the importance of counting losers when you are playing a suit contract. So many may seem to be in hand that the task appears hopeless. But if some of them can be ditched on a set-up side suit, or ruffed with the dummy's trumps, perhaps the number of losers may be cut down to the desired size.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

The bidding on this deal was started with 1-Club. South responded with 1-Heart, North 3 Clubs, South 3-Diamonds, North 3-Spades, South 4-Hearts, North 4-No Trump, South 5-No Trump and North 6-Hearts.

When the spade K was led and won with the A, the hand looked rather hopeless to the declarer, as one trump trick would certainly have to be given up and as soon as control was lost, the losing spades would be cashed. The declarer saw one chance, however. If the clubs were so divided that three rounds could safely be cashed without a ruff by the opponents, the spades could be disposed of. When this proved successful, South led a diamond to the A and immediately ruffed his losing diamond. The heart K was next cashed, followed by a spade ruff and the heart A. One heart trick was then given to the opponents, it being the only trick they were able to win.

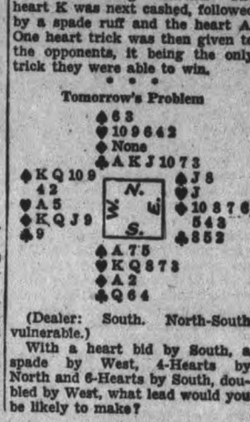
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

With a heart bid by South, a spade by West, 4-Hearts by North and 6-Hearts by South, doubled by West, what lead would you be likely to make?

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, April 8

Judging by the astral influences, the personal affairs may engage the attention owing to some perplexing, confusion or tricky angles, causing much vexation of anxiety. It is possible that a very treacherous matter may be forced into the open and settled. Papers, writings and documents are involved in this, and these should be carefully considered and guarded against loss. The affairs with young people are important under this rule.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of some cross purposes, especially in their intimate affairs, which have angles of duplicity or secrecy of a very irritating or confusing nature. These may be brought out into the open to be settled, but in all connections be wise with papers, and guard against their loss. Young people seem to have significance this year.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be devoted to the pursuit of pleasure rather than serious affairs of life. It may be bright, clever but fun loving and averse to assuming responsibilities. It may marry very young.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Virginal Gives Fairylike Airs In Music World

OTTAWA(April 7—(CP)—Daintiest of all musical instruments, the virginal—exquisite little utensil patterned along the lines of a miniature cottage grand piano—is the constant companion of Marion Keighley Snowden of London while on tour with her stories of old English music.

"Jumbo" (in vivid contrast to the daintiness of the instrument) is the name of Miss Snowden's pet. Standing knee-high, the harp-shaped keyboard is set on collapsible legs, similar to a kitchenette ironing board. It demands her undivided attention for the least variance in temperature throws it off key.

The dryness of the North American atmosphere caused considerable warping of the wood and Miss Snowden found herself not only a musician but a musical mechanic. She constantly used tweezers to adjust the instrument to the varying climates she encountered on her first tour of America with the virginal.

The main body is of English cherry wood, the sound box is of English pine and the 49 keys are in natural and black box wood. Small leather thongs pluck the strings to give the tinkling bell-like sounds. An extremely light touch is needed by the player. Emphasis on a note is gained by repeated mordents rather than firm striking. The keyboard, divided by Middle C, covers four octaves. The virginal, instrument of the days of Henry VIII, was popular until the end of the reign of James I. Then the spinet came into existence, followed by the harpsichord.

Wandering along the music manuals of the early days in a quaint music store in London 20 years ago, Miss Snowden happened on a book of virginal compositions. Greatly impressed with the wealth of song in the delicate airs, she took it home and practised the tunes on the harpsichord and piano. They were so pleasant she decided to track down the instrument for which they were composed and after much delving discovered one in a collection of an English nobleman. Later Arnold Dolmetsch, noted piano maker, reproduced an exact model of the Elizabethan period for Miss Snowden.

As a pianist Miss Snowden has won wide applause and her achievements in bringing to life the fairy-like airs written for the original in the Shakespearian period have impressed music lovers. She began an intense study of composers and made lantern slides of early manuscripts of virginal music and virginals no longer playable but preserved in museums. Her enlightening collection contains 45 slides some of which cost two years' deligent searching.

Gowned in a ruby velvet costume, the neckline outlined in pearls and the long sleeves banded in sable, a replica of a costume worn by "Bloody" Mary, Miss Snowden plays the lyrics written by early-period musicians for this instrument. Her repertoire contains about 50 numbers. There are few compositions available and are mostly variations.

"The virginal is an expensive luxury," said Miss Snowden, "but it is a joy to have with one." She believes its distinctly ladylike appearance influenced the people of the Elizabethan period in giving it a name.

Smartly Casual Garments Worn By Spectators

By LISBETH

To be properly dressed; not just smartly dressed or even becomingly dressed—but dressed for the occasion. That is the aim of women of good taste. They choose all their clothes in the colors and styles that become them, and then they take from these clothes the garments that are just right for the occasion on which they are to be worn.

Spectator sports clothes is a term to cover a multitude to occasions. You may be walking in the country and correctly wear this type of dress, just as you may be viewing a horse race, dog race, a football game or tennis match. Casual clothes is another term that means much the same.

Two casual or spectator sports costumes are shown here. Left, is a green hand-knitted suit with fine lined wide check. With it is worn a simple felt hat with grosgrain banding and a gold wool bag is carried.

The smart tweed jacket, right, is in gray and yellow, worn over a green tweed skirt. The hat is green felt with leather trim.

Flannel Dresses and Suits Popular

Two-tone flannel dresses with jacket tops are among the most popular of spring costumes to date. Pin-striped flannel or pin-striped tweeds are absolutely tops.

The pin-striped flannel suit with slide-fastened jacket in navy, black, beige, luggage tan or slate is being chosen by discriminating women shoppers. The hair-line or pin stripes usually are in white. Broader stripes, not so definite in line, are also liked in rough looking tweeds.

Black worsted twill suits in navy or black are other favorites at this stage of the season.

Bolero costumes in wool rayon crepe are very well liked and usually are shown with printed blouses.

Paris Big Mecca For Dress Spies

PARIS, April 7—(CP).—Bootleggers would have to join a breadline if they depended upon alcohol for a living in France. So instead they specialize in running cannons, bombs, rifles and machine guns—or emotional dynamite in the form of French model gowns.

The street Faubourg Saint-Honore is a narrow and unpretentious one running parallel to the celebrated Champs-Elysees, but in the eyes of the world's best-dressed women, it's far more important. Here, behind, its discreet doors are the creations —gowns, hats, wraps and accessories— which are seen each season on the backs of cinema stars, society and royalty. To get her nose inside one of these doors and past the haughty barricade which guards the showrooms is the ambition of every normal woman visiting Paris.

One of the reasons for the exclusiveness has been revealed. The other day the police pounced upon an insignificant little shop basking in the reflected glory of its aristocratic neighbors to find more than 1,000 copies of the gowns created by some of Paris' most famous couturiers and more than 15,000 samples of special materials designed by their artists. Sketches, designs in color, models, all were intended for the "bootleg" trade. Though by no means the first, this was one of the biggest hauls made in a long time.

Although the credentials or invitations are insisted upon, it is impossible to keep out copyists who arrive as buyers, journalists, clients —anything. Representing all nationalities, these spies sometimes buy a dress and copy a dozen. Naturally their talents are devoted only to those which are successful. As soon as the presentation is over they go usually to a cafe where they sit down and reproduce as much of what they have seen as possible.

As a showing usually contains between 150 and 300 costumes it is impossible for a copyist to remember them all. Therefore they are specialists; some do only sleeves, others skirts; others trimmings, another hem or necklines. After they are finished they get together and assemble the dresses as cars are assembled in a factory and the copy is exact down to the last button.

The business is carried on ingeniously. Sketches, sometimes models, samples and materials are shown to customers (from Germany or America mostly) in a hotel room. These bootleggers have none of the expense of keeping up a smart establishment, models, artists, and they always pick winners. The original dressmakers must take the loss of the creations which fail to win favor along with other expenses.

People like Chanel, Worth, Jeanne Lanvin and Paquin have many of their own specially-designed materials. A customed is willing to pay the price to have an exclusive number. But to see it produced in thousands of yards of cheaper material selling at $1.19 a yard, proves that a copyist has won again and one of France's most important industries has received another blow.

More than 2,000,000 people in France depend upon the luxury trade. Designers, of whom 5,000 are unemployed, have been trying for years to have strict laws passed regulating it so severely that the bootlegging of Paris models will become too dangeraus a business to touch.

Canadians Star In London Arts

LONDON, April 7—(CP).—Young Canadians continue appearing in the foreground in fields of art, music and drama in London.

Leslie Holmes of Montreal was one of the solo artists in the St. Matthew "Passion" with the Oxford Bach Choir.

Ross Lumsden of Hamilton and Sarah Fischer of Toronto are singing in Noel Coward's new show opening in London. The artist entrusted with drawing - pencil sketches of the stars of the production for posters and advertisements was Grant Macdonald of Kingston, Ont., and Toronto.

Two other young Canadian artists have recently shown their work in exhibitions in London. Miss Alison Grant of Toronto, niece of the high commissioner and Mrs. Vincent Massey, is studying at the Royal College of Art and her water colors "Toronto Street," "Near Toronto" and "In the Don Valley" received favorable criticism in a Burlington Street gallery. Maxwell Bates of Winnipeg also favorably impressed critics with a one-man show of modern painting.

Presents Value Of Art Courses

MONTREAL, April 7. (CP).—Art is still struggling for proper recognition in the public and high schools of Quebec province, in spite of its importance, Dr. C. F. Martin, president of the Montreal Art Association, wrote in a letter to the Protestant Education Survey Committee.

No one who had worked at the problems of education from Plato down had ever regarded art as a fad or frill. Dr. Martin added that the value of art teaching was recognized elsewhere in Canada, Queen's and Toronto Universities having strong art appreciation classes.

The letter suggested a thorough investigation into the possibilities of extending to schools the services of the Art Association.

Mrs. Scott at 83 Keeps Up Battle

MONTREAL, April 7. (CP).—Mrs. John Scott, Quebec's venerable feminist worker, celebrated her 83rd birthday with a renewed declaration of war for women's suffrage in provincial elections.

She was "not the least broken-hearted" about the defeat of the bill in the Quebec legislature. On the other hand she felt "like putting a little more fight" into the effort to gain the provincial vote for women of Quebec. ("I am not going to die until I put a ballot into the box in a provincial election," she told a reporter. Later she amended this in saying: "If I never vote, I'll die happy thinking that someone who comes after me will vote."

Mrs. Scott recalled that Wilberforce did not live to see slavery abolished, the act being passed a month after his death. Lord Shaftesbury's long struggle against child labor was cited by Mrs. Scott as another example of the continued effort required for reform.

With certain notable exceptions, the world is growing more humane, Mrs. Scott believes, and abuses which were regarded complacently less than 100 years ago would be considered monstrous today.

A jolly party was enjoyed at the Y.W.C.A. Wednesday evening when the members of the Girls' Work Board entertained the Girls' Council with their president, Miss Marilyn Munroe.

An enjoyable evening of games, arranged by Mrs. A. Huffman, was followed by refreshments served from an attractively arranged table with Mrs. J. A. McKone and Mrs. L. J. Pettit, president of the Girls' Work Board, pouring tea. The table was bright with pink and white spring flowers in a silver bowl and pink candles in tall silver holders. Arrangements for the refreshments were in charge of Miss Ruth Barnes and Miss Isobel Weddell, who assisted with other members in serving.

It was planned during the evening to hold a large tea on May 7, under the auspices of both girls' organizations.

Hostess Tea
Popular Event Wednesday.

An attractive Hostess Tea for which Mrs. J. L. Gillespie lent her home, 499 Homewood avenue, was a largely attended affair Wednesday afternoon, and was held under the auspices of St. Andrew's, Women's Association with Mrs. A. C. Gray and her Group in charge.

Quantities of shaded pink and yellow snapdragons, daffodils and tulips were artistically placed about the charming living room, and in the dining room the tea table with its pretty cloth, was arranged with care and beauty. As a centrepiece, a heavy silver bowl held more of the lovely flowers and pastel pink candles glowed in tall silver candlesticks and were reflected in silver tea services.

Waite assisted in ushering the ladies to the dining room, where tea was poured by Mrs. J. R. Marshall and Mrs. J. Robertson. Convenors for the tea room were Mrs. G. H. Roper and Mrs. V. Hamilton, who assisted in serving with Mrs. G. Greer and Miss E. Richardson.

Tripp-Ford.

A very lovely spring wedding was solemnized in All Saints' Church at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when Edna May Ford, daughter of Mrs. H. G. Markwick of Bethune street and the late James Ford, became the bride of Harvey Hamilton Tripp, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tripp of Hastings. The Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson performed the ceremony.

T. H. Hooper gave the bride in marriage. She was charming in a graceful gown of ivory satin, with small hat of matching taffeta made in halo effect, and finished with a short veil, and her flowers were a bouquet of Premier roses.

Attending her sister as bridesmaid, Miss Alice Ford wore a becoming frock of pink taffeta, with white taffeta hat, and carried an arm bouquet of deep pink carnations. Ray Tripp, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. W. A. Logan, the organist, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. J. Morley sang, "Because."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, where Mrs. Markwick received with the bridal party wearing a dress of figured crepe, with hat of black Milan straw, and corsage bouquet of mixed sweet peas. Mrs. John Tripp, mother of the groom, was gowned in blue crepe, and wore a corsage of pink sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Tripp left later for Toronto and points west, the bride wearing for travelling a navy coat and dress with matching accessories. On their return the happy couple will reside in Hastings.

The wedding presents were very numerous, and included many very handsome and costly gifts from the bride's many friends in Peterborough.

We Noticed

Classic Topcoat

The classic wool topcoat this season is often i nthree-quarters length. It is worn to top a suit or a dress, and is one of those absolutely indispensable garments in every woman's wardrobe.

This new three-quarter length version of this coat for town or country is smartly styled on straight lines in rose and green tweed, with high front closing and four plain patch pockets.

The skirt over which it is worn here is of rose-colored wool in shetland weave, and a navy wool fishnet scarf knots casually at the neck.

Annual Meeting Women Liberals

There was a very large and enthusiastic attendance at the annual meeting of the Women's Liberal Association held last evening in the Duffus Board Room. Mrs. C. R. Bank, the Association's capable president was re-elected to office.

The business of the evening included the presenting of interesting and splendid reports of the year's work with Mrs R. Bugg bringing a fine report from the Local Council of Women.

Mrs. W. J. Young took the chair for the election of officers which resulted as follows: Honorary Presidents, Hon. Senator Cairine Wilson, Mrs. J. J. Duffus, Mrs. G. N. Gordon, Mrs. F. D. Kerr, Mrs. Deyell, Mrs. M. J. Perry; president, Mrs. C. R. Banks; 1st vice-president, Miss N. Brady; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. R. Bugg; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Byers; treasurer, Mrs. Webster; recording secretary, Mrs. S. Elliott; social convenor, Mrs. Farrance; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. J. Young; program committee, Mrs. R. Bugg; telephone committee, north ward, Mrs. O'Connor, west ward, Mrs. Whaley, south ward, Mrs. Farrance, east ward, Miss Brady.

Mrs. Banks returned to the chair after the election of officers, and spoke to the members, expressing thanks for their support and co-operation during the past year, and asking for continued enthusiasm in the future.

The Examiner's Needlework Pattern

WOMEN PICK MEN

LONDON—(CP).—Women are too prone to expect things to drop into their laps, said Mrs. E. M. Hubback, president of the National Council of Equal Citizenship, which was also told women would not vote for women at elections, but preferred men candidates.

WED HIS STEP-SISTER.

IZMIR, Turkey.—(CP).— After 20 years of happy married l ife an Albanian couple discovered they were step-brother and step-sister. Then they were divorced.

Australia expects to ship 120,000,000 bushels of wheat to other countries this year.

Jacket With Suit

The importance of full skirts below fitted waistlines in the new suits can hardly be over-emphasized. Pleated skirts are worn whatever the material.

The longer jacket is very new indeed. It is straight lined and almost tunic length, and provides the spring suit version of the new tubular silhouette.

An excellent illustration of this typeof suit is shown here in lightweight navy wool of novelty ribbed weave. Above a straight hanging skirt with knife-pleating in spaced panels, the long slender coat is styled on broad-shouldered lines with high double-breasted front closing and one slit pocket high at the left side. A widely pointed over-collar of pique adds a formal touch of white that is chic and flattering. A rough white straw beret is a nice complementary note, and the Easter parade corsage of clove pinks and blue cornflowers encircling a single deep red rose in prim nosegay arrangement is a new idea from Irene Hayes.

Selected Leather

The younger members of the family are always in the front ranks of the Easter paraders, and they are a delightful appearing crew in their spring finery—the hope of the future.

Even though it be late this year, Easter may be a bit chilly in northern climes. Therefore a fine lightweight wool wrap will be in keeping and comfortable.

Suits and wraps for these youthful paraders are made in the same soft wools, in the same colors and with the same nice tailoring that is used on adults' fine garments.

Princess lines are important for the younger set as well as for their elders, and a touch of contrasting trimming is very good too.

Wine colored stitched leather is the trimming used so interestingly on this double-breasted coat of fine wool in light beige—a popular shade for women of every age this season.

Smooth fitted lines with a slight back flare are smartly highlighted by the leather facing of this coat —on pockets and high rounded collar, with small buttons of the same color at the closing.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Longing is the empty hand reaching out to receive new gifts from heaven. It is the heart's cry which God hears with acceptance, and answers with more and more; it is, indeed, nothing less than the very life of God in the human soul."
—O. S. Marden.

Dear Friends:

How often we hear a person say "I wish I had this, or I wish I had that," yet there is large doubt in the very tones of their voice. They long for something but will not believe they can ever get it they want friends lovers fun, some change from the everyday things so that it will not be all work with no play.

Now, supposing I were able to give you all you wanted from life, all you had to do was to ask and I would give it to you. Alright. Supposing also, I had much wisdom, (and I would have to have that, else I would be giving you something which might hurt you because you did not know how to choose).

Alright again. But after awhile, I found that you cared not a thing for me, but only for what I was able to give you. You never treated me as a friend, you put no confidence in me, you left me out when you were having the good times which I had provided, you scoffed or were silent when my name cropped up in the conversation.

You neglected me for others less worthy of your friendship, you told others your troubles looking for sympathy and undetrstanding from them, but you left me feeling that I was not really your friend.

What do you think I would do about it? First I would be hurt, then I might make excuses for you, then I would feel a dull resentment and finally as I saw the lack of common gratitude and decency in you, I would say to myself, "wait until they ask anything from me again, see if I'll give it to them."

So when they came wheedling and asking for more favors, I would be blind and deaf I would not want to be bothered with them for I would know by their actions how little they thought of me, how, in fact, they seemed to despise me.

I would remember the contempt they had treated me with before, in spite of all I had done for them, and I would remember also how soon they forgot me, even while they were using the favors I had given them. The memory of how they had spurned my friendship and love, the way they just used me then dropped me carelessly as if I were not worth considering at all, would embitter me so much that I would not want them at all.

And isn't that just the way so many treat God? When trouble hits them, when they need something to make them happier, when they want a fuller happier life, how their prayers ascend to heaven, how urgent they are in their demands, how often they say "Lord, Lord."

And how soon they forget. Never a word of thanks, never treating Him as a Father, never putting any confidence in Him, ashamed to admit they even know Him, yet they wonder why their wishes and longings are not granted.

It is your own selfishness and ingratitude which stops things from coming to you. You would never take from any person what you expect God to take from you. If anyone dared to treat you like that, how very indignant you would be how mad at them, how scornful and you would boil over into thinking and saying, "after all I did for that one, to think they would act like that."

So, in the present day slang, if you can't take it, don't hand it out. If you want favors from God, be decent enough to reciprocate in love and appreciation. If you don't want anything to do with Him unless what He can give you, don't be surprised if you feel yourself cut off from Him entirely. Remember, "Not everyone who saith unto Me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of thy Father, who is in heaven. Think it over, do your part, and see what a difference it makes.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Left, black silk marquisette dinner dress; right, black silk chiffon dress with large floral print.

Here Are Smart Models for Wear

Plain silks and prints share the favor for pre-Easter and late spring wear. This is true both of daytime and evening clothes.

Lightweight to gossamer silks are sponsored by important dress houses for spring and summer. There is a silk organdie so fine that it is called "Irreelle", or unreal. Shantung, too, is reduced to a chiffon weight introducing wild silk to obtain a slight irregularity like tussah.

The classic flat crepe is with us again and some of these crepes have a faintly crisp appearance like faille, although in reality they are soft and pliable.

Crisp appearing fabrics are very much in evidence, and even the softest of materials have a fresher look than formerly. Illustrating this is the indispensable dinner dress shown worn by the seated model. It is in black marquisette and has long loose sleeves fitted at the wrist, and front fulness in the bodice.

Front fullness in the skirt is handled so as to give a long line and keep the hips slim. The slip is outlined with flesh colored and blue satin. The black fabric dinner hat has blue plumes and a snood.

Several monotone prints are designed for evening this season. These feature large, clear-cut conventionalized florals in solid treatments, usually done in white on dark or vice versa, with occasional combinations of strong pastels and dark colors such as the evening dress shown right.

Very small printed patterns for day and huge scattered prints for evening may be said to be the rule. This gown is in black silk chiffon with a distinguished large multicolored floral print. This type of dress is most impressive and becoming to the older woman. A triangular scarf to match is a lovely accessory for this dress.

Some of the new silk sheers have beautiful lacy floral patterns etched in black on white or water-color pastels.

Thinking Needed With Stage Play

NEW YORK, April 7—(CP). — Ethel Barrymore playing the lead in "Whitecaks" by Mazo de la Roche, the Canadian author, was interviewed by The Herald-Tribune:

"It was my brother Lionel who first spoke to me about the play as a possibility," she said. "It has had a very long run in London and he saw it there. Until then I hadn't read 'Jalna' or 'Whitecaks of Jalna' but I got both books and enjoyed them.

"I didn't pass any time preparing for the part before rehearsals started. I don't believe in that. Three weeks of rehearsals are enough, except perhaps for thinking beforehand. Thinking, thinking—that is what acting is all about. It is the only thing in acting.

"It was really in Montreal that I acted for the first time," Miss Barrymore recalled. "The play was 'The Rivals,' with grandmother (Mrs. Drew), as Mrs. Malaprop. I was Julia and my aunt, Mrs. Sidney Drew (Gladys Rankin) was Lydia Languish.

"I was never afraid of grandmother and neither were my brothers. I think the idea of her as a terrifying persons was all a myth. Oh, she was so good to us—so good.

"She never trained me in acting, except for one thing. She was always strick with us about the way we spoke. She was English, and couldn't bear slovenly enunciation.

"I was a tall, overgrown girl of 12 when I played with grandmother. I had been wearing my hair up since I was 11. I'll tell you how it happened. My mother had been ordered to California for her health. I went with her. We two were quite alone, and we hadn't been in California long when my mother died suddenly. There was no one to help me; I had to make all the arrangements, and I started east on the train that was bringing her home. That was when I put my hair up. I thought it would make me look like a more responsible person. I never took it down again."

Nurses' Library To Queen's Taste

LONDON, April 7—(CP).—Queen Mary's choice of books for presentation to a new nurses' home has aroused interest of book lovers. The gift includes:

"This Torch of Freedom" by Stanley Baldwin; "The Book of the Queen's Doll's House," "The Charm of Birds" by Lord Grey of Fallodon; "The Spirit of Ireland," "Some Flowers," "Stop and Go." "Penland Rivers," "Meadow and Alpine Flowers of Northern Italy," "Old London," "Deception, Mystery, Horror," "Sunset House," "Father Brown on Chesterton," "With you, Mr. Hilary," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," "The Spirit of the Hill," "Gino Watkins," and "Mystery Ships."

Style Whimsies

Grosgrain bindings are being used extensively on both coats and suits.

✧ ✧ ✧

Baum marten or kolinsky scarfs will drape many of the spring suits.

A New York store reports that black and white is tops in its better dress department.

Navy blouses are worn with suits of gray, beige, roseberry and cloud blue.

A pale pink felt hat bound with black ribbon with a pink and black bird in the centre front, reflects the trend toward the large silhouette for summer.

Hydrangea blue and cornflower blue are important light blues for whole frocks to be worn under the navy or black tuxedo style summer wool coats.

✧ ✧ ✧

Navy is not so popular as other colors for girls' coats and suits this season. The most important color is roseberry, then aqua and cloud blue, and beige.

Beautifully tailored play suits in white, soft pinks and blue, dove gray and beige are fast becoming street costumes. In Miami, some of the best-dressed women are wearing them on the streets in the early afternoon.

How Sally Ryan Worked to Fame

LONDON, April 7. — (CP) — Five years ago a tousle-headed but deadly in earnest school girl—then resident in Montreal—persuaded Herbert Miller, a sculptor of that city, to let her dabble with clay in his studio. This was Sally Ryan, daughter of Allan T. Ryan, New York financier. At 16 she exhibited at the Toronto Art Gallery.

Recently Sally Ryan, sculptor, aged 21, with one gesture amazed London and established herself as a true grand-daughter of the late art-loving millionaire, Thomas Fortune Ryan of New York. She bought an Epstein statue for a four-figure sum and lent it to be shown for the world to admire.

If the bust of the successful old American made by Rodin and now treasured in the Tate Gallery, London, could move, it would doubtless nod eneregtic approval. Thomas Fortune Ryan bought Rodin's collection of sculpture for the New York Metropolitan Museum at a time when that sculptor was frowned upon by the more conservative. His son's daughter has used a large sum from her inheritance from him to acquire the most discussed "Epstein" in the world today; "Madonna and Child."

What would perhaps please her connoisseur grandfather even more is that a bronze by Sally herself has also been accepted by the Tate for exhibition and "Martinique," her study of a creole woman, which has won honors both in the Royal Academy and in the Paris Salon, will be the third item in the great gallery provided by the Ryan family for the admiration of the general public.

After winning Paris and Royal Academy honors the young artist was a frequent visitor at Epstein's studio, where neglected in a corner his more-than-life size "Madonna and Child" drew her admiration. Epstein had shown it at his show in 1927 and 1933 but since it has been set to one side.

"I wanted more people to see and admire this work considered one of Epstein's best" is what Sally Ryan says is "the real reason I bought it." She adds: "There is no time limit on my loan to the Tate."

Her home is a quiet flat high up in a modern building in the centre of Belgravia.

NEW REFLECTORS ILLUMINATE ROAD FROM CAR LIGHTS

DETROIT, April 7. — (CP). — Highway safety and automobile engineers will gather here to-night for the opening of what is said to be the first stretch of United States' highway ever to be illuminated by indirect lighting. The visitors, who will make a trial run over the experimental road, will be the guests of Murray D. Van Wagoner, State Highway Commissioner.

Set at 100-foot intervals along the 70-mile stretch, between Detroit and Lansing, new reflector buttons, reported to be 10 times as powerful as any now in use, have been installed. The buttons will reflect the light from passing automobiles and diffuse it over the highway for at least one mile in advance of the point of origin, according to Commissioner Van Wagoner.

The reflectors are 1½ inches in diameter. Three of these buttons will be set in a single steel standard anchored in the ground eight feet from the pavement.

STOCK QUARANTINED

LONDON, April 7.—(AP). — To meet the threat of an outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease the Ministry of Agriculture to-day ordered a ban on movement of livestock.

The order affected nearly 25,000,000 animals and was issued after nine cases were verified.

An outbreak last year was checked with slaughter of thousands of cattle, sheep and pigs for which the government paid £400,000 ($2,000,000) compensation.

100-MILE FLIGHT SEEN FOR ROCKET

PASADENA, California, April 7 —(AP).—Frank J. Malina and three young aeronautical student-scientists are completing equipment here to test stratosphere rocket motors.

"Data from these tests, together with that obtained in experiments by Dr. R. H. Goddard, E. Sanger and the American Rocket Society, will be used as the basis for developing a motor it is hoped will take a sounding rocket nearly 100 miles above the earth's surface," Malina said to-day.

He sees the rocket as a possible new scientific instrument for the weather forecaster, and for obtaining cosmic radiation records and information for astronomers. The greatest height to which scientific instruments have been carried by sounding balloons is around 110,000 feet, less than 20 miles.

The motor in the test setup, at the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, California Institute of Technology, is a combustion chamber in which a mixturp of gaseous oxygen and ethylene burns at 5,000 degrees Fahrenheit, a temperature about half of the sun.

The flaming gas comes out of the exhaust nozzle at terrific velocities, Malina said, a speed of 11,000 feet a second having been reported by one European experimenter. A "step rocket," one with three motors and propellant units, two of which would be released in flight, would reach a possible velocity of 11,000 miles an hour.

Rome-Berlin Axis Extends To Africa

Another manifestation of Italo-German friendliness as incorporated in the Rome-Berlin axis was the recent visit to Italy's African possession by German Labor Minister Ley. The Nazi minister is shown here (saluting) as he reviewed the squadron of native troops that acted as guard of honor on his arrival in Tripoli. The bearded man is Marshal Italo Balbo, governor of Libya.

RUSSIANS ABOUT TO GRAB ISLANDS

TOKYO, April 7—(AP).—Authoritative quarters here and in Manchoukuo to-day expressed belief Soviet Russia not only is lending military aid to China but also is preparing for an effort to recapture disputed islands in th Amur river seized by Japanese forces last June.

Japanese despatches from Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, connected the vigorous protest delivered at Moscow Monday against alleged Soviet help for China with fears of new trouble on the Amur boundary between Siberia and Manchoukuo, Japan's protectorate.

Informed circles here interpreted the protest, which Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff rejected, as an indirect warning against any moves on the frontier. Here and in Hsinking anxiety was expressed lest Russia take advantage of the spring thaw, now begining, and the Japanese army's pre-occupation with the war in China, and try to resume possession of the Armo islands, held by Manchoukuo since the armed clase of last June 30.

(Russia's Far Eastern borders are guarded by a highly mechanized army estimated at from 300,000 to 400,000 men. Japan is believed to have concentrated more than 100,000 of her best troops in Northern Manchoukuo, with at least as many more in the rest of Manchoukuo and Korea.)

MOHAWK CHIEF IMPROVES

R. R. Hall, K.C. Dies After An Illness Of About Four Weeks

Former Member of Parliament for Peterborough And Was One of the City's Outstanding Lawyers

R. R. Hall, K.C., died about three o'clock this morning at Nicholls Hospital after an illness of pneumonia developing out of an acute attack of influenza on March 14. On that day Mr. Hall collapsed in his office and was removed to the hospital. For a time it was thought that he might recover from the influenza with which he had been so suddenly stricken, and although he had rallied in periods of promising improvement his illness became more pronounced as pneumonia, and hope was abandoned by his friends during the last few days.

Robert Richard Hall was born in the township of Fenelon, near Cambray, in Victoria County, December 10, 1865, son of William Hall and his wife, Alice Davidson Hall. His father was born in the town of Peterborough about 1835, and later lived in Smith township as a farmer, and finally moved to Fenelon township where he resided until his death at an advanced age. Mr. Hall's mother, Alice Davidson, was born in Down County, Ireland, and was related on her side to some of the older families in this city.

Attended Collegiate Here

Mr. Hall was educated in the public school at Cambray, and then came to Peterborough to attend the Collegiate Institute. His life long love of literature manifested itself in his boyhood when walking along a country road he used to learn and commit to his remarkably retentive memory poems he never forgot. Following his collegiate days in this city he was an undergraduate in law at the University of Toronto, although he did not continue that phase of his education to the end of obtaining a degree in Arts. Occasionally in his recollections of that period of his life he would express regret that he had not completed the course he began, but on the other hand he realized that his subsequent application to his profession and his voluminous reading had more than made up for any of the gains the final years at college might have brought to him.

Used First Typewriter.

As a student of law Mr. Hall was articled to John A. Baron, K.C., of Lindsay, who was subsequently County Judge of Perth; and incidentally Mr. Hall used the first typewriter purchased in Lindsay in those days when mechanical inventions were just beginning to assume the efficiency that has since wrought such changes in business methods and the reducing of labor in every day work.

Completing what was virtually an apprenticeship in those days, Mr. Hall was called to the Bar of Ontario in 1886, and coming to Peterborough formed a partnership with W. A. Stratton, brother of A. H. Stratton. Their office was on the second floor at the corner of Simcoe and George Streets, where Payne's drug store is now located. Following the death of Mr. Stratton in 1904, Mr. Hall became associated with S. T. Medd and Walter S. Davidson, in the law firm of Hall, Medd & Davidson. This partnership continued until Mr. Davidson went to Calgary where he was later appointed Police Magistrate, and another terminating factor was the enlistment of Mr. Medd for service overseas in 1915. For the next eighteen years Mr. Hall practised under his own name until 1933, when

BRITAIN DEMANDS MEXICANS RETURN SEIZED OIL FIRM

LONDON, April 8—(CP Cable)—The British government today called upon Mexico to restore to the Mexican Eagle Company, a British-owned concern, its expropriated oil wells. Oil properties expropriated by the Mexican government are valued at approximately £80,000,000 ($397,000,000).

"Inherently unjustified" is the British government's view of the expropriation. The British minister at Mexico City, Owen O'Malley, has been instructed to explain that His Majesty's government had hoped the Mexican government "would themselves have recognized the injustice of their action and would have taken steps on their own initiative to adopt the only method which would really relieve the situation by restoring the properties to the company, which is ready to discuss the labor question on an equitable basis.

(The Eagle Company owned by Royal Dutch Shell, was largest of the 17 British United States and Dutch companies taken over by President Lazaro Cardenas, March 18.

("Informed persons" told the Associated Press that Great Britain had under consideration possible steps to enforce its stand but declined further comment. They said it was "presumed" Mexico now would do something about the situation.

200 Taxi Strikers Go Back To Work

TORONTO, April 8.—(CP).—One-third of more than 600 striking taxi-cab drivers in Toronto returned to work to-day, providing service in a limited way for travellers who found the city swept by a blizzard.

Drivers for 25 small taxi companies started cabs moving after their employees signed agreements with the Toronto Taxi Drivers' Association. Drivers for all the larger companies continue on strike. The drivers were called out yesterday.

Less than 100 independent taxis were operating last night. But union headquarters was visited today by a succession of small owners who agreed to the drivers' terms: $12.50 weekly minimum wage and 10 per cent of fares, 10 hour day and six-day week.

Military Tribute

The body of Harvey Staunton, who was killed when he tumbled from a moving freight train, was borne to little Lake Lake Cemetery on Thursday with full military honors. Scores of his fellow veterans of the Great War joined in paying tribute to his memory at one of the most widely attended funerals seen in this city in many months. As the hearse bearing his body moved through the gates into the cemetery it passed between a guard of honor from the Prince of Wales Rangers, standing with guns reversed and heads bowed, TOP. A firing squad fired three volleys, BOTTOM following a brief graveside service conducted by Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson of St. John's Anglican Church.

Oshawa Strike Unit Still Has 305 Drawing Salaries

Tories Demand "Hepburn's Hussars" Be Disbanded; Conant to Investigate Charges of Impersonation

TORONTO, April 8 (CP) — Attorney-General Conant informed the Ontario Legislature today total cost to March 31 of the reserve provincial police force, mobilized last spring during the Oshawa automobile workers strike, was $119,000. Total number on reserve last June was 376 but the number has dropped to 305.

Questioned by Conservatives who called the force "The Hepburn Hussars" in the general election last fall, Mr. Conant said the government was paying the men $100 a year and this year's estimates provided a vote of $30,500 for the force.

The question was raised by Col. T. A. Kidd (Con., Kingston) who pressed the minister repeatedly for details of the force, trained in the basement of the legislative buildings by Col. Fraser Hunter (Lib., Toronto St. Patrick).

The Kingston member's reference at one time to a "Gilbert and Sullivan Army" brought an angry retort from Col. Hunter who accused Col. Kidd of making political speeches. During the election, said Col. Hunter, he lost a lot of votes because roorbachs had been circulated in his riding, some of them written by Denton Massey, Toronto federal Conservative member.

These statements had pictured him "as a Bengal Lancer marching at the head of thousands of police to shoot down men in Oshawa." There were more Conservatives than Liberals in the ranks and the force had been described as a splendid band of men.

Required Till Times Quieten.

Provincial Secretary Nixon told the House" as long as times are disturbed," the force would be retained.

"All they were put there for was election purposes," interjected George S. Henry, former Conservative Premiper.

"Don't be absurd," Mr. Nixon returned.

George H. Challies (Con., Grenville-Dundas) urged disbanding of the force and paying the men their $100. Dominion and Provincial police could have taken care of any trouble at Oshawa.

"That's what you think," said Mr. Nixon.

"Why not give them their $100 and disband them?" Mr. Challies pressed.

"Why not give it to the C.I.O. (Committee for Industrial Organization which was involved in the Oshawa strike) instead?" asked Col. Hunter.

"The Dominion police can take care of the C.I.O. or any other organization in this Anglo-Saxon province," Mr. Challies continued.

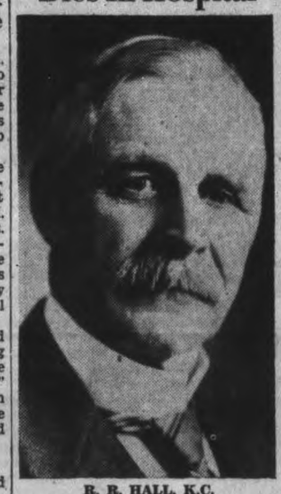
"Why didn't they do it at Oshawa?" Col. Hunter demanded.

Probe Impersonations

Study of Ontario's electoral laws to see if anything needs to be done to deal with cases of impersonation was promised by Attorney-General Conant. He assured Conservative Leader Leopold Macaulay if any legislation was necessary it would be submitted to the House next session.

Raising the question during consideration of estimates of the Attorney-General's Department, Mr. Macaulay said he had in his file documents "purporting to show that impersonation is increasing in this province, and I believe it is."

Dies In Hospital



R. R. HALL, K.C.
Peterborough lawyer and former member of parliament, who died this Friday morning after a lengthy illness in Nicholls Hospital.

GRIER DEATH GUN HELD NEAR HEAD

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., April 8—(CP)—Dr. E. R. Frankish testified today at Vernon Spencer's murder trial that in his opinion the gun that killed Helen Grier last October 28 was held "close to" the head of the 28-year-old Pontiac, Mich., stenographer.

Spencer, former professional ball player with New York Giants and Toronto Maple Leafs, is charged with shooting Miss Grier to death in a hunting lodge they occupied 38 miles north of the Sault.

Dr. Frankish, Ontario medico-legal expert, told of making tests along the bullet track, from the right temple to the left side of the skull, and finding grains of unburned powder and partly-burned powder. He did not believe impact of the bullet would have caused all fractures in the skull. Some he believed were caused by explosion of gas forced into the cranial cavity.

Shown the rifle found beside Miss Grier's body on a floor of the hunting lodge Dr. Frankish told Crown Prosecutor J. L. O'Flynn that if some person held the gun by the muzzle and the upper part of the stock the safety lug on the rifle could make a wound similar to the one found on the back of the dead girl's skull.

DRIVE RENEWED FOR A BRIDGE OVER CHEMONG

Community Hall Crowded As Appeal Is Launched

ENNISMORE, April 8.—(By Staff Reporter).—Spurred to renewed action by the temporary cessation of traffic over the floating bridge, extensive although probably only superficially damaged by recent ice floes, Ennismore ratepayers, supported by a group of neighbors from Bridgenorth, began last night another campaign for a permanent bridge over Chemong Lake.

The Community Hall was crowded with men and women unanimous in their appeal for governmental consideration of their reasserted claim for direct communication with Peterborough by way of the established route through Bridgenorth by the construction of a bridge that would remove once and for all the danger of crossing the ice during the winter and the delays and inconvenience of being forced around the west end of the lake during recurring periods when the old bridge is closed to traffic.

Reeve James Gifford presided at the meeting which had been called on comparatively short notice. He thanked the ratepayers for their expression of support manifested by their large attendance, and urged them to put out of their minds the idea suggested from other quarters that a permanent bridge over Chemong Lake was an impracticable project.

A resolution by William McClelland, seconded by George Wilson, affirmed the unanimous desire of the ratepayers for a permanent bridge, and instructed Reeve Gifford and others who might be associated with him on behalf of the municipality and other sections of the affected district to proceed with plans that were subsequently outlined including a series of meetings with the intention of striking once more while the necessity was apparent.

Another resolution by Maurice O'Connor, seconded by Edward O'Donoghue, appointed Leo Scol-

LOYALISTS' PLOT TO DROWN REBELS

HENDAYE, France, April 8 (AP).—A second contingent of General Franco's insurgents smashed their way to within sight of Spain's east coast today as widespread combat surged along all the Catalan front.

Galicians fought their way to control of lofty Mount Turmell, less than 18 miles downhill to Vinaroz on the Mediterranean.

This column on the far southern Catalan front threatened a flank of embattled Government divisions held at bay for three days by the insurgent force attempting to take Tortosa, 38 miles by road to the north.

Forty miles north of Lerida, General Emilio Solchaga's army struck directly into Catalonia and took Tremp, occupying the important power centre and cutting two high tension lines which supplied thousands of volts of electric current to Barcelona's vital war industries.

Insurgent officers at Irun said the swift capture of the 90-foot high, 660-foot long dam at Tremp scotched Government plans to send a huge flood of 7,000,000,000 cubic feet of water roaring down the Segre and Ebro River valleys.

Lake Six Miles Long.

The officers said their troops found huge quantities of dynamite to be used in blasting the dam to release a lake of water approximately six miles long and two miles wide.

Such a flood, they added, would have swept the entire length of the Ebro and Segre River valleys, washing away the temporary bridges by which Franco's troops have maintained communications. The water also would have flooded parts of Balaguer, Lerida, Tortosa and many villages, the officers said.

The steady progress of the insurgent forces sent new bands of fear-stricken Spaniards fleeing northward toward the French border. Additional frontier guards from Pau and Montalban took positions on the French side after reports said 5,000 homeless were preparing to enter through the Pyrnees Pass Val D'Aran.

Drunk Drivers' Cars To Be Impounded

First Conviction Means Loss of Machine 3 Months; Same Applies on 2nd Failure to Return to Accident

TORONTO, April 8—Motor vehicles will be impounded for three months automatically under first convictions of drunk driving, laid under the Criminal Code, or of driving after a permit is suspended or revoked, under amendments to the Highway Traffic Act, passed by the Committee of the Whole House at Queen's Park yesterday.

The amendments also viewed in sterner light the offense of failing to return to the scene of an accident and ruled that in event of a second conviction the motor vehicle shall be impounded. Previously, the impounding penalty applied only to the third offense.

Legislation applying to the impounding of cars was held over after the House, Wednesday, held that the bill in original form should have excepted automobiles which were driven by employees, and at the time of the offense beyond the control of the owner.

A Protection Clause

Protection in these particular cases is afforded in a clause which held that in event of conviction for the offenses named, the motor vehicle shall be seized "provided such motor vehicle is registered in the name of such person or husband, wife, parent or dependent child of such person."

William Duckworth (Cons., Dovercourt), emphasized strongly that the new act should make compulsory the carrying of a light or a reflector by persons walking on highways at night. Balked from making an amendment, the member declared that he would introduce such legislation at the next session.

Stink Bomb Closes Law Classes

Montreal, April 8 (CP)

UNIVERSITY of Montreal authorities announced today afternoon classes in the law school would be indefinitely suspended following halting of an afternoon lecture by explosion of a stench bomb.

Law students have demonstrated in classrooms in recent weeks in a campaign to force retirement of certain law school professors they consider too old for efficient teaching.

The stench bomb emptied the classroom of one of the elderly faculty members yesterday, but law students maintained today they had nothing to do with the incident.

Free Actinolite Burial Plots Stir Probe In Baby's Death

Unsupervised Cemetery Reveals Graves Dug At Will, Many Barely Marked

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 8.—According to instructions received from the Attorney-General's Department, the body of John Henry Deline, 18-day-old son of Mr. Henry Deline and the late Mrs. Deline, who died on February 12 at Actinolite, will be disinterred from the cemetery at that place. An inquest will be held by Dr. M. G. Dales, M.O.H. The youngster, who was born in Belleville General Hospital, died at the home of the parents living 18 days. The mother, after having returned from Belleville Hospital, took seriously ill and was taken back to that institution where she passed away on March 23.

The child was buried by the father in Actinolite Cemetery. A home-made roughly-constructed box was used, no undertaken was contacted, nor any burial service held. Facts in the case were established only after no death certificate was issued.

On the death of the child, the father with an older son, built a rough coffin, placed the body of the infant inside and interred the remains in a corner of the cemetery.

This case is one of the strangest on record in the locality and apparently the father thought he was

Law Trails Indian Family Year To Unravel Murder Tale

Suspect Mentality of Lad 14 Accused Of Shooting Brother In Quebec Wilds

NORANDA, Que., April 8 (CP)—Fourteen-year-old Dave Tabiscon, big for his age and subject to fits of passion, will be taken to Ville-Marie from Noranda this week for mental examination before facing a charge of murdering his brother.

The powerful, dark-haired Indian boy, who wandered for a year through Quebec wilds with his family, guarding closely the secret of the brother's death, was brought here yesterday by airplane. His arrest by flying police ended a search instigated by rumors of the shooting of Xavier Tabiscon early in 1937 on the banks of the Dumoine River, boundary between Pontiac and Temiskaming counties.

Wrapped in the story the officers unfolded as they questioned the nomad family were bits of Indian mysticism and fear of punishment. Swarthy Dave always had been strange, his mother said, and "had to be put to bed sometimes when the moon was full." After the killing the family—there are another brother and sister—went through a ritual to remove the stigma of the crime. The shotgun which ripped a

BLUM THWARTED QUITS IN DISGUST

PARIS, April 8.—(AP).—Premier Leon Blum formally announced the resignation of his government tonight after the Senate had voted down his demand for dictatorial power over French finance.

Immediately after the Senate, by a vote of 223 to 49, had shown its disdain fo this "last call," the Premier dashed out of the Luxembourg Palace, the Senate building, through the ranks of steel-helmeted mobile guards to the Chamber of Deputies.

There he announced his resignation to the Deputies of his own Socialist party, who had assembled to hear his decision.

He said he was going to the Elysee Palace to tell President Albert Lebrun he was through.

Historic House, Laura Secord's Goal In 1812, Burns, a $25,000 Loss

St. Catharines, Ont., April 8 (CP)

A HISTORIC LANDMARK of the Niagara Peninsula was destroyed today when the two storey stone house to which Laura Secord delivered her warning in the War of 1812, was razed by fire.

The house was occupied by Alfred Griffiths and two sisters. The trio escaped. The fire was believed started by a spark from a chimney.

Loss was estimated at about $25,000 including antiques and valuable walnut panel.

Laura Secord made her historic journey from Queenston to the house at Beaverdam, near Thorold, to warn the British soldiers under Lieut. Fitzgibbon of an impending attack on Beaver Dams by the Americans under command of Col. Boerstler. As a result the Americans were forced to surrender.

Baxter as Successor to R. B. Bennett Is News to London Newsman

London, April 8 (CP-Havas)

THE "Londoner's Fairy" in the Evening Standard today said Beverly Baxter, Toronto-born member of the parliament of Westminster, is being mentioned as a possible successor to R. B. Bennett as Canadian Conservative leader.

But Mr. Baxter told The Canadian Press: "I have heard nothing about it. It would be a remarkable development in imperial politics if a member of one empire parliament were to be translated to party leadership in another."

Mr. Baxter, who is 47 and began life as a music shop salesman in Toronto, remained in England after being demobilized as an officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He became associated with the Canadian-born publisher, Lord Beaverbrook, and in 1929 was made editor-in-chief of his main paper, The Daily Express. He was elected to parliament in 1935.

500 Drivers Go Out Demanding Better Hours, Pay

Week of Negotiating With Officials Proves Vain; Men Ask $17 Minimum or $12.50 With 10% on Loads

TORONTO, April 8—Toronto's theatre-going and dance-bound public last night trailed on street cars in evening clothes, as Toronto taxi-drivers went on strike for better wages and hours.

With 500 men out, determined, according to their union officials, not to "weaken" until they gain their demands of either a $17 per week minimum wages or $12.50 per week plus 10 per cent of fares, R. S. Barrett, President of the Toronto Zone Livery Association, to which most of the large operators belong, declared last night that the owners would meet today to discuss the situation "but not with the view of conciliating the drivers."

The drivers went out on strike at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon after a week of unsuccessful negotiation with their employers and a conference with the Industry and Labor Board yesterday afternoon.

The blockade of the drivers was one of the sternest efforts ever made by them in the city's history. It was called, according to union officials, by 620 of the 720 licensed drivers in the city. It tied up all the large cab stands in the city as well as smaller operators. Drivers declared at midnight last night they were determined to continue until they gained their demands.

Eighteen Owners Sign

Eighteen owners operating altogether eight ycars signed agreements with the union after the strike went into effect. These cars, in addition to those of 117 inedpendent owners who drivc their own cars and are members of the union, were believed to be the only taxis operating in Toronto streets last night.

"No, none of the big companies attempted to operate last night," said Mr. Barrett. "We are meeting today to discuss the situation, but not with any view to conciliating the drivers."

POWER BILL GETS SPEEDY PASSAGE FOR PROROGATION

TORONTO, April 8 (C.P.). — The stretch-drive began in the Ontario Legislature to-day. Memebrs sought at a morning session to pass estimates for expenditure by three departments and pave the way for prorogation in the afternoon.

The order paper has been cleared of Bills, other departments' proposed expenditure in the 1938-39 fiscal year has been scrutinized, and only the Attorney-General's, Education, and Agriculture estimates must be reviewed. With that completed, Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews will come to Queen's Park in mid-afternoon for the prorogation ceremony.

Most of the 29 Bills passed went through quickly yesterday and the House turned to estimates. It was delayed, however, in going into Committee of Supply by a Conservative amendment voicing regret the Government placed no plan for unemployment insurance before the House. The amendment, moved by W. A. Baird (Con. Toronto High Park) was defeated 57-22.

Some observers had predicted a division on third reading of the Bill validating new contracts with Quebec power companies. It went through without comment, however, along with nearly all the other Bills. The Bill, which becomes law when assented to by the Lieutenant-Governor, validates contracts with the Gatineau, Beauharnois, and Maclaren-Quebec power companies.

Mr. Baird declared the Government's neglect to bring in an unemployment insurance scheme was a violation of Premier Hepburn's pre-election promise last fall. Conservative Leader Leopold Macaulay said the House should not adjourn "until we make up our minds what we are going to do about it."

Plans Sidetracked.

Labor Minister MacBride argued the first advice he received on taking office was to plan for operation of an unemployment insurance scheme. The situation was changed, however, by the Dominion Government's proposal for national unemployment insurance. Premier Hepburn contended the Ottawa proposal sidetracked Ontario's scheme.

Chief discussion in passage of the estimates concerned those of the Lands and Forests Department. William Finlayson (Con., Simcoe East) drew from Forestry Minister Heenan a statement cutting rights had been granted private timber operators in the Timagami forest reserve. Mr. Finlayson urged steps

$6,000 FIRE HITS BOYS' CAMP HALL AT BOWMANVILLE

BOWMANVILLE, April 8.—Fire of an undetermined origin Thursday afternoon destroyed the large frame dining-hall at the Ontario Training School for Boys' camp site on the lakeshore near here. Damage is estimated at more than $6,000.

The building, approximately 75 feet by 150 feet, was built in 1931 and has been used each year during the summer months as a dining-pavilion and kitchen for nearly 200 boys.

During the winter a caretaker, Mr. Ellis, has been in charge of the entire site consisting of several acres of ground and ten buildings. The burned hall contained blankets and other equipment of considerable value. The flames were first noticed at the west end of the structure by Sam and Alfred Allin, farm boys, working near-by. They rushed to the scene, but were unable to save anything because of the intense heat. Within a few minutes the entire building was a mass of fire.

Employees at the Goodyear plant in town could see the blaze more than two miles away and turned in the alarm, but when firemen arrived the blaze was too far advanced for them to save the building. Their efforts were concentrated in saving near-by sheds.

A. R. Virgin, superintendent of the school, could not be reached last evening. The camp was to have been opened the first week in July, but no statement was available as to whether the dining hall would be rebuilt. It is the property of the Province.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO DRUNK DRIVING

Herbert Magee of Bobcaygeon, pleaded not guilty before Magistrate Langley in police court this morning to a charge of having been drunk in charge of a car on Charlotte street Thursday night and at the request of his counsel, W. B. Gordon, was remanded until Wednesday next. Bail was fixed in two sureties of $750.

William Grieves and Sam McCallum who were with Magee when the three were arrested by Provincial Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton and Constable John Rogers, both pleaded guilty to being drunk.

"This is a serious matter being drunk in motor cars," remarked Magistrate Langley when he heard the circumstances. A fine of $15 with costs of $4.50 was imposed in each case.

The two police officers were off duty when their attention was attracted by the manner in which Magee's car was being driven and the arrest followed.

R. R. HALL DIES

he took into partnership his nephew, Thomas J. Carley.

Outstanding Case Lawyer.

During his practice of fifty years Mr. Hall attained a high standing among the barristers of Ontario. Older residents recall that he was solicitor for certain interests holding large timber investments in British Columbia, and in that engagement he spent a great deal of time between Ottawa and British Columbia. Among the members of his profession he was regarded as an outstanding case lawyer, which meant that his natural sense of industry and application equipped him with a thoroughness that was revealed in his preparation of cases he undertook. The Bench never attracted him, not because he did not recognize the dignity and honor attaching to it, but because he preferred the freedom of his profession and the unfailing interest of its variety of legal problems.

A Loyal Liberal.

For fifty years Mr. Hall, or at least until the last decade of that half century, Mr. Hall was one of the leaders of the Liberal Party in West Peterborough. He won his greatest success in the political field in the general elections of 1904 when he defeated the Conservative member of Parliament, the late James Kendry. Even his opponents freely acknowledged that R. R. Hall was one of the most successful representatives the old riding ever had in the Dominion House.

He was interested in the development of the extensive system of reservoir dams that now comprise and redeem the Trent Canal waterways. That project of water control and conservation received his staunch support, and he was largely responsible for the expansion and improvement of the series of dams that have replaced the old wooden structures of lumbering days. Mr. Hall also obtained for Peterborough the armouries that replaced the old drill shed in Central Park. It is recalled that Sir Frederick Borden, then Minister of Militia, came to the city to lay the corner-stone of the armouries.

In the general elections of 1908, Mr. Hall declined re-nomination, retiring in favor of the late J. R. Stratton, who was elected, defeating J. H. Burnham by about 300 majority. Members of the party were convinced that in spite of their political associations there was a strong feeling of rivalry between the two Liberal leaders, and that Mr. Hall stepped out of the federal arena to give J. R. Stratton an opportunity to round out his long political career in the Ontario Legislature by winning the Peterborough seat in the House of Commons.

Mr. Hall accepted the Liberal nomination for the Legislature in 1911 but was defeated by E. A. Peck, K.C., and then came the war-time general elections for the federal house in 1917, when the Union Government was elected to "win the war."

Candidate in 1917

During the four years he spent at Ottawa as a member of Parliament, Mr. Hall had completely surrendered his political loyalty to the charm and sincerity and intellectualism of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and when the "Old Chief" was being deserted by associates of the rank and file of the party, cabinet ministers and remote supporters along far concession roads, R. R. Hall offered himself as the Liberal candidate in West Peterborough, although he knew it was a forlorn and hopeless cause.

No one ever doubted the courage of R. R. Hall, and seldom was it so tried as on that Saturday, November 10 in 1917, when Liberals tried to divert the convention into a political partnership with the Conservatives. Mr. Hall was proposed by the late Andrew McFarlane, and he was splendidly supported by his old fellow campaigner, John J. Hartley, for years president of the Liberal Association, but scores of the leading captains and lieutenants went over to the Union cause, and Mr. Hall fought out the campaign almost single-handed. After the nomination when he stood alone he said to an examiner reporter with all the spirit of a Covenanter: "If Sir Wilfrid has no other candidate in this province, he's going to have one in West Peterborough," and the telegram of appreciation he received from the leader he so highly esteemed was probably compensation enough to him for the effort he made against the Union idea, and what he strongly suspected as the ulterior motives of some of the men beyond Peterborough who were promoting it.

The Liberal Party regained its place in the confidence of the people, and Mr. Hall frequently responded to the campaign mustering of speakers. J. H. Burnham paid him a tribute to-day in saying that Mr. Hall held no rancor or enmity in defeat. "We didn't agree in many things, but I can say of him that there was nothing mean or underhand in his political campaigning." That same spirit quickly forgot the desertion of his old associates, but there were some incidents that occurred then that remained at least a salty memory. So determined was Mr. Hall to stand by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1917 that he virtually assumed the nomination. It was moved by Mr. McFarlane, but there was no record of it being seconded at the time. However, the subsequent roll of Liberals who signed his nomination papers still discloses those Peterborough men who shared "Bob" Hall's admiration for and confidence for the "Old Chief."

Mr. Hall's fine intellectual gifts found their highest satisfaction in poetry and he could recite long passages from Shakespeare, Milton, Goethe, Browning, Longfellow, and many other of the English authors. Lofty thought appealed to him so strongly that he knew many of the Psalms by heart, and his mind was also stored with striking quotations from speeches by Gladstone, Blake, Laurier, and other statesmen. His literary culture was one of the notable phases of his character.

Mr. Hall had various industrial interests during his lifetime, latterly as president of the Colonial Weaving Company. He also had timber investments in British Columbia, and was a leading director of the old Otonabee Power Company at the time it was expropriated by the Hydro-Electric Commission, an action he opposed with all the vigor he could command. However, the Ontario Government led by Hon. Howard Ferguson was extending the scope of Hydro in Eastern Ontario and nearly all the water powers along the lower Trent system of any value were acquired. For some years Mr. Hall was an associate with R. M. Glover in the ownership of the Peterborough Examiner until two years and a half ago.

He was an honorary president of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir which he substantially supported in their successful trip to New York some years ago, under the leadership of Martin B. Chenhall, when the choir won notable honors in competition. He was also a member of the Ontario Club, Toronto, the Peterborough Club, and the Law Association of this city.

E. A. Peck, K.C., recalled to-day that Mr. Hall was the third oldest lawyer in Peterborough in length of experience since admission to the Bar, being preceded in this respect only by E. H. D. Hall and Mr. Peck himself.

Mr. Hall was essentially a liberal not merely in a political sense, but in his general outlook on life and his relationships with his fellowmen. He respected the opinions of those who differed from him, their political allegiances, their religious faith. He was more than tolerant, a word which he used to say grated on his sensibility; he objected to that word because it seemed to connote an idea of presumption and condescension.

Mr. Hall is survived by his wife, Clara Elizabeth Ludgate, daughter of the late John Ludgate, who resided in Ashburnham; they were married in July, 1894; and by four brothers and two sisters, Adam and Thomas Hall of Francis, Sask., and William J. and Andrew Hall of Cambray, all farmers, and Mrs. Alice Bagshaw of Cambray and Mrs. Catherine Carley of Fenelon Falls.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence at 459 Reid Street to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Hall was a member, will conduct the service.

WILLS DISCUSSED WITH KINSMEN BY J. McCLELLAN

James W. McClellan, an old Peterborough boy and now manager of the Excelsior Life in Oshawa, was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Peterborough Kinsmen Club held on Thursday evening.

Introduced by Ellsworth Deyell, Mr. McClellan took as his subject "Wills," and in his most interesting interpretation he showed the errors made by many who make wills and the fallacy it is to not have a will.

It is being realized today that it is becoming more important to take care of the conservation of an estate than to create one. Hence a will which really is the planning and distributing of an estate after death is necessary.

Dividing people into three classes in connection with wills, the speaker placed in the first class those who have no wills at all and who compose about 85 per cent. of the citizenship; in the second class were those who left everything to the wife, and the third composed of those who made some attempt to distribute their estate.

The law has made it so that a single man dying without a will, his estate goes to his next-of-kin, his father, his brothers and his sisters. A married man without children and without a will, the wife gets the first $1,000 and half the residue, while with a married man with one child who leaves no will, the wife gets one-half and the child the other half, while a married man with two or more children, the wife gets one-third and the children the remaining two-thirds. However, if there are minors the official guardians must step in and the estate must be liquidated sometimes at a great loss, and the minors' share turned into the surrogate court with extra expenses of administration.

The speaker pointed out the errors of the common will today. "I will everything to my wife." The person making the will has said what he wants to, but he has failed to realize that his wife may not be here to enjoy it, and also that she may die first or die very shortly after, and then her next-of-kin would come in for his estate, something which he would not have wished. Another point not known to many was that if a young man made a will prior to his marriage that all wills are automatically revoked by marriage. In concluding, he advised that all wills be thoroughly gone over and revised once every five years.

The thanks of the club were tendered the speaker by Vern Selkirk.

Curly Gibson rendered two very much appreciated numbers. Dr. E. M. Crough, the president, presided and announced that next week a luncheon would be held on Wednesday at noon, when the speaker will be Dr. F. J. Zeidler of Toronto.

blast into Xavier's chest was thrown into the Dumoine.

The Cabin is Burned.

The family's little cabin was evil, too, the Ojibways believed. One night it was burned to the ground and the 64-year-old mother led her brood into the wilderness after burying Xavier in an Indian cemetery. She pledged the children to silence and told them if they were asked about Xavier's death they were to say he had shot himself while cleaning a shotgun.

Trapping as they went, the four wandered through remote parts of the district unitl more han a week ago, when Constables J. Alphonse Matte and G. Lortie of the Noranda detachment of Provincial Police came on Dave's little daughter as they searched about Wolf Lake. The rest of the family was away from the camp and the girl was told to say nothing of the officers' visit.

Three days ago a message, carried by dogsled, telephone and telegraph to Noranda, told the police the family was back at Wolf Lake. This time whe nthe plane settled on the lake Dave and his mother were at the camp. Through an interpreter, the Ojbiways told their halting story of the shooting and the long, aimless flight through the woods that finally promped rumors which reached Noranda.

RAIL UNIFICATION IS INEVITABLE BEATTY DECLARES

WOODSTOCK, Ont. April 8 (CP) —An indispensable condition to unification of Canada's two great railway systems "should be a strengthening of the powers of the board of railway commissioners," according to Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Unification is "inevitable," Sir Edward told the Woodstock Board of Trade last night. Once that is accomplished, he suggested, a transport board composed of seven leading Canadian citizens should be set up which would have power over "any question affecting the interest and convenience of the public."

"The bogey of monopoly can be disposed of quite simply," he said in answering criticism of his plan of unification of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways. "It could only damage the public by unwise increase of railway rates or the provision of inadequate service to the public."

No Fear Of Dismissals

A unified railway system in Canada would "offer employment to every regularly employed railway man now in the service," Sir Edward said. "The fear of men being thrown on the street as an immediate result of unification can be regarded partly as the result of misunderstanding of what is proposed and partly as the result of carefully cultivated fear."

"The object of unification is definitely not to create unemployment," the C.P.R. president added. "It is to save wasted labor." A reduction of 17 per cent in the total hours of employment could be effected, "and, very largely, this would be made by reduction in casual employment."

Sir Edward said he had never suggested that the Canadian National be transferred to the ownership of the Canadian Pacific. "The suggestion has always been one for the joint operation of the two railways for joint account," he said.

Wins Citizenship

May Yohe, ABOVE, now 72 years old and once the owner of the famous Hope diamond, has won back her citizenship by naturalization in Boston. She lost it decades ago when she married Capt. Jan Smuts, hero of the Boer War. Miss Yohe, once glamor girl and toast of two continents, was one of the most beautiful women the American stage boasted in the gay 90's.

RICE LAKE FREEZES FOR SECOND TIME

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, April 8.—On Tuesday evening Rice Lake, which had been clear of its winter's ice for several days, began to freeze over again and by Wednesday morning the surface had completely sealed up. It is the talk of the countryside at present and residents who have lived in the district for over seventy years claim that such an occurance has never before happened. On several occasions ice has formed around the shore during cold spells in the spring after the winter's ice had disappeared but so far as it is known this is the first instance when this has occured.

It is very rare for weather to remain cold for as long a period as it has on this occasion. The water in the lake was very cold and the exceptionally cold wave no doubt caused the strange happening.

The cold wave has also severely tested the strength of the new seeds and wheat. It is impossible to say as yet just how much damage has been wrought by the recent cold waves and heavy frosts, but farmers are not nearly as optimistic regarding the prospects of a bumper crop as they were a week ago.

The cold wave also halted the muskrat run when it was at its height and although a good season has been experienced by trappers of the district it is believed that there will be no further run this spring.

Toronto buyers have purchased the major portion of the furs in the district and have paid one dollar per pelt on a flat basis. The run has been somewhat better than a year ago in most marshes.

Disappearance Of Woman Deepens Murder Mystery

Mrs. Marian Gilbert, LEFT, 22-year-old equestrian from California, disappeared in early February. Her husband, William J. Gilbert, was found murdered in their home in Reno, Nev., last November. The mystery was deepened recently with the confession of Buck Biamont, 31, that Gilbert had been slain as the result of a plot in which he said Mrs. Gilbert had been implicated. Biamont, shown at RIGHT, with Carl Ramser, 51, named Ramser as one of the plotters. They are both held by Reno authorities, who now believe that Mrs. Gilbert may have been slain.

KEENE

The farm sale of stock and implements of the late Daniel Lynch of Otonabee was largely attended. Harry Redmon acted as auctioneer. His stock and implements were in good condition and brought good prices. Cows sold for $40 to $50; horses sold for $150 to $200; hogs weighing from 115 pounds brought $13; a sow sold for $45; grain—oats, 57 cents; spring wheat, 75 cents; buckwheat, 65 cents.

A mow of hay sold for around $4 a ton. The implements brought fair prices.

Mrs. Arthur Millar and family were in Campbellford on Monday attending the funeral of the late Mrs. John H. Millar, Sr.

LOYALISTS CALL 100,000

MADRID, April 8—(AP)—Thirty-eight recruiting offices opened in Madrid to-day to handle volunteers expected to respond to the Government's call for enlistment of 100,000 more men. Recruits were lined up before many offices before they opened this morning. The recruiting campaign is being stimulated by parades of volunteers already signed up.

BUSH BLAZE BURNS FOUR VOLUNTEERS

MOUNT ALBERT, April 8.—Trapped by fast-spreading flames, four volunteer firemen were slightly burned Wednesday afternoon while fighting two separate fires that swept through the 1,000-acre section of reforestation four miles south of here, destroying close to 100,000 young pine trees.

A strong southeast wind fanned the fire in the main reforested area, sweeping the flames with terrific speed diagonally across the 1,000-acre section. Volunteer firemen estimated the fire destroyed about sixty acres of trees from one to twelve years old.

Walter Cain, Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, said officials placed the loss at about thirty-five acres. Earlier reports were exaggerated, he said. Men from Newmarket and other neighboring communities shouldered shovels and raced to help local volunteers armed only with wet sacks fight the fire.

The four men trapped were Albert Nedler, Morley Rankin, George Grusby and William Writman. They were caught when the fire jumped a fifty-foot fire trench. They started to run ahead of the leaping flames for the open bush, but doubled back and ran through the wall of fire when the moving fire began gaining on them.

The One Sure Way

Yes, this kind of news deserves to be mentioned in the newspapers. It ought to get preference over a good many things which are taking place and clamoring for notice today.

Like this: The home of Bryon Rowe at Clarkson was destroyed by fire. Mr. Rowe is 79 and his home was a cottage. After the fire things did not look bright at all.

Then it was that the people who travel under the general heading of neighbors came together and took charge. They furnished most of the material and did most of the work, and the result is that with the coming of spring Mr. Rowe has a neat and new cottage on the site of the one which he lost by fire.

That is just one case of course, and there are plenty of folk who have to shoulder their own hard luck, but the idea behind the work of the Cooksville neighbors is the big item in the news. Within that idea there is the cure for most of the troubles into which this world is plunged. If governments the world over were working on the same basis as the neighbors of Cooksville there would be little trouble. Probably none at all. Selfishness would be rubbed out.

That is why that one little cottage built with the highest motive in the world is important. Governments of the world today are heaping burdens on the backs of people to pay for hatred and they have neither the time nor the inclination to stop and consider the neighbors of Cooksville.

And yet the neighbors of Cooksville have an idea which if it were allowed to run through the veins of world government would positively transform this old world into a place of joy and gladness.

How About The Debt?

Foreign Department of the government of United States has written a note to Berlin and the note had to do with Austria. United States announced it was closing its Legation in Vienna, a similar step having been taken by Great Britain. Vienna is not now the capital of Austria and keeping a Legation there would serve no purpose. The seat of government is now in Berlin. State officials said the US.. note did not mean recognition in the legal sense, but was actually an official method of accepting something which had occurred—the seizing of Austria by Germany.

There was more to the note. Washington said plainly enough that since Berlin had seized Austria and become possessed of its land and physical assets it was to be presumed that Berlin had also become possessed of and was responsible for its liabilities. Washington had been thumbing over its debt book and found that Austria owed to United States the sum of $64,493,480. There was no demand for immediate payment, but in a nicely-selected collection of words the intimation was presented that Washington desired to have the account attended to.

Just a little matter that the conquering heroes will not be too pleased to consider. Most of the nations of the world today have staggering debts, and if the rule becomes plain that the taking over of a nation also means the taking over of that nation's debt it may cool the ardor for pilfering territory.

What Is The Explanation?

Millhills Ransom was the name of the $15,000 bull imported from Scotland for the O.A.C. at Guelph. It did not cost the province of Ontario anything at all, the purchase price having been put up by a number of interested gentlemen. But this animal did attract a great deal of attention, and it is quite possible that a good many people had the idea that Hon. Duncan Marshall, when Minister of Agriculture, had actually purchased the animal and the price had been paid out of provincial funds. Not so.

But Millhills Ransom is dead. The official announcement was to the effect that the bull died from an attack of acute gastritis. During his life there was much mention of this import. When Mr. Marshall was last in Peterborough at the opening of our fair there was some good-natured reference to the prize bull, and it was so elsewhere.

Members of the Legislature took a day off some time ago to visit the O.A.C., and again Millhills Ransom was the centre of attraction. The politicians saw the animal and they had opportunity to view members of his family. There were politicians all around him; Grit hands were placed on him and so were the palms of Conservatives used for the purpose of passing over his massive head and shoulders. It is recorded that one Conservative member submitted to having his picture taken standing beside the great Millhills. And at that time the animal appeared to be enjoying a good enough measure of health and enjoyment. He was taking his victuals and had uttered no word of complaint.

But shortly after that visit Millhills Ransom took sick and died. We learn he was so sick that the experts at the O.A.C. couldn't do much for him. They report it was acute gastritis, but why this fatal illness should have developed so soon after the visit of the politicians is something which should be explained. Millhills Ransom didn't have gastritis acute or otherwise before the coming of the politicians, so it seems reasonable to assume that the visitors must have brought the plague along with them. We do not urge that the matter be investigated because when a government starts investigating it means it begins also to spend more money. But it would be well to know how come that a company of visiting politicians should have had such a fatal influence on this famous bull from Scotland. Until that point is cleared up it may be that if the members of the Legislature decide to have picnic parties elsewhere the folk in the community to be visited will want to gather in their livestock and put a padlock on the barn door until the visitors have departed to some considerable distance.

There Are Difficulties

This country favors the idea of reciprocity with United States if it means an added market for the produce of our farms. We know there is a large market to the South and we want to sell to the people there. At the same time the farmers in the States want that market for themselves. All of which seems natural enough.

The situation becomes complicated when government supporters seek to defend the system now followed in Washington. They have one program by which they seek to limit the production of potatoes, and will pay compensation to farmers for not growing them, and at the same time they have an agreement whereby more seed potatoes can be imported from Canada. So it seems they are trying to suppress and encourage potato growth at one and the same time.

A former governor of the state of Maine was presenting the case of the Atlantic fishermen, and he said it was economic nonsense to grant concessions to Canada on fish when the U.S. government had to buy 35,000,000 pounds of surplus fish last year in order to keep their own fishing industry from being ruined.

Speaking for the National Milk Producers Association Charles Holman contended the government was buying up surplus supplies for relief distribution and at the same time letting down the barriers to Canadian producers and thereby creating greater surpluses with which the government would be forced to deal.

Arranging a trade agreement between two adjoining nations is apparently not as simple as it looks. The most popular arrangement would be one which would permit all nations to sell a great deal and in turn buy as little as possible, but unfortunately no one has yet found how things can be done that way.

They're Not Wanted

Leopold Macaulay referred to the manner in which visiting tourists were now using airplanes for conducting their fishing parties. He referred to one party which came out at Dwight from the backwaters of Algonquin Park and they had so many fish they used a wheelbarrow to move them to the ice house.

Mr. Macaulay is right as can be in drawing attention to that sort of fishing. He would be right if he had added that Ontario does not welcome such visitors. They are not sportsmen but raiders. If we had sufficient of them we would soon have no fish in our lakes.

Few people take time to consider the extent of the demands we are making on our lakes now. We are fishing them harder and oftener than the early settlers ever thought of doing. The rule of other days when fish were plentiful was to take what might be needed for food, and there was little if any waste.

Today we have plenty of people fishing for the sake of fishing. They may or may not eat the fish which they take, and if they did secure the legal day's take they could not possibly eat them all. One can take two lunge and six bass in a day, and it is quite possible by a conservative estimate that such a catch could total 50 pounds of fish.

The Examiner has had a reasonable amount of experience with this same problem. When our Mail-It-Away Tourist edition appears next month it will mark the third year of its publication. We have been on the search for pictures and on many occasions we have found it advisable to refuse space to those which showed what we consider to be a slaughter of fish. We did not want to create the impression that this was a district where people were invited to come and take so many fish that the total could not possibly be used. We considered it better to present this great outdoor country on its merits so we might hope to have people who were interested in all manner of outdoor life rather than concentrate on fish-catchers.

With the coming of good roads, fast cars and fast motor boats the fish in our lakes are subject to attack many times oftener than was the case in former years, and as the number of fishing excursions increases so must our regulations become more rigid and definite. The sportsman we welcome, but we do not want the raider who comes to butcher our fish.

The Final Push

There has been favorable consideration given to the construction of the connecting link from Port Perry to Peterborough in the Central Ontario Highway; there have been resolutions passed and there has been endorsation. In fact everything—except placing something in the list of appropriations for having the work started or carried to completion.

That connecting link is of importance to Peterborough, and it is also of even more importance to the district. It will become a feeder for Highway No. 28 going directly to our north country. That road would also do much to take traffic off No. 2 which has in the summer season more than it can handle safely or well or with comfort. It would conform to the sensible and correct principle of getting from Eastern to Central and then to Western Ontario in almost a straight line and it would keep a number of men employed in a season when there will be men in need of work. We need to get this project beyond the stage of promises and consideration.

A Good Service,

One statement was made in connection with the discussion of radio before the parliamentary committee dealing with that matter. It was to the effect that the Canadian Broadcasting Commission preferred to use the service supplied to it by the Canadian Press Association because such service had been found to be reliable, free from bias and comment. In other words it was an accurate recital of the news of the day.

Another point which seemed to come as a surprise to some of the members was that the Broadcasting Commission paid nothing at all for the service. It is presented to the Commission free of cost and the only stipulation is that it must be announced as Canadian Press news.

The Canadian Press service is furnished by the combined efforts of all the daily newspapers in Canada. It has been built into one of the finest newsgathering and news-distributing agencies in the world.

There is something more in this which the public is apt to miss at times—the broadcasting companies depend on the newspapers for their news.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Tax official says filling in an income tax form is as simple as reading a book. He probably means a book by Einstein.

According to American doctors, if you sneeze more than six times you are allergic. Worse than that, however, you will likely be feverish.

The Quebec legislative assembly has voted $200,000 to improve maple sugar production. Government bodies continue to regard the tax payer as a poor sap.

British anthropologist doubts whether there is any Nordic blood left in Germany and when Berlin hears that news there will probably be another war scare.

Canadian Boy Scouts plan to raise the membership of the organization to 100,000. That means a tenth of a million good citizens will be heading toward maturity.

The Quebec government claims the nickels that are found in seized slot machines. There is a source of revenue in which Mr. Hepburn should be interested.

Mr. Macaulay says the Federal government's relief policy is just a headline and Mr. Hepburn calls it merely a headache. Are the boys ganging up on Premier King?

Quebec proposes to levy a tax of 40 cents a month on telephones. The government would get more money if it imposed a graduated levy based on the length of the phone conversations.

Toronto is planning to use unemployed men to cut weeds this summer. Hay fever sufferers would be glad to contribute a bonus to the workers who are assigned to the ragweed belt.

BEST WAY

(By A. R. K.)

¶ The butcher man told me today, that spring was likely here to stay, he said the sun was bright; and I agreed with all he said, forgot the sniffles in my head, and nodded he was right.

¶ The man down at the grocer store, asked how if I would close the door, I did what I was told; he said the weather got his goat, he'd have to get his overcoat, because he felt so cold.

¶ So I agreed with what he said, about the blankets on the bed, and how the spring was late; I joined likewise in his protest, how wind beat on the knees and chest, we sang a hymn of hate.

¶ I met my neighbor down the block, and as we strolled we'd likewise talk, as we went on together; and he had quite a lot to say, how snow and ice had gone away, we also touched the weather.

¶ What he suggested I agreed, 'twould soon be time for planting seed, and I said that was so; the season would be late he said, and then I nodded with my head, and said growth might be slow.

¶ I find it best to do that way, when people pass the time of day, and speak a word to me; if they remark 'tis hot or cold, I just fall in with what I'm told—and straightway I agree.

How Much Can Spend For a Vote?

From Official Parliamentary Reports.

(The discussion had to do with how much per voters would be considered as the proper legal expenditure in any riding, the sum of ten cents per vote having been mentioned).

Mr. BENNETT: The question of where the money comes from is very important. It is also very important to know where it goes. You may have a small sum of money and may use it for corrupt purposes; you may have a large sum and use it all for legal and correct purposes. The question of the end or use to which the money is put becomes of great importance. Therefore apart altogether from establishing the source of funds it would seem that the extent to which money may be used to accomplish a purpose becomes of transcendent importance. We talk of this democratic form of government as government of the people, by the people and for the people; it flows very glibly from our tongues. But the first question that is asked in connection with an election, especially a by-election, is, what is it going to cost? Expert testimony could be given on that point in this chamber, I have no doubt. In fact I might be able to satisfy the curiosity of some of our friends in that regard myself. The question of the amount that may be expended in an election becomes of very great importance.

In England this matter was very carefully studied, and the amount that may be expended by a candidate in an election has been fixed. But as one of my friends said, that involves at once the question of the uneven distribution of votes in constituencies in this country. I pointed out here some time ago, for instance, that we realize that the redistribution in the eastern end of Ontario is not a fair distribution in the sense in which you and I use that word in everyday life. Yet the long established character of the constituencies, the fact that they always were separate from a neighboring constituency, was given consideration. The effect was, of course, that one constituency in the Niagara peninsula has a population nearly as great, we will say, as two, if not three, of those constituencies. They were rural constituencies, while in the Niagara peninsula you had large urban communities. That has a direct effect upon the question of limiting the amount of expenditures in elections. If it is four pence or five pence per head of the population—

Mr. POWER: I said four pence. It is five pence for an elector in a borough, and six pence in a county.

Mr. BENNETT: Yes. I have called it ten cents, roughly, in our country.

Mr. POWER: Besides the personal expenses; they are not included.

Mr. BENNETT: No, it does not include that. The candidate pays for staying at a hotel over night, or for gasoline for his car, or the operation of a motor car. Those are expenditures made by a candidte for all purposes, but not for getting in the vote. For instance, there are halls, bands, radios, advertising and all that sort of thing included in the five pence for the county.

Mr. POWER: And there is a mailing privilege also, of so much a name. There is permission for two ounces of election matter free, which amounts to a thousand pounds in some cases.

Mr. BENNETT: A very large amount, I suppose, in some places. But roughly, the figure I have used in making the computation was ten cents. Five pence is substantially ten cents. In some constituencies that would limit the expenditure to a small sum of money. In some it would amount to a very large sum of money. In a large city constituency, for instance, there might be a very dense population, and the expenditure would be large.

I do not know to what extent we may be able, in a measure, perhaps, to deal with the matter, and I am not going to anticipate what the measure provides in that regard. All I can say is I regard it as absolutely essential that some such restriction should be provided.

The question of compulsory voting was not referred to by the minister. In a sense, it has nothing to do with this measure; in reality it applies more directly to the franchise measure. But I am bound to say that the experience in Australia in that regard has been exceedingly satisfactory—most amazingly satisfactory. For instance, let us consider one of the difficulties we have all had. The law says that you shall not employ motor cars on election day to bring out the vote. If I were to ask for all those who have not paid for motors cars to hold up their hands, members who live in cities, I believe there would be a dearth of uplifted hands.

Mr. DUNNING: Except from the innocents, who do not know.

Mr. BENNETT: Are there any? Well, if there are, I would like to see their photographs.

A HIGHER POWER.

(Christian Science Monitor)

ONE OF THE generals of Frederick the Great once declined an invitation to the King's dinner, explaining that he had planned to receive Holy Communion the next morning.

A few days later when he joined Frederick and his generals, the King and his guests began to jest him for his religious devotions, and mock at his attendance at the Lord's Supper.

The old general rose, saluted the King, and told quietly but firmly that there was a greater king than Frederick, and that he never allowed the Holy One to be insulted in his presence.

The assembly was aghast. Such a stern rebuke to this mighty sovereign might well cost the old general his life. But no anger appeared in Frederick's face, only an expression of deep longing. Arising from his place, he went to the side of the brave old man, grasped his hand firmly, and expressed his grief that he could not belief so strongly or confess his faith so courageously.

Lawyers Lead in the Commons.

(From the Kitchener Record)

A CROSS-SECTION of the House of Commons on the basis of professions shows that in some respects it is fairly well representative of the various trades and vocations as we have them in Canada. Out of a total House membership of 245, the legal fraternity has more than its share since 78 commoners are practising law or did practise law at one time. This is almost one-third of the numerical strength of the House and far out of proportion to the number of lawyers in Canada as compared to the entire population. However, the Green Chamber is a law-making body and therefore the preponderance of barristers has some justifications on that score.

Agriculture is still the leading industry of Canada, so it is quite in order that farmers have strong representation with 36 members.

Among some of the other callings we find there are 21 members who conduct business affairs, besides 13 general merchants, six lumbermen and five insurance agents. Physicians and surgeons rank well up with 17. There are three school teachers, a druggist, two general contractors, four journalists, two civil engineers, a hotel manager, three professors, three clergymen, a land surveyor, a motorman, a butcher, three railway station agents, a machinist and a mechanical engineer.

When it is considered that in all about 35 professors or other vocations in life are represented in the House of Commons, hardly a question can come up on economics, or what have you, but what some member of the House is qualified to speak on the subject with a degree of intelligence based on actual experience. Probably this accounts for the talkfests during each session. No matter what subject is broached, there is always something to say someone to say it. It used to be that way when quiltings and appleparing bees were commoner than they are today.

Rise and Fall of Public Opinion.

(From London Times)

NO ONE CAN have read the speeches and the letters—a mere fraction of those received but fairly representative—which have been printed in the Times since the German seizure of Austria without realizing that public opinion is undergoing that metamorphosis, familiar to every newspaper, which always follows a sudden shock to the public conscience.

The immediate, and most creditable, reaction is one of indignant sympathy with the down-trodden, the victim, the dethroned ruler or the statesman resigning office. The cry is that something—anything—shall be done at once. Then, within a day or two, deliberation follows; longer views prevail; it becomes certain that the first impulse, if it had been carried into action, would have encountered a volume of protest far stronger than that which semed at first to be the voice of the people.

So it is at this moment that Mr. Chamberlain is finding more and more support for his restraint, not only among his own political followers, but in quarters—Liberal and Labor and independent—where there might be supposed to be every temptation to join in the hue and cry against him. He owes that support, as he knows very well, not to the encouragement of a controlled or sycophantic press—for many of the newspapers have been among his most violent critics—but to the fact that sober opinion has been able in this country to make itself heard through unfettered public debate.

Whiskers Tell the Seasons.

(From Sault Star)

OH, SO THE weather really can't be foretold for sure, as the weather bureaur alleges?

An old subscriber, who makes a living selling gas with an oily tongue on the Trunk Road thinks differently. Johnny is as bald as a bat but by hook and by crook he has held on to his whiskers, which are now No. 10's, EE width, a splendid exhibition of what a man can do by letting his mind wander.

Everybody knows that the hair of mankind will get crinkly in dry weather and limp when the floods come. Mr. Glossup goes a long way past that. In spring when the buds are bursting and the trees putting forth their leaves, and the grass is sprouting, J. Y's whiskers assume a verdant tint. Looking at them sideways there is a greenish glint to them. Johnny has the odd notion that it is a bluish tinge, but as he is not good on color and uses his whiskers to wipe the oil plunger on, he may not be as accurate as a disinterested by-stander.

In July Mr. Glossup's lilacs assume a hay complex, and with one graduation following another the gasman's foliage is a mild color by the time snow comes. A weasel or a rabbit turns white then but Johnny is more fox than either of these. The neighbors can't explain it.

How do the subscriber's hirsute appurtenances respond to the barometer? The neighbors, who all rely on Johnny in planting carrots and in setting picnic dates, think that his addiction to skim milk has something to do with the situation, although Johnny likes other beverages better. In a high wind the whiskers have been known to lie right down on J's chest, as if to protect him from the cold blast. Rain dampens their ardor. When John's whiskers get feverish, he leaves off his winter ganzies. By following his whiskers around he avoids sore throat.

If the meteorologists will get in touch with Mr. Glossup they can afford to pay him more than he makes wiping the oil plunger on his frontal entaglements in winter.

There Are Good Samaritans.

(Letter in Montreal Star)

SIR,— Some weeks ago there appeared on your most interesting page a letter headed "No Good Samaritans." While they may be few and far between I would like to tell you of an experience I had. Last Christmas night at about 10:30 while returning home after spending the day with relatives, I was crossing the road at Verdun and Melrose avenues when I slipped, fell and broke my ankle. I was unable to rise to my feet, and two fine gentlemen rushed to my assistance, summoned a taxi and took me to my home a short distance away, there they lifted me gently out of the taxi and just as gently carried me up two flights of stairs. When I got into the house they rendered valuable assistance until the doctor arrived. I was in terrible pain, but my heart was overflowing with gratitude to these two splendid men who put themselves out, to lend a helping hand.

This, my friends, is the "Spirit of the Master," who during the days of His earthly ministry went about doing good.

So you see, friends, while there maybe many of the priest and Levite type who "pass by on the other side," instead of lending a helping hand, there are some "good Samaritans," and the writer can testify to this fact from a very grateful heart in more ways than the one mentioned here.

To the Editor

THE FARMER'S COST

Editor Examiner:

Sir: That story in your editorial columns dealing with "A Farmer and His Costs," and giving the experiences of a Wellington County farmer in attempting to record the true cost of "a bushel of wheat," was both illuminating and constructive. I am right sure that your rural readers will discuss it among themselves.

The point about which this reader would like to say a few words reads as follows: "I began to realize it was not much use for a farmer to begin keeping books unless the result was to show him that he was losing money on certain crops and that he would be wise to discontinue them."

I would like to suggest that it would be still wiser to go further along that business road; emulate the marketing technique of the urban businessman; organise to sell co-operatively with men producing the same commodity; follow each commodity into its final market. It is notorious, as you are aware, that the prices paid by the final urban consumers are ample—even during a so-called "depression"—but that too slim a fraction of that urban price gets back to the primary producers.

The idea of getting the cost facts should not be permitted to trail off into the blind alley of discontinuing production. Morover, Mr. Editor, such a decision could not be applied to a commodity like wheat, upon whose tonnage and service and processing operations myriads of people, who never see a farm, depend. I recall, in this connection, the statement by Sir Edward Beatty, that "60 per cent. of the Canadian Pacific Railway's freight revenues originate West of Winnipeg"; and only last week the Canadian National Railways annual report advised the Commons that: "The gross revenues of the C. N. R. from the transportation of grain grown in Western Canada for the ten-year period, 1925-1934 inclusive, averaged $22,000,000 per annum, the tons of grain carried averaging 5,000,000 during that decade."

It is obvious that the grain traffic called for a $40,000,000 freight-bill from the western farmer for each of those 10 years? It seems to me he is entitled to "a living wage"? A discontinuance of that traffic would be disastrous both to the East and West

APRIL 8.

One hundred and thirty years ago to-day (April 8, 1808) the sentinels on the citadel at Halifax saw the approach of a great armada of ships transports which brought Sir George Prevost and a large army sent out in view of the strained relations with the United States. Sir George, born in New York in 1767, and who had won fame in the West Indies and been created a baronet and major-general, had been commissioned as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia and commander of the forces in the East, and ordered to take eight battalions to Nova Scotia, to land four at Bermuda (which he had done) and take the remainder to Halifax. He was further told that if, when at Halifax, he got word of the death of Sir James Craig, Governor of Canada, who was suffering from an incurable disease, and not expected to live long (as a matter of fact, he carried on at Quebec until 1811, when he returned to England to die), if the United States had declared war, he was to proceed to Quebec, and take charge of the government and military command. But that was all a matter for the future; Craig carried on, despite his suffering, provoked a very acute crisis in Lower Canada, and eventually left a sorry mess for Prevost to handle, as well as the defence of the country.

Fred Williams

For three years and a half Prevost was governor at Halifax. His first task was to find quarters for his troops. The barracks were found entirely inadequate at Halifax, and it was necessary to distribute the soldiers at various strategic points throughout Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, much to the delight of the inhabitants, who waxed well in supplying the soldiers, and much to the enlightenment of the inhabitants of Maine and other New England States. Prevost had been instructed to announce that the arrival of the troops was merely a precaution against an emergency, which might occur but was not anticipated, and that he had "strict instructions to promote a good understanding with the United States." That policy undoubtedly had a good deal to do with the reluctance of the people of the eastern states to favor war with Britain, but the knowledge that Britain had her bulldogs in readiness at Halifax and elsewhere was more persuasive than the talk of amity.

The arrival of the troops (whose numbers were much exaggerated in Boston and other American centres, possibly by British emissaries) combined with the conciliatory attitude of the British envoy to Washington, had a sedative effect and aided the conclusion of a provisional treaty, which kept the way open for further negotiations even if the treaty was not accepted in London. In fact, in July, Prevost was ordered to prepare to evacuate Nova Scotia and take his troops to Martinique. He sent word to Craig, by overland express, that he proposed to leave 500 more regular soldiers in the provinces than were there before his arrival and that he had organized 26 battalions of Militia, "in the height of training," and most of them armed. Craig sent back an urgent negative, telling Prevost that the danger was by no means over and that he must remain with his troops; but Prevost had already sailed. He completed his mission and then had to return to Halifax, whence he and most of his troops proceeded afterwards to Quebec and Upper Canada.

In 1812 Prevost became Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief at Quebec, and had to conduct the campaign against the Americans for two years and a half under adverse conditions; but the war ended with Canada saved, and he went home, to die in January, 1816, his life given for his King and Canada.

URGE 100 MILLION FEDERAL SCHEME FOR NEW HOUSES

OTTAWA, April 8 (CP). — The Federal Government is quibbling over trivial constitutional points while every municipality in Canada either is bankrupt or verging on bankruptcy, Hon. H. H. Stevens (Recon., Kootenay East) charged in the House of Commons.

Intolerance relief costs have placed Canadian towns and cities in their financial plight and there are only two alternatives open—widen their revenue field or relieve them of unemployment burdens, he said yesterday. Instead of going to the root causes of distress in Canada, debt and taxation, Parliament has been drifting along.

It was a fighting speech from the former Conservative Cabinet Minister who broke from the party before the 1935 election and led his own Reconstruction Party of which he is the one representative in the House.

Speaking in the debate on unemployment policies, he laid down a many-sided attack on Liberal achievements and plans and when he sat down received as much applause from the Conservatives as from the other Opposition groups.

All day long the discussion continued with suggestions on how to improve general conditions not being limited to Opposition benches.

Wilfrid Lacroix (Lib., Quebec-Montmorency) urged the Government to adopt a variation of the low-cost housing scheme introduced in Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

Loans Without Interest

Under it the Bank of Canada would print $100,000,000 in new money and loan it without interest to municipal boards to be spent on houses costing no more than $2,400.

The money would be refunded over a period of time, 15 years perhaps, by the monthly payment of the home owners. He ridiculed suggestions this meant inflation, arguing fixed assets were being increased to the limit of the currency issue. Similar schemes in Europe had not disrupted monetary systems.

Another Liberal, R. J. Deachman of Huron North, had even a simpler suggestion. He urged cutting the sales tax from eight to five per cent, abolishing the three per cent excise tax and lowering tariffs all along the line. Only by freeing trade and increasing purchasing power could Canada regain its feet.

A reduction of the sales tax from eight to five per cent, he estimated, would represent $80,000,000 in general purchasing power. The loss to the treasury would be $54,000,000 but, because of the pyramiding effect of the tax, it would reach $80,000,000 in purchasing power. He asked the House to consider what this sum of money would mean if left in the industrial stream and not diverted into the federal treasury.

Municipalities Hard Put

Canadian municipalities are being forced to the wall, Mr. Stevens claimed, instancing the default of Moose Jaw, Sask., a few months ago. This had a depressing effect on Canadian credit abroad as was demonstrated two months ago with a Canadian loan floated on the London mrket for £10,000,000 ($50,000,000).

"It ought to have been snapped up quickly," he continued, "but what happened? It hung fire for a week or 10 days and then the underwriters took up half of it."

On the same day, the City of Bristol, England, floated a loan for £3,000,000 ($15,000,000). He said the books were opened at 9 a.m. and closed five minutes later with applications for £68,000,000 ($340,000,000).

One reason for the reception shown the Canadian loan was the record of Canadian municipal financing and the number of defaults.

Labor Minister Rogers had stressed the necessity of maintaining national unity and in the 1935 election the people had been asked to assure unity by electing a Liberal Government when there were eight Provincial Liberal Governments. Liberal Government, however, had done little to promote national unity.

"I don't agree with everything Mr. Hepburn says," said Mr. Stevens. "But he's a young man. He's a Liberal. He's vigorous in the administration of his Government. He's a strong Leader of a vigorous Government in the biggest province in Canada, and there is no unity between him and this Federal Government."

The Quebec Government was not a Liberal Government, but there was no reason why Labor Minister Rogers should refuse to meet a delegation of the Mayor and City Council of Montreal to discuss relief.

Too Many Commisisons

Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel) said results from the National Employment Commission were disappointing. Too many commissions were being appointed to do the work of the Government and Parliament.

The Government was now waiting on the report of the Rowell Commission before acting on the employment Commission's report. When that was received he was sure the Government would want to consult the people before acting on it. So there would be an election and the life of a whole Parliament would have passed without any concrete results so far as unemployment was concerned.

Low wages were as much a problem as unemployment. It was surely not too much to ask that every person in Canada should have a decent living wage, a few of the luxuries of life and comfort and security in old age. The Employment Commission's report offered no hope to the workers on low wages.

Mr. Graydon thought extravagance might creep in if the Dominion took over all responsibility for unemployment relief, but believed sufficient checks and safeguards could be devised to prevent it.

SLEEPLESSNESS due to INDIGESTION

If the gnawing, nagging discomforts of indigestion keep you awake night after night, consider the experience of Mrs. A. B., of Wallasey. That was her trouble, too. Tossing and turning in sleepless discomfort! Suffering the pains of a churning, acid-bitten stomach! Then she took Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. Almost at once she found she had conquered her trouble. The pains ceased. She could sleep soundly, peacefully. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder quickly counteracted the acid condition that was gnawing away at the stomach lining. It soothed the inflamed tissues, and helped the stomach to do its proper work of digestion.

This Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is used in many leading British hospitals. Try it. But be sure you get the genuine Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. Look for the signature, "Alex. C. Maclean," on both bottle and carton. 75c, either powder or tablets, at druggists. 115

Use Of Airplanes By Fishing Parties Is Roundly Condemned By Macaulay

TORONTO, April 8—Use of airplanes by fishing parties was roundly condemned by Opposition Leader Leopold Macaulay, in the Legislature, last night, as one of "the modern practices" which was rapidly depleting Ontario's lakes and streams of the finny fellows.

Mr. Macaulay informed the House of one plane party which, last summer, came out to Dwight from the backwaters of Algonquin Park, so laden down with fish that they had to move their catch to the icehouse in wheel barrows. Sturgeon Lake, as a fishing water, was no longer any good, said he. The only person who could catch fish there, he added, was Sir Joseph Flavelle "and he gets pretty near everything he goes after, anyway."

Good fishing was a great drawing card, he said, for tourists, but only tourists who went to deluxe resorts got any fish. The little tourist, he said, didn't report good catches.

George H. Challies, former Minister of Game and Fisheries, admitted the correctness of Hon. Harry C. Nixon's statement that there was good fishing in Grey County, but attributed this condition to the fact that Grey County was the home territory of the Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, and that a fish hatchery had been located there since the Liberals had come into power.

"They get fish and elk up there," said Mr. Challies, "but down in Eastern Ontario, where I come from you don't find many tourists writing home about their catches."

Colonel Fraser Hunter, Liberal, St. Patrick, floored the House with laughter when he declared: "There are so many fish up in Grey, they're now eating the chickens."

A half dozen Liberal members testified to the value of the fish propagation policy of Mr. Nixon's Department.

REMAND BROTHERS IN STABBING CASE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 8. — Kenneth Kellar of Toronto and his brother Donald of Tamworth were arrested on Sunday night by Provincial Officer Henry Jillings and Chief Constable Watts of Napanee, following a stabbing affray at Hart's Garage, Roblin. It is alleged Kenneth refused to pay the proprietor, Peter Hart, for five gallons of gasoline, and is said to have cut his right cheek with a knife.

Both appear before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, in local Police Court on Thursday afternoon, on nominal vagrancy charges, and were remanded to the County Jail for one week at the request of Crown Attorney Kenneth Ham. They failed to give a satisfactory account of themselves to the police.

Kenneth was arrested at Selby, about six miles from the scene of the alleged knifing, after he had abandoned the car when it was damaged against a cement curb. Donald was located at Croydon, just as he alighted from a motor car.

NORWOOD W.M.S. IS PACKING BALE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 8.—Mrs. T. McNeely was hostess on Wednesday afternoon to the members of the Missionary Society of the United Church.

The meeting was opened for business. A playet by the finance committee was presented showing that prayer and faith were the best means of building up a society. The usual Easter thank offering is to be taken up on Easter Sunday. The collection of this meeting was to be used to purchase blankets for the bale. During the summer months it was decided to hold the W.M.S. meetings on Thursday in place of Wednesday.

Following the business, Mrs. F. Parker's group took charge of the program which opened with the singing of hymn 171 and Mrs. Parker assisted by Mrs. A. Clark in charge of the devotional part. The chapter from the study book "The Church of all Nations in Toronto" was ably taken by Mrs. B. Scott.

An interesting talk was given by Mrs. Lawlor on her trip to the "Deep Sea Missions" on the west coast of Canada.

The ladies were favored by a solo from Miss Gwendolyn Varcoe. Mrs. G. Irving closed the meeting with prayer which was followed by a cup of tea and a social half hour.

OMEMEE Y.P.U. MEETS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, April 8. — The regular meeting of the Young People's Union of Trinity United Church held on Monday evening was in charge of Christina Connell Arthur Williamson read the Scripture. Jean MacTavish read the commentary on the Scripture lesson.

After discussing a few items of business the topic was taken by Christina Connell, the subject being "Our Work in Trinidad." This missionary paper dealt with the interesting story of the growth of United Church mission work on the island from 1867 to the present. The meeting was closed by repeating the Mizpah benediction.

CANADA ASKED TO CO-OPERATE

LONDON, April 8 (CP Cable).—The United States Government is inviting Canada direct to co-operate in the American scheme to assist refugees from Germany and Austria. The United Kingdom and 16 other governments already have accepted.

Invitations to those Dominions which have their own representation in Washington were sent direct. To the other Dominions they were sent via London.

Viscount Halifax, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, assured the American Ambassador, J. P. Kennedy, that the British Government shares the concern which prompted the United States proposal and that the United Kingdom is anxious to co-operate to the fullest possible extent.

Court Battle Looms Over Poison Pension

CHICAGO, April 8.—A long court fight bloomed over the life pension awarded an Ottawa, Ill., woman in a test case for 15 others claiming to be victims of radium poisoning.

The group were former employees of Radium Dial Company, which moved several years ago from Ottawa to New York. They brought suit before the industrial commission, asserting they had contracted the incurable malady through lack of proper safety precautions in the plant.

SAINT JOHN GETS FIGHTING AIR UNIT

SAINT JOHN, N.B., April 8—(CP)—Military defences at Saint John are to be strengthened by a unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force, according to an announcement made at headquarters here of Military District No. 7. Authorization for the unit, to be named the 117th Fighter Squadron, was received to-day from the Department of National Defence.

The district already can muster almost every type of soldier from a battery of field artillery to a unit of the Medical Corps, but an air fighting force will be new to the area.

Headquarters here to-day also revealed tentative plans for training about 3,000 soldiers—largest number since the Great War—in camps and schools of the district this year. These plans still await approval of the Department of National Defence.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 8 (C.P.). — Announcement was made by United States immigration officials that the recently-enforced regulation, compelling medical inspection of all Canadian commuters had been cancelled. The regulation would have compelled semi-annual medical examination of all Canadians who commute to work in the United States.

PREPARE SERUM FOR PARALYSIS

NEW YORK, April 8—(AP). — The medical profession faces the infantile paralysis expected this summer with its new ammunition, protective nasal sprays and vaccines, rated as failures.

It is thrown back, the American College of Physicians was told by Dr. John A. Kolmar of Philadelphia, one of the foremost infantile paralysis authorities, on the use of convalescent serum.

There has never yet, said Dr. Kolmar, been adequate statistical evidence that the convalescent serum is either effective or ineffective. But the serum at present is the best hope of combatting the paralysis.

He said he believes the serum will prove protection. He cited its use in 1936 in Manitoba, where he said the serum apparently reduced paralysis about 50 per cent.

The latest nasal spray, zinc sulfate, which worked well on monkeys at Stanford University, he said failed to prove its value when four doctors tried it last summer during a Toronto outbreak. There is still, he added, a little hope for this spray if given by a physician with a catheter, a methods the public cannot use on itself.

Dr. Kolmar, one of the originators of vaccines for infantile paralysis, said the last one, tried on 11,000 children had caused nine cases of the disease.

Badminton

R. O. BENSON

Here are some more results in the Garrison Club championship tournament which will wind up with the playing of the finals in all events on Saturday night of this week. Returns already published include the first round of both men's and ladies' doubles. All the games are being finished off very smoothly now and it should be possible to have everything ready for the finals in plenty of time. In the second round of the ladies' doubles, Miss Adams and Mrs. Preston were given another bye; Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Clifton defeated Mrs. Copp and Miss Reid; Mrs. Selkirk and Miss Donaghue defeated Miss Finni, and Mrs. Bailey; Miss Davidson and Miss Cole defeated Miss Finnie and Mrs. Bailey; Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Jamieson, bye; Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Putnam defeated Miss Comstock and Miss Harvey.

Third Round

Mrs. Preston and Miss Adams defeated Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Clifton; Mrs. Selkirk and Miss Donaghue won by defeault; Miss Davidson and Miss Cole defeated Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Jamieson; Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Putnam, bye.

Men's Doubles (2nd Round)

Green and Brown, bye; Anderson and Sparrow defeated Maniece and Hardill; Preston and Bailey defeated Shields and Jones; Thompson and Stuart defeated Gemmell and Copp; Tollington and Drynan defeated Rutter and Rishor; Kitchen and Putnam defeated Westbye and Braund; Baker and Allin defeated Clifton and Monkman; Hewitt and M. Rishor defeated Gillespie and Richardson.

Third Round

Green and Brown defeated Anderson and Sparrow; Preston and Bailey defeated Thompson and Stuart; Tollington and Drynan defeated Kitchen and Putnam; Hewitt and Rishor defeated Baker and Allin.

Semi-Finals

Green and Brown defeated Preston and Bailey; Hewitt and Rishor defeated Tollington and Drynan.

Ladies' Singles (1st Round)

Miss Adams, bye; Miss Donaghue defeated Miss Scott; Mrs. Putnam defeated Miss Ackford; Mrs. Clifton defeated Mrs. Maniece; Mrs. Green defeated Mrs. Lewis; Miss Davidson defeated Miss Cox; Miss Cole defeated Miss Reid; Mrs. Preston, bye.

Men's Singles (1st Round)

Hewitt, bye; Brown, bye; Baker defeated Anderson; Tollington defeated Copp; Kitchen defeated Rutter; Drynan, bye; Green, bye.

Mixed doubles is rather a long and tedious story. First round has been pretty well riddled with byes and a number dropping out through inability to compete. So it comes about that a large percentage of the entrants find themselves in the second round without even ruffling a feather. Miss Adams received a bye right into the third round.

Mixed Doubles (2nd Round)

Mr. and Mrs. Putnam defeated Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow; Miss Cole and Anderson, bye; Miss Scott and Thompson, bye; Mrs. Allin and Allin defeated Miss Ackford and Stuart; Miss Donaghue and Baker won by default; Miss Davidson and Kitchen defeated Miss Burgess and Braund; Miss Comstock and Rishor defeated Mrs. Clifton and Shields; Mrs. Copp and Copp, bye; Mrs. Matthews and Green, bye. Mrs. Preston and Drynan are mysteriously in the semi-finals. Dunno whether they beat any other couple, got a bye or won by defeault. You figure it out!

Third Round

Miss Adams and Brown defeated Mrs. Selkirk and Tollington; Mr. and Mrs. Putnan defeated Miss Cole and Anderson; Miss Scott and Thompson, bye; Miss Donaghue and Baker defeated Lieut. and Mrs. Allin; Miss Davidson and Kitchen defeated Miss Comstock and Rishor; Mrs. Matthews and Green defeated Mr .and Mrs. Copp.

SOUTHEND SOFTBALL League goes into its annual huddle on Monday at seven tinkles of the clock down at Barrack's store, and those interested are invited. We can recall when this circuit, an independent or outlaw loop, got going four years ago It was strictly a corner-lot league at that time but dished up some keen contests for the southend section, where so many sports fans hail from. Like Jack's beanstalk, and the national debt, it grew and grew. Proved popular with players and fans, and last year was at its peak. Lot of good city and district squads in, with plenty of players of O.A.S.A. calibre. Uptown softballers sneered at it, but didn't people sneer at the first brave guy to step out with his legs swinging freely in loose pants, after so many years of tight trousers? Ah, yes, you used to have to take your shoes off to change your pants—but that's got nothing to do with softball, we suppose.

TORONTO LEAFS again hit their stride to knock off a 5-1 win from the Hawks last evening and tie up the Stanley Cu pseries. Third game will be Sunday and fourth on Tuesday, both in the Windy City, with the fifth tilt—if necessary—being back in Toronto next Thursday. The score of 2-1 for Leafs last night as the third period opened indicated the play, we gather, as they blasted three home in the third when the Stewart squad opened up like a family argument in a do-or-die attempt in the third. It was a case of die. The scrappy skippers of these outfits shook hands before the battle, forgetting their fisticuffing of the previous playoff. 'Tis anyone's serial yet, but Toronto should come through on top. The Sunday night fray will be broadcast over WGN at 10.45 o'clock.

LOOKS LIKE maybe Oshawa will cop its second Ontario puck title of the year within a week or so, if the juveniles keep a-comin' along. The kids cleaned up on Belleville Hi-Speeds (who rubbed out our St. Peter's squad) to win Eastern Ontario honors. They'll likely step into O.J.H.A. semi-finals next. Quinte scribe feels his gang got a rather shady deal in the sudden-death joust in Oshawa when the kids had to wait nearly an hour after the advertised starting time, and then had no rest period before the final frame began. They faded fast in the third.

THIS ITEM from Cobourg came within a gnat's whisker of knocking us off our chair this a.m.: "Fred Dufton, president and manager of the Cobourg intermediate 'B' championship rugby team, has called a practice for this Saturday afternoon at 2.30. The officials of the above club are anxious to get organized as early as possible and especially invite all ex-students of the C.C.I. to Saturday's practice. The success of the club depends on the interest shown by the players themselves." Apparently, the Galloping Ghosts plan to haunt the spring gridiron and steal a march on the Orfuns and other possible rugby rivals months before the season opens. As ye Ancient Mariner might put it: We fear thee, Speedy Spirits; we fear thine April drill; for thou art rough and wilt be tough—and full of gridiron skill!

ARRANGE FASTER EMPIRE FLIGHTS

LONDON, April 8—(CP).—Easter flying services to Egypt, India, Australia and South Africa are announced by Imperial Airways. The new schedules, affecting 20,000 miles of Empire trunk routes, come into effect April 10.

It will then be possible to fly from England to Egypt in a little more than a day; to India in 2½ days; and to South Africa in 4½ days. The service will be operated by the new fleet of flying boats.

The accelerated services will form part of the faster Empire airmail scheme. The high speed of the new fleet has made it possible to eliminate night flying.

Flights to Alexandria will take one day, three hours against the present two days; to Singapore five days, two hours against seven days; and to Brisbane eight days, 23 hours against 11 days. A service from Bangkok to Hong Konk is planned to give Australia and Malaya direct air communication with China.

The speed-up also includes faster delivery of Canadian mails to Egypt, Africa, Inda, Malaya and Australia.

Canadian Rookie

Canada's most illustrious representative in major league baseball at the moment is George Selkirk, the Yankees' slugging outfielder. Ralph Buxton (ABOVE), however, if he sticks around, may soon be turning back Selkirk at the plate. Ralph is a right-handed pitcher and hails from Rainton, Saskatchewan, although now living in California. He played with Oklahoma City last year and is working out with the Philadelphia Athletics.

NEW YORK YANKEES ARE NOT DRAWING EXHIBITION GAMES

(By the Associated Press.)

TULSA, Okla., New York Yankees, nursing a one-game winning streak, something of a record for them this spring, are on hand to met the Tulsa Oilers of the Texas League with little of the fanfare that accompanied two previous visits. Whether it is the lack of a Babe Ruth or Joe Dimaggio to pack 'em in, or the fact the Yanks are meeting mionr league opposition, the world champions are not drawing. They have not had a full house since opening day at St. Petersburg.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Jack Winsett, the lanky Brooklyn Dodgers' outfielder, has set 35 home runs as a goal for this season. It is quite a goal. Wingett hit only five in 11 games last year and the entire squad could hit only 32 more.

MONROE, La.—With the forfeited game with Cleveland Indians still New York Giants's main topic of conversation, writers and the few remaining Giants who served under John McGraw didn't forget him. For as Secretary Eddie Brannick put it, "How the old man would have loved to be in on this scrap."

MONROE, La.— Manager Oscar Vitt of Cleveland Indians, announced Jimmy (Skeeter) Webb, new Cleveland infielder secured when Judge Landis declared him a free agent, would play shortstop against Meridian, Miss., his home town, Saturday.

GREENSBORO, N.C.— Manager Bill McKechnie of Cincinnati Reds is just about set on his line-up for the opening game of the season. It's the same one he used against Boston Red Sox Wednesday, with Ival Goodman in the lead-off spot.

San Antonio, Texas. — Manager Gabby Street said to-day Outfielder Sammy West will be out of St. Louis Browns' lineup temporarily because of a small chipped bone in the second finger of his right hand. Street said Mel Mazzera or Ethan Allen would take West's place in centrefield against the Chicago Cubs to-day.

Mobile, Ala. — The biggest Cardinal squad ever to make a Dixie barnstorming tour was on hand today. A party of 43, including 35 players. The Cards were slated to meet Mobile, of the South-Eastern League, a St. Louis farm. Lon Warneke was the Cards' pitching choice.

In His Blood

Once a famous jockey, now striving to become a famous owner and trainer is Steve Donoghue (ABOVE). For many years the outstanding figure on the English turf, and rider of more Derby winners than any other jockey, Steve is seen after his horse, "La Mist En L'Aire" had run unplaced in the Blankney Plate in Lincoln.

SENATORS COUNT ON BONURA'S BAT FOR SEASON HOPES

The booming bat of Zeke Bonura will break down the barrier between Washington and the first division. That's how Bucky Harris reasons, and his logic is sustained by the cold figures the big banana merchant has blasted into the books.

Talking about key men — here's the master key man of the whole darn league. His presence with the Senators promises to change the whole complexion of the pennant race. Bonura gives Washington a team that can compete on an even basis with the other eastern clubs, not excepting the Yankees, and a team that should wipe out the ten-game margin between it and the first division.

Bonura should wipe out the curse of left-handed pitching that has plagued the Senators for years. Clark Griffiths now has the right-handed power hitter he has been seeking, and the club has fine balance, with Lewis, Travis, Myer, Almada and Stone hitting from the left side of the plate, and Rick Ferrell, Bonura and either Al Simmons or George Washington Case hitting from the right.

The Senators have some nice-looking young pitchers, led by two youthful left-handers who made a nice impression last summer. Joe Krakaukas, coming up from Trenton after the campaign closed, won four games and lost one for the Senators. Kendall Chase, young man from Chatanoogs, shared in Krakauskas' success, but went him one better by beating the Yankees twice.

Bucky Harris likes 21-year-old Joe Kohlman, who won 25 games for Salisbury last summer, losing only two decisions. Kohlman is a right-hander. Twenty-eight-year-old Emil Leonard, back from Atlanta, where he won 15, should be a ten-game winner. With Deshong, Wes Ferrell, Pete Appleton and Elon Hogsett, the staff has all the appearance of a first division contender.

The infield is set, with Bonura at first, Myer at second, Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, Almada and Stone are veterans in the outfield, and either Al Simmons or George Washington Case (who hit .388 for Trenton) will wander in the other pasture.

Mauler Dempsey Shakes 300 Hands A Day In Official Greeting Job

NEW YORK, April 8 (A.P.). — Jack Dempsey, who quit the ring with more than $2,000,000 in cash and quick assets, is fast becoming a rich man indeed, but he's beginning to look tired around the eyes, and his friends wonder these days how long the old Mauler can maintain the pace he's setting.

Recently a magazine writer wanted to do a piece entitled "A Day With Jack Dempsey." It took him three days to go the route and then three more days to recover.

Jack estimated he shakes 300 hands a day, year in and year out. He never gets a chance to work out any more. He was asked why he didn't cut it out, or at least slow the tempo, and start in having some fun for himself. He admitted he and his wife, the former Hannah Williams, had been out by themselves only one evening in the last two years.

"I can't," he said. "These are tough times and a guy's got to keep punching. I've got to protect my investments. Take this restaurant. We've got $600,000 sunk in it, and more than half of that is mine. We've got to do $1,900 worth of business a day to break even."

His restaurant is only one of Jack's interests. He also has a new bar a block away, and he figures he must spend several hours a day there, shaking more hands. He owns hotels in Los Angeles and Miami, and he has a piece of the Agua Caliente Race Track. There's a new "Jack Dempsey" whisky, and a "Jack Dempsey" magazine, and he is interested in a producing oil field at Gladewater, Texas.

Another man would delegate about two-thirds of the work to assistants, but Dempsey goes at the job like he were tossing punches at Jess Willard and didn't have a round to spare.

BRUISING BATTLE ENDS IN 5-1 VICTORY FOR TORONTO LEAFS

Drillon And Parsons Lead Toronto Scorers In Goals Injuries Hit Both Teams

Doc Romnes Has Nose Broken While Chamberlain Suffers Broken Thumb

TORONTO, April 8 (CP).—Survivors of the long National Hockey League playoffs, Toronto's young Maple Leafs and Chicago's veteran Black Hawks dug in today for a protracted Stanley Cup final with their forces already shattered in two struggles.

As the teams took stock of their lineups, the count stood even, a game apiece, with Leafs back in the favored position on a 5-1 drubbing they handed Hawks last night. It was a Leaf force resembling the confident wreckers of Boston Bruins that swept over the weakened Hawks.

Chicago tried vainly to halt Leafs with Paul Goodman, a raw recruit, in goal and their first-string right wing, Mush March, in a Chicago hospital recovering from a groin injury. The odds were all against them taking two straight, and Leafs left nothing to chance.

Out of the heavy checking that marked the second clash in the best-of-five series came injuries to both teams. Chicago's Doc Romnes suffered a broken nose in the second period and wasn't used afterwards; Murph Chamberlain of Leafs had a thumb broken and did not play after the first period.

These were the most serious hurts. Cut by sticks carried high from start to finish, Roger Jenkins, Alex. Levinsky and Louis Trudell of Hawks needed stiches to close head wounds. Art Wiebe was struck by a stick as he sat on the Hawk bench and an artery over an eye was severed. Toronto's Harvey Jackson suffered a recurrence of a wrist injury that kept him out of the final Boston-Toronto game.

Thrown into a tough spot when League President Frank Calder ruled Alfie Moore ineligible to continue his "pinch" goaling for Chicago, Goodman was not quite up to the job in the first major-league game of his three-year professional career. But if there were faults for the loss they were not all his, for Leafs were back on top of their game.

Forcing at least two more games, Leafs struck early on Gordon Drillion's goal in the first two minutes and they seldom ceased carrying the offensive against a wilting Hawk defence. The third and fourth games will be played in Chicago, starting Sunday night, with a fifth, if necessary, in Toronto next Thursday night.

Despite their man-power edge, Leafs did not run up a commanding lead until Hawks collapsed suddenly midway through the third period. Then in the space of a minute and 25 seconds Drillon fired his second goal and George Parsons got two to settle the issue.

Sell-Out Audience.

A sell-out crowd of 14,500 saw Drillon pot the first goal with the aid of Bill Thoms and Syl Apps, a minute and 42 seconds after the game opened. But they were shocked to silence when Earl Seibert, Hawk defence ace, drilled home a short shot off Goaler Walter Broda's skate at 8.31. Buzz Boll was in the penalty box at the time.

It was the only goal scored while 13 penalties were being served. Chicago's Bill McKenzie drew the only major, throwing both fists into Harvey Jackson's face with less than two minutes to play. Before that the players threatened open fisticuffing a half-dozen times without doing anything about it.

Jackson got what proved to be the winning goal six minutes after the second period opened. He took Bill Thoms' pass at the blueline, went in on left wing and waited calmly while Goodman made the first move, falling a split second before Jackson shot through his legs.

Break Open In Third.

Hawks fluttered in tight-enough formation to stem the Leaf attack from then to midway in the final period. Apps set the play for Drillon's second goal, Goodman kicking Apps' short, hard drive in front to the waiting wing. The goal moved Drillon, league-leading scorer, to the top of the playoff sharpshooters with six.

Parsons got his two goals on identical shots, backhanders off his wrong side after Pep Kelly moved play deep into Hawk territory. Previous major-league experience likely would have provided Goodman with knowledge enough to stop Parsons' second drive.

It was not a spectacular game for the fans. The edge Leafs lost in a week's layoff after the Boston series had returned, apparently on the work they went through when Hawks won the first game 3-1 Tuesday night. The defence worked so well and forwards checked so continuously that Broda had only a minimum of work

Hawks, who have played steadily for nearly three weeks in eliminating Montreal Canadiens and New York Americans, were feeling the grind. Though there was little wrong with their checking, the attack lacked fire. Seibert was their only puck carrier to harass Leafs with much success.

Out Of Sunday Game?

There was no definite word yet whether Romnes and Chamberlain will play Sunday night. Hawks left for Chicago immediately after the game, taking along Pete Palangio, who replaced March last night. Palangio, out of the game since St. Louis Flyers closed their American Association season two weeks ago, was used sparingly.

Coach Bill Stewart took the loss in stride. With Karakas in goal and March on right wing Sunday, he thought Hawks could win, probably in three more games. Toronto's Dick Irvin, who called the turn when he said Leafs would be a "different" team for the second game, was every bit as optimistic.

NEWARK RETAINS CHARLEY KELLER IN THE OUTFIELD

SEBRING, Fla., April 8 (A.P.).—The gods of the far-flung Yankee system grind swiftly rather than slowly, and the result is always a First Division ball club in Newark.

The "Wonder B'ars" of 1937, winners of the International League pennant by 25½ games and victors in the Little World Series, have been scattered, mainly to the two major leagues, but the replacements are heavy in numbers and capabilities.

Big league raids began at the top of the ball clubs. Cleveland took the manager, Oscar Vitt. The entire infield moved on, George McQuinn to St. Louis Browns, Joe Gordon and Babe Dahlgren to the Yankees, and Nolen Richardson to Baltimore. The No. 1 catcher, Willard Hershberger, departed to the Yankees.

The loss in the pitching department—Atley Donald, Joe Beggs, and Steve Sundra to the Yankees and Vito Tamulis to the Browns—meant the departure of a quartette of hurlers who won a total of 73 ball games last season.

However, Johnny Neun, promoted from the Yankee farm at Norfolk, Va., to take Vitt's place, inherited the prize plum of all, Charley Keller, the right fielder who in his freshman year captured the league batting championship with an average of .353.

Both of Keller's outfield running mates, Bob Seeds and Jimmy Gleeson, also are back, which gives Neun a first-class nucleus for his 1938 club. Seeds, a veteran campaigner and a steady fielder, always hits around .300, and Gleeson, while he missed that mark by a few percentage points last year, nevertheless led the league in two-base hits with 47.

Les Scarsella, after a full year at Cincinnati, has moved in to take McQuinn's place at first base.

Schmeling Has Tune-Ups, Too

Oshawa Generals Edge Out Perth Blue Wings 7 To 5 And Gain Memorial Finals

Taylor And Dafoe Star In Motor City Junior Hockey Victory

OTTAWA, April 8 (C.P.). — The task of clipping the obstinate Perth's Blue Wings compelled and Eastern Canada amateur junior hockey title added to their spoils, Oshawa Generals to-day turned covetous eyes toward the Memorial Cup and national supremacy that will be theirs if they subdue Manitoba's St. Boniface Seals in the Dominion final probably in Toronto next week.

There is some doubt yet as to the venue of the finals. Cecil Duncan, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, originally announced they would be held here, but it is believed there has been a change in plans and the Oshawa-St. Boniface series will be in Toronto. Decision on the matter likely will be made to-day or to-morrow.

Hemmed behind their blue line in a mad, third-period dash by Perth Generals managed to hold the battling Blue Wings until the final bell here last night when they won 7-5 and hurdled the Ottawa and district representatives in two straight games to enter the final.

The Ontario Hockey Association titlists and conquerors of the Northern Ontario champions, Sudbury Wolves, Generals seemed on their way to another easy victory as in the first contest in Toronto which they won 6-2 when Perth suddenly found new power and speed to creep up to within one goal after Oshawa enjoyed a 4-1 lead in the second period.

Perth charged up the ice five-strong at every opportunity and the move boomeranged. The only three shots directed at Goalie Wilf McManus' cage in the last period were planted behind him when Generals broke away from the pack with no one but the goalie to beat.

Fans showered the ice with paper and peanuts in the second period when Referee Billy Bell tacked a 10-minute misconduct on Sandy Ross, Perth defenceman, and a general melee barely was averted when a number of the fans threatened two constabls who went up in the stands to evict a peanut-thrower.

Some of the fans swung at the policeman, but did not connect and the game was resumed after a delay of almost 20 minutes.

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP)—Bobby Jones wants no part of that talk about exempting former champs from the national open qualifying test...But it's better than even money the grand slammer would be back on the firing line if the United States Gold Association makes the change...Incidentally, it would also leave the way open for Francis Ouimet (1913), Walter Hagen (1914, '19), Chick Evans (1916) and Long Jim Barnes (1921) winners from way back who didn't get into last year's shooting.

REDS DEFEAT SYRACUSE 5-4 IN OVERTIME

SYRACUSE, April 8 (CP)—Anything can happen in a short series as the betting favorites often have found to their dismay. But Providence Reds still looked like good choice today to take their International-American Hockey League championship series with Syracuse Stars.

Reds, who finished up on top in the league's eastern division and then won the section championship by knocking out Philadelphia Ramblers, trimmed Stars 5-4 in two overtime periods last night in the first game of their best-of-five series. Stars only finished the season in third place in the western group but knocked off Cleveland Barons and Pittsburgh Hornets to win the section title.

It was the first loss in the playoffs for Stars, who eliminated Hornets in two straight in their sectional semi-final, and then ousted Barons, who finished far out in front in the section, in the same number of games. And Stars lost the game after working up a three-goal lead in the first period and being ahead 4-3 at another time.

Bud Jarvis scored the winning goal at 16:1 in the second overtime period. Prior to that Murray Armstrong scored twice for Stars in the first period and Pete Langelle gave them another in the same session. In the second period Mel Hill, Starr and Crawford scored for Reds while Jack Markle tallied the fourth Syracuse goal. Hill scored the goal that tied it up 4-4 in the third period.

Butch Keeling Gets Rangers' Release

TORONTO, April 8 (C.P.).—Lester Patrick, manager of New York Rangers, said Thursday he had given Butch Keeling, veteran left winger, his unconditional release.

Keeling played 10 seasons with Rangers in the National Hockey League.

"Butch is one of the great players of all time," Patrick remarked. "You never knew what he would do as an individual, but as a unit in team play he was tops."

Patrick did not know whether Keeling intended signing with another N.H.L. club for next season.

Keeling starred for Owen Sound Greys in 1924 when the Greys won the Canadian junior championship. He turned professional in 1926 with the London team of the old Canadian League, and early in 1927 joined Toronto St. Pats. Toronto traded him to Rangers the following season.

HEAVY SPRING RAIN BOON TO PRAIRIES

WINNIPEG, April 7. — (CP). — March rains, which soaked the prairies after a warm spell, seeped into thawed-out farm lands to build a welcome moisture reserve for seeding, a survey of western crop reports showed today. The rains, unusually early, generally produced brighter prospects than at this period last year.

Moisture falling in March last season mostly struck frozen ground but the recent warm period drove the frost from the top soil to permit entry of the valuable water supply. The rainfall will prove a big help in germination at seeding time, expected to be general about mid-April.

Each of the prairie provinces received heavy spring precipitation. A blizzard which piled snowdrifts over Southern Alberta and the southwestern corner of Saskatchewan will leave drenched soil when the sun strikes.

lard to apply to the Minister of Transport for a history of the Trent Canal system setting forth the extent to which the series of dams constructed by the Dominion Government has had the effect of raising the level of the water of Chemong Lake.

A third resolution by Frank Young, seconded by Joseph Sullivan, instructed Reeve Gifford and Thomas Gannon to interview J. J. Duffus, M.P., Alex L. Elliott, M.L.A. and others in regard to the obtaining of a permanent roadway to replace the floating bridge. It was decided to consult the township's solicitor in regard to the advisability of action for libel as the result of the recent publication of a letter proposing that the old crossing be abandoned and be replaced by an improved highway around the west end of the lake.

Some Items of Cost

Reeve Gifford informed the meeting that the floating bridge which was rebuilt in 1901 cost $26,334.83, including approaches and engineering fees. The average annual maintenance cost during that time was $1,517.11 and the total expenditure for all purposes, including the original expenditure on the bridge, amounted to $80,088.30.

"And that does not take into account the $2,500 excess taxes Ennismore has been paying into the coonty treasury for a long time as a result of the equalized assessment which Judge Smoke's assessment court had found to be unfair," Reeve Gifford said. "That was the reason why Ennismore's assessment for county purposes was reduced. However, taking that $2,500 a year into consideration this township apparently has paid more than the floating bridge cost the county."

Reeve Gifford said the whole community was incensed by a letter published in the Examiner a few days ago, signed "An Ennismore Farmer" and subscribing to the proposal that a highway be provided by way of Fowler's Corners, and the floating bridge be done away with.

"We appreciated the friendly editorial in the Examiner only a few days before this letter appeared, and it seemed too bad that the effect of the editorial was offset by that letter. Since then I have heard several persons' names mentioned in connection with that letter, and it isn't fair to them. I tried to find out the name of the writer but the Examiner would not divulge the name."

Lake Level Higher

Reeve Gifford acknowledged the friendly consideration received from the county council and by both governments in the past who had expressed their willingness to pay their share of the cost of a bridge. Older residents of the township recalled that the level of Chemong Lake used to be lower prior to the building of the Trent conservation dams, and for that reason, Reeve Gifford said, the Dominion Government should be willing to make a larger contribution to the cost of a bridge than might otherwise be expected of them.

"We have a first class road between Ennismore and Peterborough except the half mile gap of the floating bridge. We contend that it is not unreasonable to ask that a permanent span be constructed. Let us get what we want and not what others think we should get. If we stand by and do nothing our bridge may go the way of the Pigeon Creek bridge. If people had been alert that bridge might have been retained. What we need and what we want is a permanent bridge that will give direct communication from Peterborough through Ennismore and on to Bobcaygeon. We are asking for it as ratepayers, but it also should be considered as a link in a main tourist route into our country."

Leo Scollard, president of the Ennismore Young People's Club, said its members were solidly behind Reeve Gifford, and also that they appreciated his endeavors and the fact that his efforts to obtain a bridge had been made by him at a personal outlay of money.

Co-operation Promised

William McClelland declared that he would support every effort to get a suitable bridge across the lake. He had heard nothing about the cost of the floating bridge that should cause any objection. "If you are going to do something about a new structure you have done the right thing in calling this meeting. I'll be glad to do my part in helping the cause. I am for it one hundred per cent. Let us tell them what we want."

Melville McWilliams, Will Telford and W. A. Sidey of Bridgenorth expressed the opinion that virtually everybody in the south shore community wanted a bridge across the lake and would give their assistance to Ennismore in the appeal they were renewing. They said that many of the ratepayers in Smith township and Lakefield would also lend their support.

William Thackeray, George Wilson and Rev. J. V. Gillogly all commended Reeve Gifford on his action in crystallizing the sentiment of the people in appealing for the safety and convenience of a permanent bridge. Father Gillogly said he knew from his own experience the hazard of crossing on the ice. He considered the petition of the people to be right and just and should receive the consideration it merited.

Compliment to Reeve

Mr. Wilson paid a tribute to Reeve Gifford as the "best reeve Ennismore will ever have and one of the best Wardens Peterborough county has ever had." He emphasized the importance of the bridge to the tourist traffic, saying that every summer many visitors came for miles to see the floating bridge and to cross it.

"I am not looking for any compliments," Reeve Gifford remarked. "I am only trying to do what any other ratepayer in my position would do. All I am asking is for your active support, and don't let anyone try to tell you it is better to have a highway. We hear too much exaggeration of the length of the bridge span and what it might cost."

Reeve Gifford said another meeting would be held in the near future when he hoped that information would be available from the Department of Transport.

complying with all regulations of the law. It appears that for more than a decade the cemetery at Actinolite has not been supervised, no plots have been acquired and residents of the neighborhood have been at liberty to choose their own burial ground. Many years ago, it was presented to the community by the late James Joseph James; it belongs to no church, nor organization and anyone desiring to inter a body simply selects their own plot. These have usually been marked by some simple method, although there are many head stones, some of them in a state of disrepair.

Two Bodies At One Spot

While most plots were marked in some way, their is a possibility that more than one body may have been interred in some places. There has been no charge for upkeep.

In this case, the authorities visited the cemetery and were unable to discover any new graves. However, the father was approached and he accompanied Officer J. Clair Hayes to the cemetery, pointing out a tiny spot near the northeast corner, where the body of his infant son had been laid.

Officials of the Attorney General's Department believe that the child died from natural causes, but the irregular method of burial forced an investigation. The present situation may result in more careful supervision being placed in charge of the burial ground.

Mr. Heenan also disclosed the government would manufacture no airplanes. Construction of four had taken place in the provincial air service quarters at Sault Ste. Marie. The Minister thought there might be some possibility of endangering lives by the government-made planes and did not want to accept responsibility.

Hon. Colin Campbell, Minister of Public Works, informed the House a large capital expenditure would have been required had the province kept open Chorley Park, closed official residence of the Lieutenant-Governor. Water pipes started to corrode and two Governors told him of collecting all available dishpans to cope with leaks in a rain storm.

"That's just another will o' the wisp story—hearsay evidence," interjected George S. Henry, former Conservative Premier, one of the sternest critics of the government for closing Chorley Park.

RELIEF GRANTS ARE CUT BY PROVINCE AND COST TO CITY INCREASES

March Relief Costs Increased By $891.30 Over Last Year; Textile Shut-down is Blamed

Lay-Offs At The Auburn And Bonner-Worth Mills Cited As Chief Reason

Unemployment worries, which a few months ago seemed to be on the verge of becoming only a memory, loomed again Thursday night at the relief committee's meeting.

A letter from the Department of Welfare revealed that the committee's estimated costs had been pared for the first three months in the year while Alderman James Dutton reported expenditures had soared above the original estimates. The city will be forced to pay, for that period at least, a sum in excess of 33 1-3 per cent. of the total cost of relief, Chairman Dutton told the committee. Originally the city's share was 25 per cent.

"It would seem to me that this is another case where Peterborough is having to pay more because we have tried to keep the cost of relief down," Ald. Dutton said. In the month of March the government will pay two-thirds of $11,000 relief, while the actual cost of distributing relief was more than $13,000, he pointed out. The committee decided to await final settlement of the relief problem by the Dominion and Provinial governments before making any complaint. The order may only be for the first three months of the year, it was pointed out. That some drastic change in the relief is contemplated was indicated in a letter from the Department calling for rigid classification of all relief recipients. The classification will establish which persons are incapable of working and for what reasons.

Lay-offs at the Auburn and Bonner-Worth mills were cited as the chief reason for increased numbers on relief in this city. Relief expenditures, "increased for the first time in several months" according to Ald. Dutton, were up $891.30 over March of last year, an increase of $1,024.23 over this year's estimates. Fifty-three individuals were added to the rolls during the month. Of this number, thirty-seven heads of families were former Auburn or Bonner-Worth employees. "The picture isn't rosy," commented Ald. Dutton. "Things wouldn't be so bad if it were not for the conditions at the two textile mills."

Relief Officer Art Metheral presented a report dealing with inequalities in the amount of provisions purchased at various groceries. One chain store had received $506.92 from relief recipients during the month, he said. He found that reliefers preferred to deal with the particular store and, that they received special consideration. "When he has a sale coming off he tells them about it in advance and naturally they wait a few days to buy there," he explained. He had found no evidence that the manager was "faking" the purchases to include articles other than those on the relief list, he said. He cited one independent grocer to whom relief recipients gave their custom even after he had moved from one part of the city to another. Reliefees complained that some other grocers treated them "just like dirt" and naturally they did not purchase there, he said.

"There would be the same inequality if the same people were working," Mayor James Hamilton replied when Ald. Juby complained about inequality of distribution of relief vouchers among merchants.

HYDRO SERVICE IN KAWARTHAS

Hundreds of cottagers who vacation at Stoney Lake and the northern end of Clear Lake in the Kawarthas will enjoy electric light and power in their summer homes for the first time this year. Hydro workmen are busily engaged at present in building three transmission lines to service the summer colonies and settlers' homes.

One line is being built through the woods ,the posts embedded in solid rock from Burleigh Falls north to Mount Julian on the north shore of Stoney Lake. On the east shore of Clear Lake, a crew is staking a line one mile north and south of McCracken's Landing.

Juniper Island will not be reached this year, but it is possible the further expansion being contemplated may include the popular island resort.

In the past the only power and light available came from individual delco power plants located at some of the larger summer homes.

NEWLYWEDS ARE PUT UNDER ARREST

A police car containing Detective Sergeant Bill Meagher, Sergt. John Thompson and P. C. John Naples of the Peterborough police department swooped down on the home of Archie Menzies shortly before eight o'clock Thursday night and a few seconds afterward the traffice officer arrest, handcuffed tokether and and his new bride were placed unrushed to the poli ce station.

Here a special session of the night court had been convened and the members of the city police force, including Matron Mrs. Maguire, and Provincial Constable Silvester and Provincial Traffic Officers Lloyd McClure and Gordon Broughton had assembled in the court room.

The arrested newlyweds were hustled into court and thrust, still handcuffed into the prisoner's dock to find themselves arraigned before Chief Constable Samuel Newhall, who occupied an uhusual post on the bench for the occasion.

Then the Chief read the following illuminated address to Mr. and Mrs. Menzies:

"You have just recently crossed the threshold of married life and will no doubt encounter several pitfalls which we trust you can and will withstand. We all welcome you and it is our sincere hope that you both will be spared to enjoy to the fullest a long and pleasant married life. This little token is from the members of the police in and around the city of Peterborough and their and your friends and associates."

Then the newly married officer and his bride were presented with a splendid silver tea service, the presentation being made by Constable John Rogers who in a neat little speech expressed the best wishes of the gathering to Mr. and Mrs. Menzies.

Following a mystery presentation by Constable Gordon Puffer of a bulky looking parcel, marked to be "opened at home."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Menzies voiced their thanks for the gifts and the enjoyable affair was brought to a close with three cheers and a tiger for the newlyweds.

Becoming More Active

There is a stir of activity around the zoo at Peterborough's filtration plant these spring days as animals and birds once more take an interest in life. The smell of fresh spring air is to be found around the cages at the water's edge, and all wild life there is becoming a little restless, anxious to be back roaming the woods or soaring over clear blue lakes. Nothing ever ruffles the spirits of these swans in (1), however. They just sail serenely on, oblivious of the surroundings or the stares of the curious. But Young Bruin (2) is pacing back and forth across the cement floor of his narrow cage after a winter's hibernation. Bruin stood the winter well and now he is anxious to get some exercise. He is to be found here atop a tree in his cage. The rabbits enjoy complete freedom and hop about the spacious lawns surrounding the plant, nibbling far better grass than they would be able to find anywhere else. But the raw wind of the past few days is bothering them a little. Two of them (3) are huddling together as a cold blast sweeps across the lawn.

Body Identified Michael Heffernan

COBOURG, Ont., April 8 (C.P.). —James Heffernan of Peterborough after viewing the body of a man found in Rice Lake off Harwood yesterday said at an inquest here to-day he believed it to be his uncle, Michael Heffernan of Peterborough.

The body was too decomposed to render facial identification possible, but he was of the opinion that the general appearance and clothing was that of Michael Heffernan.

The inquest, adjourned until April 11. An autopsy will be performed. Heffernan has been missing since last fall.

KIWANIANS HEAR REV. LICHLEITER

"The world on the other side of the hill is just about the same as on this side," concluded Rev. George Lichleiter of College Street Baptist Church in an address at the Kiwanis Club luncheon Friday.

He had been born in a valley in the mountains of the south and for years had wondered what lay "on the other side of the hill,' 'the speaker related. When a boy he had not been privileged to journey into town, but a little later, when his grandfather settled with him for his years of work by giving him a decrepit horse, an old buggy and a set of harness, he set out over the hill. "The world has taught me that the sun doesn't always shine on the other side of the hill," he said. "And that triumph does not always lie at the end of the road. It has taught me that sorrow is the common language of the common world." The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Roy Andrews, of Toronto, his father-in-law. Adjutant Neil Warrander moved a vote of thanks.

The Kiwanis club will journey to Port Hope on Wednesday next for an evening meeting. Cars will leave the Empress Hotel between 4.30 and 5 o'clock.

HARVEY STAUNTON IS LAID TO REST

In a coffin draped with the Union Jack carried by fellow war veterans, the body of Harvey Staunton, who was killed when he tumbled from a moving freight train was buried at Little Lake Cemetery yesterday with full military honors.

One of the largest funerals to be held in Peterborough in many months the long procession of cars proceeded to the cemetery after an impressive service at his late residence, 854 George street. At the gate the mourners passed between two lines of soldiers, the guard of honor, heads bowed and guns reversed.

Members of the Red Patch Club, of which Mr. Staunton had been a charter member, directed the service at the wish of Mrs. Staunton. The Canadian Legion and other ex-service men attended in large numbers to pay homage to the man with whom they had served overseas. A large delegation was present from the Railroad union.

Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson of St. John's Anglican Church, conducted a brief graveside service. Three volleys from the guns of a firing party rang out over the grave and the Last Post and Reveille sounded. Members of the Canadian Legion and the Red Patch club filed past the open grave and dropped red poppies on the casket.

Honorary pallbearers at the funeral were past presidents of the Great War Veterans' association and the Canadian Legion. They were Robert Layfield, Robert Muir, E. Everitt, and Max Sloan. Active pallbearers were Melville Morrow, Gordon Wyatt, G. Fallon, L. Fontaine, H. Yelland, J. White, all of them members of the Red Patch club. G. Sage was bugler; William Gracie, color bearer; Major H. K. Clifton, parade marshal.

OVER THE LIMIT

SANTA FE, N.M., April 8 (AP). —With one toss of his line, D. B. Keller caught more fish than the law allows. He brought up a 28-pound catfish that had swallowed a smaller one already on his hook. The limit is not more than 25 pounds.

REV. BRAIN SPEAKS C.C.Y.M. MEETING

On Thursday evening the C.C.Y.M. local unit sponsored their second monthly educational meeting at the Mayfair Cafe. The speaker, Rev. R. T. F. Brain, was introduced by the local president, who presided, and addressed the club and attending friends on "The Significance of Fascism."

He compared the present economic system with a man of robust constitution refusing to admit illness while in the throes of it, and refusing to place himself in the hands of a competent physician. He defined Fascism as the union between capitalism and militarism who, by commercializing on the bewildered confusion created midst the oppressed middle class under times of economic and political stress to augment their strength with the view of controlling the economic, social and political life of the state.

This then is to admit that in order for Fascism to further its ends, individual rights will not be recognized and the speaker contended that we must make an effort to understand the forces which are trying to divide, demolish and devour us; the better then to cope with the looming cloud of Fascism which has darkened the horizon of democracy. He stated that there was too much sloppy thinking, not only among the people themselves but also among the leaders of our country.

Entertainment was provided by the C.C.Y.M. Glee Club. The sextet gave a selection of songs, accompanied by guitars and piano. Miss Minerva Isaacs sang a solo, choosing as her selection "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise." Bobby McDougall acted as master of ceremonies.

There was a large and appreciative audience. A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by W. G. Powell, and W. Wiggins seconded.

LINDSAY PROTESTS MACAULAY SPEECH

LINDSAY, April 8.—Strong protests come not only from the promade by Leopold Macaulay in the legislature on Wednesday to the effect that fishing was no longer any good in Sturgeon Lake. These protests come not noly from the proprietors of tourist resort on these waters, but also from citizens of the town, who feel that such a statement would keep tourists from visiting this district. The Victoria Yacht Club, an organization with a large membership, has acted promptly in the matter. An emergency meeting of the Club was held, and President John Murphy has forwarded a strong message of portest to Premier Hepburn, which contains the suggestion that Mr. Macaulay retract his statement.

The young resident of Eagle Lake, who set his friend drunk and then extracted the sum of $25.00 from his pocket, came before Magistrate Gee Thursday. He pleaded guilty and was given one month in jail.

The Community Bowling Club has organized with W. J. Hussey as president. It will join the Provincial Lown Bowling Assocation and will take part in the games with the British touring bowlers in June.

CAPE IMMIGRATION

TO ADDRESS ROTARY.

Rotarian R. E. Cutting will be the speaker at Monday's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club.

CAMPBELLFORD COURT.

Magistrate O. A. Langley is holding police court in Campbellford this afternoon with a lengthy list of cases to be disposed of. Judgment is to be given in a number of slot machine cases.

DOG TAG SEASON.

Dog licenses expire this month and owners of canines are reminded of the fact that new tags will be necessary after the end of April. Already there has been a fairly brisk demand for licenses and so far some 64 dog owners have provided their pets with the necessary accessory for next year.

TO PRESENT CANTATA.

On Sunday evening next in Trinity United church the full choir will sing the beautiful Lenten cantata "Olivet to Calvary" by J. H. Maunder under the direction of Miss Mabel Clarry, organist and choir leader. The choir will be assisted by M. H. Park, tenor soloist, and the other soloists wil be Mrs. R. Cowan, H. Lee, M. Gordon and C. Crookshank.

PLANE FORCED DOWN.

During the snow storm this morning a Royal Canadian Air Force plane en route from Camp Borden to Trenton was compelled to make a forced landing on the farm of Garbutt Mann near Bridgenorth. The pilot, who was alone brought his machine down very skilfully and accomplished the landing without damaging his plane. He remained grounded when the snow continued to come down.

ANOTHER CHARGED.

Donald Purdy, 18, was charged before Magistrate Langley in police court this morning with having broken into St. Peter's school, Reid street, on April 5 and was remanded until Thursday of next week. He was the fifth to be arrested by the police in connection with this case, four others having been arraigned yesterday and thir cases will also be heard on Thursday. Purdy pleaded not guilty this morning.

NO CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

There are no cases of scarlet fever or typhoid in the village of Madoc as the public has been lead to believe. Recently it was reported that Orley Bennett had died of typhoid fever and since then rumour has had it that there were two more cases of typhoid in the village but inquiry shows that neither of these cases have shown any indication of the disease. No cases have been reported of scarlet fever in Madoc or vicinity.

MAY NUMBER WAGONS.

Garbage wagons may be numbered in future if a suggestion from the relief committee to Herbert Withers is acted upon. Ald. Herb. McCannan complained to the relief committee that some garbage collectors are refusing to follow instructions to place covers over their vehicles while ashes and garbage are being collected. The suggestion that wagons be numbered so that names of drivers who refused to cover them could be learned, came from Ald. Malcolm McIntyre.

The Rambling REPORTERS

CHOIR LISTENED TO BROADCAST.

The hockey bug has bitten that most serene of all groups, the church choir. It was to be expected that the Relief Committee would hurry through Thursday night's meeting in time to hear most of the Chicago Black Hawks - Toronto Maple Leafs' game; but when hockey groped its way to the environs of the pulpit, that's coming near fanaticism.

The only condition under which the members of Knox United church choir would attend choir practice last night was that a radio should be installed that they might listen to the game. After each selection was rehearsed the group turned for relaxation to the radio broadcast of the game. It may have been just a coincidence, but when the Leafs were away out in front, the choir was singing the Hallelujah chorus.—J.F.P.

RETURNS TO COUNCIL

Ald. Malcolm McIntyre returned to the city council fold at Thursday evening's relief committee meeting and came in for a good deal of kidding. "Were you lonesome for us, Malcolm?" queried several members. "Not a bit of it," the old-new alderman retored staunchly.

Continued prodding failed to budge Ald. McIntyre from his stand, that he had not missed his old colleagues. "There were too many hockey games to listen to," interjected Relief Officer Art Metheral. His suspicion may have been correct, for when the meeting failed to commence precisely on time, Ald. McIntyre leaned to the chairman, Ald. James Dutton, and hinted "Hockey match on tonight."—J.F.P.

NEW ORE MILL IS BEING DISCUSSED AT CORDOVA PLANT

T. P. Lancaster was a business visitor to The Examiner Thursday afternoon, and passing through the editorial office chatted for a while about improving prospects in the vicinity of Havelock.

"You may have noticed in the report of the annual meeting of Canadian Mining and Smelting Company a few days ago that they recommended construction of a 100-ton mill at Cordova," Mr. Lancaster said. "It seems to me that is the most important announcement East Peterborough has heard in a long time. It corroborates reports that the company has been working into what is considered to be profitable ore at the new depths they have been reaching.

"A reducing mill of that capacity would employ anywhere from two to three hundred men, I should say, and if Smelters goes ahead and erects it, you can easily imagine that it would make a big change at Cordova. It would become a new town."

Mr. Lancaster said he hesitated to express any opinion that might seem exaggerative, but he added that he was impressed by the reference to Cordova at Smelters' annual meeting.

"It surprises me that the City of Peterborough is not more alive to possibilities over in the east. They may wake up one of these days to find that a lot of business they should be getting is going to Belleville.

"I know positively that quite a large sum of Smelters' money is spent in Peterborough every week, but the city seems to be as indifferent about it as the county is about the road from Havelock to Cordova. Hastings county has been building a better road from Marmora to Cordova and there is the likelihood that business may go across the border instead of to Havelock and Peterborough."

Mr. Lancaster also said a new company was recently formed to operate on property adjoining the Ontario Rock Company in the manufacture of a special road surfacing material.

PARIS TO BUENOS AIRES BY AIR

A passenger air service from Paris to Buenos Aires will be inaugurated this summer. The 9,000-mile flight will be made in four days.

LEO MURPHY IS NEW CONSTABLE POLICE FORCE

Second Appointment Is Delayed By Commission

Leo Murphy, 26, married and a native of Peterborough, was appointed a member of the Peterborough police force at a special meeting of the Police Commission Thursday evening. his salary to be $1200 a year and his appointment to date from April 1, under the usual conditions of a six month period of probation.

Murphy was chosen from a final field of four candidates. He has been acting constable since December and has given a good account of himself, having participated in a number of recent raids and earned the esteem of the members of the police department with whom his selection will be most popular.

The intention was to have appointed two new constables at last night's meeting to replace former officers John Deannard and Joseph Wheeler, dismissed from the force but the arrival of a deputation composed of Ald. R. M. Glover and James Dutton, former mayor Roland Denne and former alderman John D. Fitzpatrick to plead for another chance for ex-constable Deannard threw a monkey wrench into the proceedings and it was finally decided, with Judge Smoke, chairman of the commission dissenting, to defer the appointment of a second constable until the next regular meeting of the commission on the last Wednesday in April when the police governing body will have to decide whether they will reinstate the sixty-year-old Deannard, a veteran of the force, starting him as a new officer with the initial salary of $1200 a year or adhere to the earlier order of dismissal and select another constable from the applications received.

All three members of the commission, Judge Smoke, chairman, Police Magistrate O. A. Langley and Mayor James Hamilton were present. It was decided to confine the meeting to the purpose for which it had been called, the question of filling the vacancies in the force.

A Useful Citizen

Ald. Glover was the first member of the deputation to address the commission and he declared that former officer Deannard had to his knowledge been a useful citizen in many ways. "I have seen a good deal," said Ald. Glover, "of the interest he has shown in the young boys of the city. He has organized baseball and football teams and looked after them well. In connection with Brock St. rink I have had a chance to observe him and I have found that he handled crowds courteously and in an extremely efficient manner." Ald. Glover urged that Deannard be given another chance to demonstrate his ability to be of useful service to the city, adding, however, that he would not want to see the dismissed officer reinstated if he were not satisfactory to Chief Newhall.

Ald. Dutton said that he had known Deannard for a long time and his experience had been that he was a competent officer. As a member of the Rotary Club Ald. Dutton said that he had had an opportunity to see the interest Deannard had taken in the work of that organization. "We recognize the difficulty that exists here," the speaker said, "and we do not want to undermine authority." However, he was certain that the reinstatement of Deannard would meet with the approval of a great many people and he felt sure that if the ex-officer were given another chance, even if demoted, he would do everything in his power to justify the confidence shown in him.

Recognizes Problem

Roland Denne said that as an ex-member of the police commission he knew the problem that had to be dealt with and yet he felt, knowing

Only 99 Bills, 20 Rejections Feature "Kid Glove" Session

Like All Predecessors In Hepburn Regime Hydro Plays Leading Role

TORONTO, April 8 (CP).—Ontario legislators prepared today to end their "kid gloves" session—the shortest and least acrimonious since Premier Hepburn's Government first took office in 1934. With prorogation scheduled for mid-afternoon, it will be the first time in years the Assembly's meeting concluded just before Easter.

Second session of the second Hepburn administration that was returned in the general election last October 6, it was definitely a "Hydro" session like every one of its predecessors under the Hepburn regime. This time, however, debate centred on new contracts with Quebec power companies, while from 1935 until 1937 members discussed cancellation of contracts.

The Hydro question, however, will be revived during the Legislature's recess. A special 12-man committee will start May 2 to probe negotiation of the new contracts with the Gatineau, Beauharnois and Maclaren-Quebec Power Companies and any other Hydro matters.

Little Bitterness.

Absence of serious charges, of long night sittings and of vicious crossfire marked the session. Following Conservative Leader Leopold Macaulay's early promise of co-operation, it proceeded on a fairly even keel. Only six divisions of the House occurred and two of them were on matters not entirely related to party policies.

Work of the session that opened February 23 was light. Only 99 bills were introduced and 20 of these were rejected. Veteran legislative officials declare this represented the smallest number of bills considered in their experience.

The Quebec contract situation was aired early in the session and furnished a debating topic down to Wednesday night when the House rejected a proposal by A. W. Roebuck, former Attorney-General and Hydro commissioner, that proclamation of the contracts be deferred until the people approved in a plebiscite.

A Reversed Policy

Conservatives argued the government campaigned in the general election on a "back to Niagara" power policy and this was reversed in December when the new contracts were signed, replacing agreements cancelled in 1935. Mr. Roebuck, who led the fight for cancellation, declared the government had no mandate from the people to make the change.

Member of the government until he resigned last spring over disagreement with Premier Hepburn's oppositon to the Committee for Industrial Organization during the Oshawa strike, Mr. Roebuck said in debate one of the "motives" for his resignation was because he knew—although he had no proof—a new Beauharnois contract was in prospect.

Mr. Macaulay's demand for a probe of the contracts was granted by Premier Hepburn and the 12-man committee, headed by Attorney-General Conant, was named. The premier, however, refused to add Mr. Roebuck to the body, contending it would be a case of sitting as judge on his own acts since incidents occurring when he was a hydro commissioner might come under review.

Party lines were drawn on four occasions—divisions concluding the address and budget debates, on the power bill and a Conservative resolution yesterday regretting the government placed no unemployment insurance program before the House.

A Unanimous Vote

Unanimously, however, the House voted on a resolution asking the Dominion government to recognize the priority of the provinces in the matter of personal income tax. The vote was 74-0 in favor of the resolution. The other division, on the resolution seeking federal authority to legalize sweepstakes for hospitals, was closer and the sweepstakes supporters won 48-34.

The legislature broke about 50-50 in using its powers of "creation." It "made" two lawyers, Major Alex Lewis, clerk of the House, and William E. MacDonald of Mimico but refused to allow chiropractors and drugless practitioners to use the title of doctor. It also made aviator Al Cheeseman at Port Arthur alderman. Elected in December, he failed to qualify because he was absent helping Sir Hubert Wilkins seek the lost Russian fliers in the Arctic.

Important health legislation was enacted but it aroused little contention. Pasteurization of milk was made compulsory in towns and cities and the government relieved municipalities of the cost of caring for their tuberculosis patients in sanatoria. Steps were taken to prevent unauthorized use of the designation hospital.

Raids On Funds Blocked

Sinking fund "raids" by municipalities were frowned upon. Toronto, Peterborough and Belleville were prevented from altering these funds. Government policy also prevented creation of two new cities—Forest Hill and York—on Toronto's northwestern border. The government plans appointment of a commission to consider the entire question of Toronto's suburban area.

Legislative approval was given a change in the $1,200,000 will of Elsie P. Williams of London. The House validated settlement of the will and the city was permitted to spend major portion of it, after satisfying certain claims, for a library and hospital addition instead of on upkeep of her country home as she willed.

The government embarked on a policy of toll-free international bridges. Seeking to erect a new structure at Niagara Falls to replace the Fall's View bridge that collapsed in January's ice jam, it had a bill passed giving it control of bridges crossing any stream whose bed is vested in province.

Premier Hepburn estimated a budget surplus of $3,013,702 for the fiscal year that ended March 31 and budgeted for a surplus of $28,677 in the new fiscal year. The budget called for increased expenditure on health and education.

Chief feature of the education program this session was establishment of a board of reference to hear disputes between teachers and school boards. A Judge will head the board, with the complaining teacher and school board each naming a member.

A $2,000,000 flood control and water conservation scheme on the Grand River in Western Ontario gained approval but the bill authorizing this will not come into effect until the province is assured the Dominion government will pay 37½ per cent of the cost. The province will pay a similar share and participating municipalities the remaining portion.

Actual work wil be carried out by the Grand River Conservation Commission, incorporated by the bill. This commission received wide powers to erect flood control works.

WIDE AWAKES MEET

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, April 8. — The Wide Awake Mission Band of Trinity United Church held their regular meeting on Monday afternoon. Dorothy Brooks led in prayer. The Scripture was read by Rosena Brockley. When the memory verse was learned, Henrietta Parker took up the offering.

Mrs. Forsythe took the worship story. An instrumental by Jean MacTavish; readings by Beth Magee and Katherine Evans; two more chapters of Cuffy Bear were read. Children formed groups to make their scrap books. After the distribution of the World Friends, the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

DETROIT TROLLEY STRIKE SETTLED

DETROIT, April 8.— (AP).— A "mutually satisfactory" agreement ending the street car strike which forced 700,000 Detroit commuters to find other means of transportation for more than 24 hours was reached to-day.

the settlement and return to work. nounced the settlement.

Terms of the settlement were withheld pending a meeting being arranged at which members of Division 26 of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, which called the strike yesterday, could vote on the agreement.

Union officials said the meeting would be held as early as possible so that the strikers could ratify the settlement and retur nto work.

"We have met with the Street Railway Commission and the Mayor and they have dealt with us fairly," said Edward A. McInerney, union president. "We feel that our men will accept the agreement and return to work as soon as possible."

BANK'S OPPOSITION BLAMED AS SNAG IN S.C. $25 PLAN

EDMONTON, April 8 (CP).—With likelihood of a night session tonight, the Alberta legislature will turn to further study of legislation today and possibly wind up the 1938 session Friday.

The report of the Alberta Social Credit Board was submitted to the legislature yesterday. The report said payment of dividends of $25 monthly was possible but that opposition of the "banks and financial institutions supported by the federal government" stood in the way.

The report said the board "seeks co-operation of the entire assembly to overcome these political obstacles overruling all parties and considerations to the establishment of democracy in our province."

Analyzing the capital assets of the province, the report said that if natural resources were exploited at the rate of one half of one half per cent per annum, the standard of living would be increased eight times and would yield the average family of four an income of $6,000 a year at existing price levels.

Shifting of taxation from individuals to institutions and changing tax base from property to production and income had been recommended, the report said, and it emphasized need of the province having control of its own police force.

Physically Possible.

A copy of the pledge for unity was included in the report. The pledge declared the demands for a dividend of 25 a month to all bona fide citizens and a lower cost to live was "physically possible and must therefore be financially possible."

The pledge required the legislature members to uphold the board and it's technicians and to avoid provocative utterances and that the pledge would be binding when signed by 60 per cent of the members.

The board declared that it was practicable to implement the mandate of:

"A. Distribution to every adult citizen in the province of a monthly dividend of 25 over and above earnings, if any.

"B. Arranging for this to be accomplished by a reduction in prices to consumers to the great advantage of all.

"C. Reducing taxation to less than one half of the present level."

DOMINION TORIES RALLY IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA, April 8.—(CP).—Conservatives from coast to coast will gather here to-morrow to start preparations and fix a date for the national convention to choose a leader in succession to Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

At the Conservative conference held here a month ago, when Mr. Bennett announced his physical condition would force him to resign the leadership at the close of the present session of Parliament, it was decided to hold a national convention in Ottawa. It is believed the date will be late in June.

Several committees wil have to be appointed, most important of which will be the local organization committee to make the actual arrangements for the convention. It is expected there will be at lease 2,500 delegates and the Colliseum at the Exhibition Grounds will likely be scene of their deliberations.

Other committees will deal with transpottation arrangements, housing, press and publicity.

Speculation continues on the person who will be chosen leader to succeed Mr. Bennett but even those high in the councils of the party profess to be completely at a loss as to who will be the candidates.

Those most frequently mentioned are Hon. R. J. Manion, former Minister of Railways and Canals, J. Earl Lawson, member for York South and Minister of National Revenue at the time of the general election in 1935, and Denton Massey, youngest of the three, member for Toronto-Greenwood.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader in the Senate, former Pirme Minister, is frequently mentioned as a likely possibility, but it is believed by many he would refuse the honor. He will be 64 in June.

the dismissed officer and his family as he did, that Deannard, if given another chance, would handle his job as an officer satisfactorily. He urged consideration for the veteran ex-constable.

J. D. Fitzpatrick told the commission that soon after the dismissal of Deannard he had been approached by several citizens urging that that officer be given another opportunity to make good and that afterward hundreds of citizens had made the same request. From investigations he had made he was satisfied that while Deannard had made mistakes in the past he could be counted upon to make a sincere effort to make good if given another chance. "I have felt it was my duty to come here and make this appeal," said Mr. Fitzpatrick.

When the deputation withdrew a letter was read from James Lynch, druggist, who said that he had recommended Deannard when he was first appointed to the police force and that he had no hesitation now in recommending his reinstatement.

Judge Smoke Dissents

Judge Smoke lost no time in making his position clear. There should be no reinstatement of Deannard, he told his colleagues. Many citizens had said to him that it would be a mistake to take that officer back.

"If we were to give him another chance, we could not appoint two new officers," remarked Magistrate Langley.

Both he and Mayor Hamilton admitted they were in a quandry about the matter. Magistrate Langley said that Deannard had never given him any trouble as a magistrate and that he had always accepted his evidence in court with confidence and Mayor Hamilton remarked that he had known Deannard so long that he was at a loss to make up his mind.

"I will move," said Judge Smoke, "that no action be taken in regard to the reinstatement of Deannard. There is no place on the police force for officers who mix up with bootleggers."

There was no seconder for the chairman's motion.

Magistrate Langley then moved that only one new constable be appointed and that the Deannard matter be left over for further consideration.

There was no seconder for that either. "We might as well clear it up now," said the Mayor, who suggested that before anything was decided upon the applicants be interviewed.

Interview Applicants

Of the six originally selected for the final field, only four were on hand and they were brought before the commission one at a time, in the following order, Leo Murphy, 26, Peterborough; Clair McGillen, 26, Peterborough; J. Ashmore, 25, Lindsay, and William Whibbs, 32, of Peterborough and formerly of Douro township. All four were asked a number of questions by members of the commission and then asked to retire.

Judge Smoke moved that no action be taken in regard to the request of former officer Deannard for reinstatement and that Leo Murphy and Clair McGillen be appointed as constables under the usual conditions.

Once again the chairman failed to get a seconder for his motion.

Magistrate Langley moved that Leo Murphy be appointed and that that the matter of a second appointment be left over for further consideration.

That proposal had no seconder either.

Then Mayor Hamilton tried his hand. His motion was Leo Murphy be appointed and that John Deannard be reinstated as a new officer at a salary of $1200 a year. Nobody seconded that motion and the affair was still deadlocked.

Finally Magistrate Langley moved the appointment of Murphy at $1200 a year, on a six months' term of probation and that the appointment of another constable be deferred until the next meeting of the commission.

This time Mayor Hamilton seconded the motion which was declared carried on the votes of Magistrate Langley and Mayor Hamilton. Chairman Judge Smoke registered a negative vote, not because he did not favor the appointment of Murphy, as he explained, but because that he was opposed to any further consideration of the Deannard case.

It was decided that Murphy's appointment should be dated from April 1.

SENATE HOLIDAYS UNTIL MAY 3RD

OTTAWA, April 8.—(CP).—Vigorous debate on Canada's railway problem and a controversy over a bill aimed at widening divorce in Canada featured the 10 weeks' intermittent deliberations of the Senate since Parliament opened Jan. 27. The Chamber adjourned yesterday for the Easter recess and will not convene again until May 3.

Taking the initiative on both the railway and divorce issues, the Senate made a conspicuous contribution to Parliamentary discussion.

As the Upper House wound up its pre-Easter work yesterday, Royal assent was given by Mr. Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret of the Supreme Court of Canada, acting in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, to 50 bills, 32 of which were divorce bills. A few were private members' bills and the rest government measures.

A bill amending the Copyright Act with a view to widening the classes exempt from paying fees to the Performing Rights Society was held up pending opinions from the external affairs and justice departments. Senator J. T. Haig (Con. Winnipeg) protested against delaying the bill's passage.

Debate on the resolution of Senator C. P. Beaubien (Con., Montreal) urging the government to settle Canada's railway problem "in order to stop the ruinous loss made each year by the Dominion through the Canadian National Railways and which already amounts to several billion dollars," has taken up the greater part of the Senate's time since Parliament opened.

HEADACHE AFTER HEADACHE

Now She's Free From Them

A woman writes:—"I would like everyone who suffers from headaches to try Kruschen Salts. Before taking Kruschen I was seldom free from a headache. But since I have been taking it regularly I have hardly had a headache, for which I am very thankful. I have been taking a small dose of Kruschen every morning in a glass of warm water, before my breakfast, and I feel so well."—(Mrs.) A.E.D.

How do you deal with headaches? Do you just take something to deaden the pain, without getting rid of the trouble which causes the pain?

Headaches can generally be traced to a disordered stomach and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more—from that cause. And that is just how Kruschen Salts bring swift and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen aids Nature to cleanse your body completely of clogging waste matter.—advt.

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Barbara Kingsley, pretty young society editor of the Martinsville Post, has just "covered" another wedding. She is tired of the routine but Peter Baxter, managing editor, cheers her fading spirits. Garry Page, New York newspaper man in town for the wedding, misses his train back and Barbara, at the train to pick up pictures, offers to drive him to the Junction to catch the last train that night. They have dinner and at the Junction, run into the wedding party, including Barbara's proud cousin Julia. A few weeks later Natalie Kendall a close friend of Barbara's who is a New York fashion columnist wires Barbara of an opening on a child magazine. Barbara decides to take the position and Natalie meets her upon her arrival in New York. Barbara learns that Garry Page is a good friend of Natalie's. Then she phones him. Next day Garry sails for a few weeks in Europe. Barbara and several other friends of his, including Ruth Merryweather, an attractive heiress, are at the pier to see him off.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 6

GARRY was holding her hands, saying goodbye, and Barbara pushed away the memory of the breakfast he had shared with Ruth.

"Maybe I'm a cockeyed goof, Barbara, but I wanted to see you. And I'll be back in a month."

Then very quickly the whole gay party was on the dock, the gangplank was being taken in, the orchestra was playing gaily, the ship was moving. At the rail Garry and the producer were waving their hats. Barbara waved her handkerchief. She wondered if she imagined it, or if Garry smiled down at her as the boat began to pull away.

She had not time to contemplate. A man with cynical eyes was speaking. "Have you had breakfast?" he asked.

"Some coffee."

"Good! Nobody can live long on coffee. I missed Ruth's breakfast because I didn't get up." Ruth's breakfast! Then Garry hadn't invited her—she had asked him. "How about you and me going over to Mario's and getting some scrambled eggs and bacon and fruit and coffee—much more coffee?"

"I think it would be grand!" Barbara answered, and knew that the man must wonder why all of a sudden she came to life. So Ruth had given a party for Garry! He had not asked the girl to be his guest on this, his last morning.

He told her his name as the cab took them uptown. He was Jack Metcalf. Barbara recognized the name. He wrote books. A couple of them had been best sellers. He was quite tall and thin and he gave the impression of forever being slightly bored. His lips tiwsted ironically sometimes but unexpectedly a twinkle would come into his deepset eyes. He was an easy person to talk to, though.

"Although it may be because I'm happy," Barbara reflected.

"Known Garry Page long?" he asked as they were being served.

"I met nim last summer."

"Know Ruth?"

"I met her this morning. I liked her."

"She's aces with a lot of us. I hope she doesn't get hurt any more."

Barbara glanced up quickly. Was he trying to imply that Garry was Ruth's and she might be taking him away?

He went on. "Ruth was engaged—madly in love—with a nice enough person but a girl from out-of-town took him away from her. It didn't happen very long ago. Maybe you'll be meeting the man and the new girl. They haven't been married long. It's better for you not to know them when you see them so I won't tell their names."

Then he changed the subject: "Where are you going to live?"

"I have to search for a place."

"An apartment?"

"Not at first—"

"Ever seen Garry's rooms?"

"No, I just came yesterday, you see."

"He has a nice setup. My lease is up so I'm staying there this month while I hunt around. Why not come over for tea this afternoon? Say, around half-past five? A few others may drop in."

When Barbara told Natalie over the telephone, where she was going, the older girl gasped. "Babbs, does he know you're staying with me?"

"I honestly don't know. No, I guess I didn't mention it."

"Good! I'm going along with you, my dear!"

Barbara was only mildly interested in Natalie's announcement. Natalie probably knew the author well, and anybody went to anybody else's house at tea time in New York, unless the hour was being spent in a quiet place where music and soft lights and low voices added intrigue to the twilight znoe.

However, when Jack came to the door with his easy, long-legged grace, she caught the surprise in his eyes although he quickly banished it. One thing was uppermost in Barbara's mind: Jack Metcalf was not glad to see Natalie.

"It is a surprise, Natalie," he was saying. "You are looking as charming as ever—younger, I believe."

"And you are as flattering as of old, Sir Launcelot," Natalie answered. "I'm chaperoning."

"Chaperoning? My dear Natalie, whatever gave you the idea that a guest of mine needed that old-fashioned encumbrance? Not that you're old-fashioned, Natalie—forgive me. Or are you?"

"Very." She went into the fire that had been kindled against the coldness of the rainy day. "I like Garray's rooms."

There were deep, comfortable chairs and divans. Rows of books lined the walls, and the firelight shone on polished copper and brass. It was a man's room. Instantly Barbara liked it. She wished that she could get acquainted with it alone. These two people, though one of them was Natalie, spoiled it for her.

Jack Metcalf had thrown open a door. "Want to leave your coats in here?"

The door led into the bedroom, which was furnished in the same mode as the living room. It had a large desk and notebooks. There were a few good prints, and a careless assortment of photographs overflowing a leather holder. A few had fallen on the floor. Barbara stooped to retrieve them. One was a photograph of a famous actor. The other was a girl. She recognized the face— Ruth Merryweather. She did not mean to read the inscription but the letters grew and grew until they blotted out the face: "To Garry, in memory of something, Ruth."

In memory of something — in memory of what? Three breathless words, a snow ride through Central park, or a magic moment on somebody's terrace with the bridges, hanging slim and luminous, against the sky and river? In memory of something—

She put the picture away with steady hands. Jack had said there might be other guests. She hoped there would be. She would be very gay, very happy. That is, the people would think she was. An idiotic idea seized her. Had Jack Metcalf meant for the picture to fall? But why should he take such an interest in hurting her? Or did he want to be kind? This morning she might have thought so. Not now. She had found something she did not like in his eyes when he had seen Natalie. Something in the man's eyes, as he stood there so tall, so dark, so handsome, so sure of his charm. Yes that was it. His sureness—But what had he to do with Natalie?

And what interest could he have in her, just from the middlewest? Did he think she was going to be swept away by his name and grace? That she would be another victim, someone to put on a pin, like a butterfly, so she would squirm and squirm for a chapter in a book?

Across the room her eyes met in the square mirror—Garry's mirror—and held their own reflection steadily. She was small, but she was sturdy. She would keep her feet in their low-heeled brogues on the ground. She was glad that she had not worn something fragile and decorative to this tea. For some reason she did not understand she had chosen brogues and a green knitted dress. Maybe because she did not want to go to Garry's in a party frock.

From beyond came the low, well-trained murmur of voices, where Natalie, who had rejoined Jack, talked to the author.

Barbara's remark was planned to be light and trivial as she joined the two.

"How do you keep your voices so beautifully modulated? Against this overture of outside noise—" that was rather bad—the noise was muted by the time it climbed 23 flights to Garry's rooms—"I should think you would go around screaming gently."

"A New York habit"—Jack answered lazily. "We eat out most of the time and we don't want our neighbors to overhear our words."

"You have such secrets that it matters?"

Jack's eyes met Natalie's for an imperceptible second but Barbara saw the glance. "Sometimes. In the days when people did their dining behind locked doors, people made a lot of light love. That's where the habit sarted. Gay love, Barbara—the kind to be cherished for the evening and forgotten day after tomorrow."

"But women and elephants have such a time with their memories," Natalie was saying. Barbara's eyes opened wider.

"An airmail stamp for your thoughts," Jack was saying wickedly." (TO Be Continued)

Bad Manners at Table Betray Poor Breeding

You're Judged By Your Manners

Here's Letty — wrecking her chance to get into the smart crowd she admires. Etiquette blunders—such as spreading jam over a whole slice of bread — betray her lack of breeding.

She doesn't know that well-bred people break off, butter and spread with jam, one morsel at a time. She smothers her fish in tartar sauce. The deft way is to dab a little sauce with the fork on each bite of fish. She spoons up all her bouillon, not knowing it's proper to drink it straight from the cup, after sipping with a spoon to see if it's cool enough.

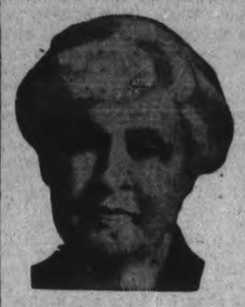
If Woman Doesn't Have Something Real To Worry About She Creates An Imaginary Cause And Seems To Thrive On It

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know why women worry so much more than men do. He says: "No one can fix a woman so she won't worry, because if she hasn't a real trouble she can manufacture a synthetic one that is just as good to lose sleep over. She can worry herself sick over things that happened twenty years ago, and over things that might possibly happen ten years hence.



"She can spoil the flavor of her cake by worrying over the fear of not having bread tomorrow. She can worry over having money and not having it; over being sick and being well; over everything that can happen and can't happen. The woman who worried herself into nervous prostration over her baby daughter growing up and maybe marrying a man who would beat her is no character out of the comic strip. She is our mother, or our wife, and she spoils all of the pleasure she might have and gets crows' feet borrowing trouble about things that never happen. Why does she do it?

Well, doubtless it is atavistic. Women were born that way. Besides, they enjoy it. Women never consider it quite the correct thing to be happy, and they get a lot of comfort out of secret sorrows that they can confide to anybody who will listen. But, if they worry more than men do, it is because they have more to worry over.

Consider looks, for instance, which is one of the things that women have to worry over from the cradle to the grave. A man's looks are strictly between him, his barber and his tailor. He doesn't have to acquire a perpetual headache over retaining his boyish figure, nor letting his hair get grizzled, nor being easy on the eyes. If he is intelligent, interesting and good-mannered, nobody cares whether he looks like heck or Robert Taylor.

But a woman hasn't the blessed privilege of being homely, for, no matter what else she is, she is expected to be a runner-up for Miss America. So she has to worry over getting fat, her complexion, her hair and her clothes, and wear herself to a frazzle trying to circumvent nature.

There are dates that the girls have to worry over and the boys don't. From the time a girl is 16 she lives on a constant strain of anxiety as to whether she will be a hit with the boys or left out in the cold. She worries over whether Tom is going to come by in his flivver and take her for a ride, whether Dick is going to ask her to the movies, whether Harry will give her a rush. And when she goes to a party she is simply sick with worrying over the fear that nobody will cut in on her dances and that her escort will be stuck with her for the whole evening.

But no boy has to worry over dates because he makes 'em. All he has to do is to pick and choose among the Janes. If one won't go with him, another will, so why bother? The same thing holds true of marriage. Every girl worries for fear she will be an old maid, but no man has to worry over being an old bachelor. He can get married whenever he likes.

Women's prize worry is over their husbands. They worry over their husbands' affections; they worry over the danger of sirens stealing their husbands from them; they worry over their husbands taking them for granted, but the least of a man's worries is the likelihood of his wife ever ceasing to love him, or of her ever being stolen from him by a sleek-haired gigolo.

When other worries fail, a woman can always worry over her children. A mother can keep herself worried down to skin and bones over her children's health, their manners, their associates, their being run over by automobiles, whom they marry and everything they do and leave undone. And she never can understand why her husband just takes the children in his stride and goes calmly to sleep at night when grown boys and girls are out, without walking the floor worrying until their return.

Women get old before their time worrying over getting old. Maybe men don't like it any better than women do, but they know they can't help it and so they let themselves get fat and comfortable and bald without wearing themselves out trying to look 19 when they are 90.

But you needn't sympathize with women because they worry so. They are having the time of their lives when they are worrying the most. DOROTHY DIX.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South's opening bid on this deal was 1-Heart. West overcalled with 1-Spade, North jumped to 4-Hearts and South to 6-Hearts, which West doubled.

Holding the trump A and what seemed like a sure trick in either spades or diamonds, West felt the hand warranted a double. He led the diamond K, on which the spade 3 was discarded from dummy and the trick won with the A. After that the opponents had no chance to pick up a trick outside of the high trump.

What a different story had West elected to lead the spade K! His surprise lead of the diamond K he felt would be more likely to set up a trick, in view of the bidding. It just happened that the lead he selected was the wrong one.

BEDTIME STORY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND SUSIE'S DRESS

When it was almost time for the bell in the Hollow Tree School to ring, one morning, a knock sounded on the side door of Uncle Wiggily's bungalow. The rabbit gentleman was just finishing shaving to get ready to go adventuring so Nurse Jane said:

"I'll see who it is, Mr. Longears."

"All right," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "But look from the side window first to make sure it isn't the Fox. First I shaved his tail and then when he came to get me, carrying an open umbrella over it so no one would see how silly he looked, I doused him with a hose April shower. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"So you did," laughed Nurse Jane.

"It may be the Fox will try to get even with me," said Uncle Wiggily, "and he may be knocking at my door."

"No, it isn't the Fox," reported Nurse Jane after she had taken a look. "It's Susie Littletail. Shall I let her in?"

Friends

"Oh, yes, of course," said Uncle Wiggily. "Susie and I are good friends. I used to live with the Littletails you know, Nurse Jane.

"Yes, I know," said the muskrat lady housekeeper. 'I lived there, too, before you got married. Come in, Susie," she invited and in hopped a cute little rabbit girl, almost like Uncle Wiggily's twins, Jingle and Jangle."

"Good morning, Susie," greeted Uncle Wiggily as he rubbed some witchhazel on his shaved face. "It was sweet of you to come to see me. But won't you be late for school?"

"Oh, I am going to hop along to school right away, Uncle Wiggily," said Susie. "I just stopped in to show you my new dress."

"Oh, so that's a new dress is it Susie?" asked Mr. Longears.

"Yes," answered the little rabbit girl. "Isn't it lovely and such a pretty color?" She spread out the new dress and looked down at it.

"It is pretty," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "But don't be too proud of your new dress, Susie. Be proud enough to keep it neat and clean but don't think too much about it."

"I won't, Uncle Wiggily," Susie promised. "But I don't believe any other little animal girl in the Hollow Tree School will have such a nice new dress as I have, will they?"

"Tut! Tut! I'm afraid you're getting proud, Susie. It is fine to have a new dress but don't try to be stuck up over others who have none.

Warning

"No, I won't, Uncle Wiggily," promed Susie. "But I'm sure Miss Mouse will say 'Oh, how lovely!' when I walk in school. Now I'm going, Uncle Wiggily!"

"Good-by, Susie. And remember what I said," warned Mr. Longears.

But Susie was humming a song and looking at her new dress as she hopped along to school. Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily hopped out to find an adventure. And in a short time Uncle Wiggily heard a voice crying:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"Why, that sounds like Susie Littletail!" said Uncle Wiggily.

"Help! Help! Help!" was cried again.

"It is Susie!" shouted Uncle Wiggily and down the path he saw poor Susie just crawling out of a mud puddle. "Why, Susie what happened?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"I—I was walking along and—looking down at my new dress," sobbed Susie. "and I walked into the mud puddle! Oh, boo hoo! Look at my new dress now!"

"It isn't much to look at," said Mr. Longears. "But come home with me and Nurse Jane will put one of Jingle's old dresses on to wear to school." So this was done and Nurse Jane washed the new dress.

And if the automobile isn't too proud to speak to the sidlewalk scooter I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Buster's bundle.

MISS BESSIE REID DESCRIBES AIR RAID ON MISSION IN CHINA

Former Peterborough Resident Experienced Two Air Raids

Despatches the other day told of a heavy bombardment of a Methodist Mission at Chengchow on April 3 by Japanese bombing planes and of Miss Bessie Reid of Kingston having a very narrow escape from death.

Interestingly enough friends of Miss Reid, who was a resident of Peterborough some sixteen or seventeen years ago and was connected with the Free Methodist Church, have just had a letter from her in which she describes an earlier raid upon the mission at Chengchow.

"It is difficult," writes Miss Reid, "to get reliable statistics on the damage done in last Monday's raid but as near as we can guess there were about 800 killed and wounded. Two hundred were looked after at the Baptist Hospital and of course all the other hospitals also had their quota. There were 15 planes and about 60 bombs were dropped. We cannot say whether or not attack on the Baptist hospital was deliberate. It would seem as if it were but the three bombs dropped there were small ones and did not do much damage. If they had used the large ones like they used around the station, etc., there might be a sadly different story to tell. The chief objective seemed to be military headquarters.

Concentrated Suffering

"Pitiful stories are told by those suffering in the hospital here. For example in one home of ten people, four were killed, three wounded and three escaped. Two small children, one a baby of about one year, badly injured and burned. Incendiary bombs must have been used as several buildings were burned. The tales of woe make one's heart ache. Never before did we come into contact with such concentrated suffering.

"Throughout the week we have had air raid alarms almost every day and almost each day bombing planes fly over headed for somewhere else. One Sunday one plane hovered around our city for sometime and then went to Tieh Lu (about a mile from Huan Hsushui where we have a chapel) and dropped three bombs on a train there, killing or wounding about thirty.

"Since last Monday Chengchow is absolutely dead during the day. The people all flock to the country early in the morning and stay until four or five p.m. The shops are all closed until then and many shop-keepers are moving to other places. The people are going West by thousands. It is impossible to get a place on the trains, they say."

Flowers are being used profusely as trimmings on hats, as a decoration on suits, and on the shoulders of dresses.

Blue chalk is one of the colors appearing in satin slips and sheer nightgowns. Yellow, iris and purple are other colors that add charm to spring nightgowns.

Backless slips for wear with street and play clothes are making their appearance, inasmuch as backless dresses are so much in vogue.

White linen printed with tiny blue and pink flowers is used for a new summer girdle, which is lightly boned at the front.

Two-skirt suits like the two-pant suits for men are a surety in the fashion world. One skirt matches the jacket, the other is of different pattern.

COURAGE

"There is no such thing as utter failure to one who has done his or her best. Were this truth more emphasized, there would be more courage and energy infused into sad and desponding hearts. The compensation may seem shadowy and afar off, but it is not so. It attends everyone who is conscientious, painstaking, and resolute, and will never desert him whatever may be the fate of his exertions in other prospects."—McFarlane.

(PART ONE)

Dear Friends:

Sometimes we set such a high standard for ourselves that it is not possible for us to reach it. It may be our environment that stops us, it may be other duties, or ill-health, or too many demands on our time, then when we fail to reach this height of success, we get despondent and think we have failed all round.

But "there is no such thing as utter failure to one who has done his or her best." Sometimes God did not give us the tools to work with so that we could do what we wanted to do so much. He may have had other plans for us, and when I tell you these things, I do not mean it to be used as an alibi for not doing what we can in the best possible way.

Nor is it an excuse for lying back and not trying. No person has ever gained their heart's desires without trials and setbacks. Sometimes even in our prayers God makes us wait awhile to see if we really and truly want these things, or if it is not just a sudden enthusiasm which we could not use if it were given us.

Have you never felt a lift of your heart when you did some hard thing, something you sweated and toiled for, that was not easy to do by any means? Doesn't it make you feel good when you have accomplished it? Well, it can work like that with the standard you have set yourself.

You will gain so much when you have the courage to keep doggedly on when success seems far away. It's easy to do the easy thing, but it does take a deal of courage to do the hard thing. We are so prone to get discouraged and give up, when, although we cannot see it, success is almost within our grasp.

No matter how clever you may be, there is always the feeling you could or should have done so much more. All anyone can do is their best, and if you have done, and are doing that, you are not a failure in any sense of the word.

The worst failures to me, are the people who will not try. They want everything made soft and easy for them, they want to step into success on the efforts of someone else. They have no intestinal fortitude (or guts, to be vulgar) and so do not want to stand on their own feet.

But the person who does the wearisome boring jobs, while all the time their spirits are chafing to get out and do the larger things, they are a success although they may not know it. God knows there are plenty of measly little things to be done to keep a home together things that one gets credit for, yet if they are not done it isn't truly a home at all.

Supposing you cannot elevate yourself to the thing you want, you can elevate this that you must do to your own standard. And while you are doing this you are fitting yourself for your desire you are getting nearer to it day by day.

Do not forget either that success does not always come in youth. Life begins at forty for some, earlier for others, and later still for many. But you have a far better chance if you have done what you had to do, before you do what you would like to do.

So, take a good look at yourself. Forget all about failure, remembering always that God sends lovely compensations to those who must do the trivial things. Not all of us can be presidents or kings, but if we are a loyal subject, we are not failures. Courage wins.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Musical Program At Keene Meeting

(Examiner Correspondence.)

KEENE, April 8.—The Audubon Club met at the home of Miss Anne Brown on Wednesday evening with ten members present. The meeting opened with a piano solo by Rita Foley. After the roll call a reading based on the story and production of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," was given by Miss Wellena Nelson.

The topic for the evening was the "Flicker" which was capably arranged by Anne Brown. Readings on this most interesting bird were given by Anna Houle and Rita Foley and then Lois Wright read two chapters from the bird book which has been chosen to be read from at each meeting. The remainder of the evening was spent in contests and games, at the close of which dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

The A.Y.P.A. held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening, with most of the members and a number of visitors present. A very interesting program was ably arranged and conducted under the leadership of the new executive.

The meeting opened with the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and business discussion. It was left in the hands of the executive to plan for a dance during Easter season, preferably April 20. A very successful amateur hour was then staged consisting of a vocal solo by Miss Helen Clarkson, a piano number by Miss Dorothy Ferguson, a novel dance by Miss Agnes Weir and a "Nothing" number by the "Nothing" sister, the Misses Betty, Eleanor and Ruth Brown. All numbers were loudly applauded, Miss Clarkson being awarded the high prize. The amateur contest was conducted by L. Brown.

A contest "Confidences" which produced a good deal of laughter, was then conducted by Miss Willena Nelson after which the evening was spent in dancing to the music of the Rhythm Kings. Harold Elmhirst and Agnes Weir won the prize for the "Spot Dance" and Arnold Nelson and Betty Brown won the prize for their exhibition of the "Big Apple."

Queen Mary Buys Christmas Cards

LONDON, April 8 (C.P.).—Queen Mary ordered her Christmas cards for 1938—10 months early—at the British Industries Fair. She chose a design of a rose garden with a sun dial.

When the Royal party was being shown the new five-suit playing cards for bridge the Duke of Kent said: "I find contract bridge difficult enough. Another suit will just make it more complicated." The King and Queen, however, bought two packs, the King explaining that they would like to try the game.

One of the things that interested the Royal visitors was a white fabric made entirely from spun glass. "I can scarcely believe it is entirely of glass," said the Queen, while the King, after feeling the material, asked if he could have a suit made of it. It was explained that it had not yet reached that stage of development, whereupon the King remarked with a smile, "Lancashire must look to its laurels."

The King and Queen made many purchases at a stand where a number of soft animals were exhibited. The King turned to the Queen and said: "Thank heaven, the children are not here. We would never have got them away from this stand."

Kidskin for Sports

Summer furs are to be very popular, and among the favorites is white kidskin. Florence George, moving picture player, has chosen it for this smart sports coat.

This is a full-length model with a slash up the back and full, swagger shoulders. Wide lapels are used in tailored effect, but many be turned up over a scarf at the neckline. A shallow sailor hat of white panama is trimmed with navy grosgrain ribbon.

SUIT WITH CASUAL AIR IS SMARTEST IN TWEED

Such Costume May Be Worn in Easter Parade And Is Suitable for Country

THE NEW spring suits are as varied in styling this season as are the personalities of their wearers.

The young woman who likes casual clothes, for instance, may be suited, and be just as smartly clothed as the one who is particular about the very dressy quality of her costumes.

Soft dressmaker suits are as fashionable as strictly tailored ones, and clothes of smart lines and impeccable tailoring may have a very casual air about them to perfectly suit the woman who refuses to take even her Easter suit too seriously.

For this type of young woman I would recommend the clever costume pictured. It is a tweed in navy and white. The coat is collarless but has revers faced with white pique. A sweater blouse that buttons up to the throat is worn under it, and a navy felt sailor is perched back on the model's head—carrying out the careless air of the whole outfit—which is, nevertheless, very smart.

Such a suit may take its place in the Easter parade, but it will also not be out of place in the country or shopping.

Fine lightweight woollens of the new softer type, sheer wool crepes and hair-finished surfaces are smartly styled in dress and jacket outfits in striking and unusual combinations this season.

You will see plaid frocks with plain jackets; roman-striped boleros over slim frocks of monotone wool crepe; full-length redingotes over slender contrasting wool frocks.

In the casual field, which we were just mentioning, firm wool knit fabrics share the honors with lightweight wool tweeds in monotone, flecked or plaid types, fine wool flannels, etc.

The contrast note continues to loom large in the fashion picture, and if you don't use it in your suit, you do in your accessories or your costume jewelry, which is more popular and original than ever before.

Spring Wrap-ture

THERE IS no other effect quite comparable to that a woman makes in her formal outfit, which makes the evening wrap a most important wardrobe consideration. This season there are many styles to select from, ranging from the briefest little boleros that just cover the bosom, to long, fluid-silhouette wraps of muted pastel fabrics.

One of the newest effects in evening wraps, is the use of quilting, in delicate outline effects.

OUR LADY OF RHEIMS

RHEIMS, France—(CP). — Fifty-two cardinals and bishops will be among the celebrants here July 9-10, when the majestic cathedral "now completely healed of its war wounds" will be solemnly reconsecrated.

Hosiery Is Sunlit

SPRING hosiery is turning lighter and brighter, to give a general effect of veiling the leg, with golden to coppery sun tones, with a more or less nude effect.

Particularly designed to harmonize with the season's favorite blues, coppers and rosy reds in clothes and accessories the new shades are most effective in sheer, fine quality—which, after all, is also better wearing.

INMATES MAY SMOKE

LONDON—(CP). — Providing no inconvenience is caused non-smokers, women inmates of London County Council public assistance establishments may smoke, authorities have decided.

JEWISH WOMEN HOSTS

I have a picture of you, dear father,
Whose memory will never grow old.
We mourn for you in silence unseen,
And dwell on the memories of days that have been.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Family.

PANTER.—In loving memory of our son, Gerald Panter, who passed away April 8, 1936.

Time speeds on, two years have passed
Since death its gloom its shadows cast
Within our home, where all seemed bright,
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light and ever will,
His vacant place there is none to fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in Heaven we will meet again.
—Sadly missed by his Father and Mother.

PANTER.—In loving memory of our little Cousin, Gerald Panter, who passed away April 8, 1936.

Sweet memories will linger forever.
Time cannot change them, it's true;
Years that may come cannot sever
Our loving remembrance of you.
—Lovingly remembered by his cousins, Jean Douglas, Gordon Graham, and Ronny Collins.

PANTER.—In loving memory of my little Grandson, who fell asleep in Jesus, April 8, 1936.

We little thought when leaving home
Gerald would no more return,
That in death so soon would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.
We do not know whether pain he bore,
We did not see him die;
We only know he passed away
And could not say Good-bye.
—Lovingly remembered by Grandma and Grandpa Panter.

DAVIS.—In loving memory of our dear Father, Aaron Davis, who passed away April 8, 1937.

One by one they go before us,
They are fading like the dew,
But we know they're watching o'er us,
They the good, the fair, the true,
They are watching for us only
Where no pain can ever mar.
Dear ones, who left us lonely,
Watch us through the gates ajar.
There a father, there a mother,
Gone within those gates ajar.
—Ever remembered by the Family.

REVOLUTION DAYS LOOMING DARKLY AGAIN IN FRANCE

NEW YORK, April 8 (AP).—The French political and economic crisis is grave, and casts a long shadow.

Socialist Premier Blum summed the position up for a worried chamber of deputies when he predicted civil strife and bankruptcy unless the government adopted drastic measures.

The chief underlying causes of this situation—one of the most serious in the history of the republic—are two:—

1. The French revolution, as someone has remarked, isn't yet finished. There is a steadily growing class-warfare. The so-called "red extremists," including the Communists, are pitted against capital and the "privileged" interests.

The political upheaval is a reflection of the widespread strikes and conflict between the "proletariat" and the "masters."

2. The country is straining its back tryng to carry a huge armaments load.

That is the present day price of nebulous peace and security in Europe.

Burden Far Too Great

"For the whole of Europe the burden is far too heavy," said Blum, "and the time will come when Europe no longer will be able to ward off the catastrophe. Until that time comes, we all have to hold on by artificial means."

Parliament was startled by Blum's demand for dictatorial powers to meet the economic emergency, which he emphasized by declaring that France's "fight for life is a fight against time."

"There is nothing to prevent us from profiting by certain experiences of the totalarian regimes," averred the premier. "The German example is eloquent in this respect. The democracies cannot longer remain in a state of inferiority as compared with the totalarian countries."

'MOTHER' WARD, 98 DIES IN LONDON

LONDON, Ont., April 8—(CP)—Mrs. Annie Ward, 98, outstanding figure in Salvation Army work in London for more than 50 years, died last night.

Known as "Mother" Ward to thousands of this city's residents, Mrs. Ward was prominent in developing the Army throughout Western Ontario during the past half-century. She was known everywhere in London for her enterprise in selling "War Cry," official publication of the Army.

Despite her age, Mrs. Ward made her rounds with the paper, in rain or shine, until a few years ago. Her vitality was weakened during the Thames river floods last spring when her home was surrounded by water but she continued to attend army services in the Citadel until a few months ago when she was confined to her bed.

Believed to be the oldest Salvationist on the North American continent, both in years and length of service, Mother Ward served under 10 division commanders.

SHY OF SPANIARDS

HAMILTON, Ant., April 8 (CP).—Mayor William Morrison isn't going to be dragged into the Spanish civil war.

Tomorrow a group of Spanish notables will arrive in the city representing the Spanish government interests. They were scheduled to be received by Mayor Morrison at the city hall. But the mayor won't receive them.

"If General Franco came here I wouldn't receive him either," Mayor Morrison said.

Bad Cold Developed Into Bronchitis

Many people have bronchitis and don't know it. Don't even know the danger of neglecting it.

Bronchitis is generally the result of a neglected cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes.

Those troubled with bronchitis will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy that will help stimulate the bronchial tubes, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts and loosen the phlegm.

Mrs. R. P. MacDonald, Nappan, N.S., writes:—"Last winter I had a very bad cold which turned to bronchitis. I tried different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good.

A friend told me about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, as she had used it for her children with great success. I purchased a bottle and before it was used I got great relief; the phlegm was brought up easily without any hard coughing, and after using three bottles I was completely relieved of the bronchitis."

First To Fall Into Jap Hands

Michael Andrevitch Dominin, Russian flier fighting with the Chinese forces, won the doubtful distinction of being the first foreign aviator, in the enemy ranks, to fall into the hands of the Japanese. His aeroplane was shot down in aerial combat near Wuhu. His two companions were killed but Dominin escaped by bailing out with a parachute. Dominin is shown here in the custody of the two Japanese soldiers.

KALAMAZOO OUSTS TWO CANADIANS

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 8 (C. P.). — At the end of the current school year, two Canadian professors who were the central figures in a dramatic episode at Kalamazoo College last December, will seek other positions.

The College Board of Trustees announced last night it has accepted the resignation of Dr. Stewart Grant Cole, president, a native of Brockville, Ont., and that the contract of Dr. Carey T. Ganong of Jemseg, N.B., Professor of Economics, will not be renewed.

Last December 13 students at the college went on a three-day strike when they learned that the president had decided against retaining Dr. Ganong, a popular professor.

Dr. Cole had taken out naturalization papers. Dr. Ganong, although on the staff of the college four years had not. The economics professor said his status as an alien was given as the reason for his dismissal. The students discontinued their strike when the president said the case would be referred to the Board of Trustees. It was not until last night that the trustees announced their decision, ousting both professors. Dr. Cole had been president of the college for two years.

A system of Hebrew stenography has been devised.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, April 9

A very sudden and surprising development in the affairs may be predicted from important planetary configurations. This is likely to have a rather devastating effect on current affairs, with travel, removal or definite change.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden and unforseen developments that may have a very radical influence on the life and its fortunes. These are under propitious aspects, with change, travel, new associations and interests assured, although following drastic disruption.

A child born on this day, while it may be restless and fond of sudden moves and change, will nevertheless be talented and have sound judgment and responsibility. It should win the confidence and support of its superiors and elders. It may benefit by wills, trusts or insurance and be generally fortunate.

NORWOOD SPEAKER AT HASTINGS MEET

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, April 8.—The annual Thank offering meeting of the Girls' Mission Circle of Trinity United Church was well attended on Tuesday evening, when over 31 gathered at the home of Mrs. C. M. Baker. The Thank offering meeting, which is annually a very special one, was one of the best and an increase in givings was reported. Mrs. Margaret Venters presided and the Circle had as their guests the members of the W.M.S., also Mrs. Basil Tucker of Norwood, Associate Helpers' secretary, who was guest speaker.

The program with its Easter theme, was given in the form of a cantata. Mrs. F. W. Newell opened the devotional period with prayer. As Mrs. Grant Sine read the Easter story from the New Testament, the reading of the different scenes were followed with appropriate hymns, duets and solos. The reading of 'Christening Jerusalem' was followed by the singing of "Hosanna, Hosanna."

After the reading of "eJsus praying at Gethsemane," Mrs. Alton Thompson and Miss Pauline Scriver sang a beautiful number, "Alone."

Mrs. H. Edwards rendered a solo, "The Christ of the Cross," in keeping with the reading on "The Nailing of Jesus to the Cross." After "The Deat hof Christ," a group of members sang "Low in the Grave He Lay" and before 'The Ascension" the group again sang "Chirst of the World."

The guest speaker was then introduced. She gave a most enlightening address on "Stewardship of All We Possess."

A luncheon provided for the occasion consisted of an Easter salad "eggs in nest," bread and butter, cakes, cookies and tea.

BLUE MOUNTAIN ROCK THREATENS U.S. INDUSTRY

Employers of Labor Asked To Help Local Militia Units

Members of Non-Permanent Militia Be Allowed Time Off Work for Parades and to Attend Camp

Special concessions to members of the non-permanent militia in this city, by which employees may be given time off work to attend parades and training camps, is sought from employers of labour in Peterborough, in a resolution unanimously passed by the Chamber of Commerce on Friday night. The resolution followed an appeal from Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence.

The Chamber hopes to gain the support of all industry in Peterborough and to make this city a leader in the support of the Minister's attempt to strengthen Canada's man power. The resolution, moved by Ald James Dutton and seconded by Robert Abbott, read as follows:

"Whereas world conditions indicate the necessity of strengthening the defence forces of Canada which appear at the present time to be deplorably weak, whereas the Minister of National Defence has appealed to the employers of labor through the Chamber of Commerce, Boards of Trade and other organizations for assistance in achieving this end by making it possible for members of the non-permanent active forces in their employ to attend parades and training camps, be it therefore resolved that this Chamber endorses the appeal made by the Minister and would urge its members and citizens generally to co-operate fully with the local Militia units in this important task."

Minister's Letter.

Hon. Ian Mackenzie's letter to the Chamber of Commerce follows:

"I should like to bring to attention a very important matter concerning preparation for the defence of Canada in time of war or emergency real or apprehended, and am taking the liberty of addressing this circular letter to Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce and other organizations through which can be reached those who employ members of the non-permanent active Militia,

J. J. DUFFUS FEARS TOURIST HARDSHIP IN BRIDGE HOLDUP

OTTAWA, April 9 (CP) — The Ontario government's bill to construct an international bridge at Niagara Falls, Ont., in co-operation with New York State was talked out in the House of Commons last night.

It was the fifth time the privates members' hour expired without action in the measure. Ever since it came before the House, Ontario Conservatives have kept up a running fire against it.

A few days ago, the prime minister made special arrrangements for it to be discussed last night and said it had his sympathy and that of his followers. Still earlier in the week, Premier Hepburn protested against the delay.

Most of the time was consumed by Norman Lockhart (Cons. Lincoln) who spoke before in opposition to it.

Mr. Lockhart said he was opposed to the bridge but originally he had an open mind regarding it.

He referred to remarks made a week ago by A. B. Damue (Lib. Welland) to the effect opposition to the bridge centred in St. Catharines where lived directors and shareholders of the lower steel arch bridge at Niagara Falls for which the Canadian National Railways paid a rental of $100,000 a yer.

Reflection On Chaplin?

This was a reflection on the late J. D. Chaplin who used to represent Lincoln in the House as a Conservative, Mr. Lockhart said. He deprecated attacks of this sort. He also denied having discussed the bridge proposal with officers of the lower steel arch bridge company.

His opposition to the bridge, Mr. Lockhart said, was the reflection of the views of thousands of home owners in Niagara Falls. He thought the taxpayers should be protected if river-front property was to be expropriated for the bridge site.

H. Clarke (Con., Rosedale) suggested there should be a bridge built as soon as possible which would be free of tolls. It was a chance for the United States and Canada to join in a modern up-to-date structure.

To be toll-free, the bridge should be maintained by the Governments of Canada and the United States, he said.

He suggested the bill be referred back to committee to see if some arrangement between the two countries could not be made.

Duffus Supports It.

CANADIANS ESCAPE GERMAN SWOOP

TWENTY YEARS AGO TO-DAY.

(Written for Canadian Press By CAPT. W. W. MURRAY, M.C.)

The first anniversary of the storming of Vimy Ridge by the Canadian Corps saw the German armies launch the second phase of their gigantic onslaughts against the British armies in France. On April 9, 1918, the Battle of the Lys began —a battle which had for its objective the break through of the enemy towards the English Channel.

Correctly appreciating that the battle against the Fifth Army, which had now ceased to exist, would have compelled Sir Douglas Haig to move a great bulk of his forces to that area in the vicinity of Amiens, replacing these with the survivors of divisions which had been engaged in the battles in the month of March, the German delivered their attack on an 11-mile front north of the Le Bassee Canal. Ten powerful enemy divisions found facing them only two weak British divisions and four brigades of Portuguese troops.

The German success was swift. By nightfall they had bulged the British line south of Armentieres to a depth of five miles. Continuation of the offensive followed on April 10. This time the attack was launched north of Armentieres, on a front extending to the base of the Ypres salient.

Messines Ridge and Wytschaete Ridge, both long familiar to Canadians and captured the year before in Haig's Spring offensive, were over-run. "Plugstreet" village, for many months a part of the Canadian terrain in the Summer and Winter of 1915, was captured. Hamlets which for the three pervious years had been in British possession were lost. To the north and south of the Canadian line in front of the key position of Vimy Ridge, the enemy had effected deep inroads.

The whole British battle line was ablaze, with the exception of this 30-mile stretch held by the Canadian Corps.

Cahan Charges Plans of Confederation Distorted; Doubt Passage This Session, But Is Sure of Success

OTTAWA, April 9.—(C.P.)—With a move for the abolition of Appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from decisions of Canadian Courts under way Parliament stands adjourned for a fortnight's Easter recess.

Yesterday Justice Minister Lapointe came to the support of Hon. C. H. Cahan, (Con. St. Lawrence-St. George) as the former secretary of state moved second reading of a bill to make the Supreme Court of Canada the tribunal of last resort for Canadian litigants. Debate on the bill continued all day but no progress was made.

The minister intimated the bill might not become law this session. that time should be allowed for further study and for the formation of public opinion.

Mr. Cahan one of the veterans of Canadian public life and an eminent lawyer charged the Privy Council with distorting the Constitution of Canada and stulifying the powers of the Fathers of Confederation intended the Federal Parliament to exercise.

It had acted as a political as well as a legal tribunal and had altered the Canadian constitution by its interpretations of the British North-

A DEBT PROBLEM

WINDSOR, Ont., April 9 (C.P.).—At a meeting of the Windsor Separate School Board last night it was suggested the board's debt of several millions of dollars be refinanced. Opposing the move, Trustee P. J. S. Morgan, chairman of the Finance Committee, voiced the fear that rushing the refunding issue might result in an order to increase the board's mill rate over that provided for the Public School. "As things look now, we may not be able to keep our schools open until the end of the year," said Morgan. Appointment of the Guaranty Trust Company of Canada as the board's fiscal agent.

QUINTS SING 'ENGLISH'

NEW YORK, April 9.— (CP). — Couriers from Callander arriving in Manhattan report the Dionne quintuplets are practising a song in English called "All Mixed Up". The song was written for their next movie, "Five of a Kind," on which production starts next month with Jean Hersholt playing the country doctor again. Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie, and Yvonne are also to be coming right along as songbirds. Their English diction has a decided French flavor.

WAREHOUSE BURNS

IROQUOIS, Ont., April 9—(CP)—Fire of undetermined origin last night destroyed a one-storey, wood-constructed warehouse and for a time threatened other buildings in this St. Lawrence River valley. Volunteer firemen, however, succeeded in preventing spread of the blaze after a three-hour battle.

The warehouse, owned by R. J. Ellis, contained a truck, two marine engines, a speed boat, an automobile, farm machinery, and other articles. Loss was estimated at $5,000.

GERMANY EN FETE FOR SUNDAY VOTE IN 'HOLY ELECTION'

BERLIN, April 9.—(AP).— All Germany, with its latest acquisition, Austria, was astir to-day as though it were choosing a new Fuehrer in a hotly contested election.

The nation was preparing, solemnly and jubilantly, for what thousands of spell-binders have been attempting to popularize since March 20 as a 'holy election."

To-day, as the day before the plebiscite on Anschluss (union) with Austria, has been officially named "the day of the greater German Reich."

Nazi Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebels thought of a new stunt—all citizens were admonished to 'don their festive garb" when they returned home from shops and factories. The festivities included a giant nation-wide community sing, bonfires at night, the ringing of church bells, and parading bands. Chancellor Hitler will climax the election campaign with a speech in Vienna to-day.

Rebels Hammer At Tortosa

HENDAYE, France, April 9. — (AP).—Insurgent bombing planes blasted the defences of Tortosa to-day to clear the way for a march of General Franco's shock troops to the Mediterranean in Southern Catalonia.

Forty thousand of General Garcia Valino's legionnaires intensified their drive on the city where the broad Ebro river delta forces the Barcelona-Valencia costal road to curve inland.

Lakefield Product Dooms Feldspar Washington Told

Clamp a Duty on New Ontario "Baby," Pleads Carolina; No Nepheline in States—May Force Move to Canada

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Backed by obviously frightened United States feldspar mining principals, a tall, gaunt North Carolinian mountaineer stood before the United States Committee for Reciprocity Information here on Friday, declared Eastern Ontario's new and little known nepheline syenite producing activities and exports were rapidly strangling North Carolina's feldspar mining industry, and implored the committee to effect removal of nepheline syenite from the free list and stem cross-border flow of the Ontario commodity by quota restrictions.

Nepheline syenite, it was explained to the committee of experts, is a recently discovered commodity which lacking the potash of feldspar, is rapidly ousting the United States produced commodity from the glass industry. Described by R. B. Ladoo of the American Nepheline Corporation of Rochester, N. Y., as "a new baby," the information given the American authorities was that nobody could predict where this Ontario prodigy was going, or what swath it might cut through the United States glass and affiliated industries.

Ontario Said Only Source

So far as it appeared from testimony, nepheline syenite is obtained only in Ontario, the mining area centring around Lakefield. Ladoo said his corporation railed it to Rochester, where it is laid down at around $5 per ton, as compared with the $6.50 per ton which the North Carolinian, W. H. Hipps, lamented as being the cost of mining feldspar, paying North Carolina miners only $2 per day.

Other witnesses admittd their organizations had hunted the United States high and low for deposits of nepheline syenite with which to match Ontario's supply, but so far, they ruefully admitted, without any success whatever.

No Rush Anticipated.

"Do you anticipate any 1849 rush into this Eastern Ontario field?" asked Committeeman H. Lawrence Groves of the United States Department of Commerce after ascertaining that the Ontario operating company was controlled by United States principals.

"No," responded the Nepheline Corporation head, "not for a raw commodity as cheap as this one."

Mr. Landoo further questioned the accuracy of North Carolina's assumption that the Ontario product was wholly responsible for declines in their feldspar industry. Western United States feldspar, he said, was partially responsible.

His hopes in regard to Ontario nepheline syenite were that it would create broad new markets of its own, leaving as much room for United States feldspar production as ever before.

Although it seemed apparent that the Carolina pleaders, like Canute, were striving to stem an inevitable tide, the committee listened sympathetically to Mr. Hipps's expression of hope that some day his native feldspar miners might be paid a wage comparable to that of Ontario gold miners.

RUPTURE CAUSED STAUNTON DEATH DOCTORS REPORT

An open verdict was returned by the coroner's jury under Dr. Herbert Young which on Friday night in the police court investigated the death of Harvey J. Staunton, C.N.R. trainman who died in Nicholls Hospital on Monday night last after falling off a box car on the Quaker Oats siding less than four hours before.

No blame was attached to any one for the tragedy.

Medical testimony showed that Mr. Staunton died from internal bleeding and shock and the evidence of other witnesses failed to develop any explanation as to the cause of his falling off the car, with the exception of the theory advanced by one railway man that a sudden gust of wind might have caused him to lose his balance. The testimony showed that the train was moving very slowly, only about three miles an hour and there was no jolting to account for the accident.

The witnesses were examined by Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., and Alfred Edge of Toronto, district claims agent of the Canadian National Railways, was present in the interest of that company.

Harry Campbell was chosen as foreman of the jury, the other members of which were George Morency, Edward Armstrong, Wilton Metheral, Joseph Maher, L. L. Maguire, Thos. Williams, Mortimer Quinn, Percy Golds, Charles Ireson, C. E. Curtis and Patrick Coursey.

William Staunton son of the deceased, gave identification evidence.

A Young Witness

Robert Currie, a young boy who was on the bank at the west side of the old raceway when the accident happened testified to seeing Staunton topple off the east side of the train. He said the cars were not being shunted at the time he saw the man fall off. Witness had run to the scene and saw the injured man lying on some canvas and afterward saw him walk to the doctor's car.

John McCabe testified that he was driving a team of horses north from the Quaker Oats plant and when about fifteen rods away from the train he had seen Staunton falling. The man's body was half way to the ground when witness noticed it. Mr. McCabe said that last Monday was a very windy afternoon. The train he said was moving very slowly.

LATE BLIZZARD STALLS TRAFFIC, SEVERS POWER

Trains, Busses Late; Lake Ports Lashed

TORONTO, April 9. —(C. P.)— Ontario residents, still a little bewildered, snuggly deeply into warm overcoats today and resignedly prepared for another day of snow, rain and unseasonably cold and disagreeable weather. They abandoned, for the time being at least, all thoughts of a pre-Easter fashion parade tomorrow.

Eighteen days after Spring officially arrived, a blizzard swept into the Province yesterday. Rural and urban motor traffic in almost every section of Ontario was hampered. Railways found it difficult to maintain train schedules. Waves lashed ports along the shores of Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario.

The weatherman forecast slightly higher temperatures for tomorrow—after warning the storm would move East to Ottawa and Montreal today. By tomorrow afternoon, according to meteorological estimates, the sun should break through the clouds lying low over the Province and thermometers should register somewhat higher temperatures.

Toronto was hard-hit by the April snow storm. Power service was interrupted for six minutes and at times stalled traffic blocked the narrow streets. One traffic "jam" extended five blocks. Six-foot high waves pounded the waterfront but no damage was reported.

Similar conditions were reported from all parts of Western Ontario. Sleet, rain and snow fell upon London. The wind blew down a tree on the grounds of the Ontario Hospital there and power service in one section was cut off for a time. One or two minor traffic accidents occurred. No one was injured.

Five Inches Fall.

Nearly five inches of snow fell upon the Goderich district. Brantford farmers welcomed the change in weather as an aid to fall-sown wheat. Three persons were injured in that district when an automobile skidded on a slush-covered highway. Guelph, Stratford, Sarnia and Kitchener reported heavy falls.

In Eastern Ontario, more than three inches of snow fell at Kingston and temperatures dropped to freezing. Blinding snow hindered motorists in Belleville, where a two-inch fall was reported. Pilot Fred Carpenter of the Royal Canadian Air Force was forced down at Chemong Lake, near Peterborough, by poor visibility. Carpenter landed safely on a small farm.

Great Lakes navigation, opening after the winter tie-up, halted during the storm. at Meaford, on Georgian Bay, boats were lashed to the docks as waves, which residents described as 'mountainous" piled over the pier. Fishing boats at Port Stanley, Leamington and other ports were kept in harbor.

RETREATING JAPS BELIEVED IN TRAP

SHANGHAI, April 9. —(A. P.). — The Chinese army high command declared jubilantly today that defeat of Japanese forces at Taierhchwang created a situation favorable for annihilation or capture of the disorganized Japanese units in that area of Central China.

Chinese troops were reported converging from all directions to cut off Japanese retreating from the war-devasted city of Taierhchwang, in southern Shantung province. These reports were denied by Japanese officers who said Chinese attacks on Taierhchwang, as well as Yihsien, Tzaochuwang and Lincheng, had been repulsed.

Japanese said they were holding these cities and had not retreated from the battle zones along the Grand Canal and the Tientsin-Pukow railway, which runs south to meet the Lunghai at strategic Suchow.

SCOTLAND WINS 2-1.

WEMBLEY STADIUM, London, April 9—(CP Cable)—A first-half goal by Tommy Walker, Heart of Midlothian forward, gave Scotland its 29th victory over England in the concluding international soccer match of the season today. Final score was 2-1 and gave Scotland a second-place tie with Ireland in the tournament, one point behind the Englishmen.

Federal Cutter Patrols Beds To See Fishers Don't "Jump The Gun"

HALIFAX, April 9 (CP)—A little armada lay along Nova Scotia's southeast shore today, but it wasn't preparing for war. King lobster, the province's million-dollar primary product, is "at home" beginning Monday and he's going to have plenty of callers.

Monday will start a dash for the fishing grounds and a mad scramble to get the traps down. The spots usually are the object of a keen race in which the first arrival gets prior rights. Lobsters are known to frequent the same localities so there's plenty of competition for a thick patch.

Regulations provide strict penalties for anyone who violates the 5 a.m. zero for the season's opening. To back up the letter of the law, a fisheries department cutter, usually cruises in the vicinity of each bed on the morning the season gets under way. In one district last year five early birds caught stiff fines because of early arrivals.

Albertan Says Members Are 'M.C.L.' House A 'Colonial Legislature'

Ottawa, April 9.

ONTARIO Legislators who declined to be designated by the letters 'M. P." after their names rather than "M. L. A." have nothing on one member of the House of Commons. Last night, Walter Kuhl (S.C., Jasper-Edson) told members of the house they should use the letters "M. C. L." instead of "M. P."

They were "members of a colonial legislature" and not Members of Parliament. The British North America Act was null and void and never created a Canadian parliament.

'This house never was and never can be the parliament of the Canadian people," said Mr. Kuhl.

River At Cleveland Yields Leg Of 11th Torso Victim

Woman's Dismembered Head Is Also Sighted And Sends Police On Trail Anew

CLEVELAND, April 9.—(AP). — Detectives searched the murky Cuyahoga river to-day for gruesome remnants through which they hoped to identify the 11th victim of Cleveland's sex-crazed "torso slayer." Nine of the killer's victims have not been identified.

Discovery of a dismembered human leg, from the knee to the ankle, brought from Coroner S. R. Gerber the statement: "It is another torso victim."

Steve Morosky, 35-year-old Works Progress Administration worker, sighted the limb floating in the industrial stream.

Dredge company employees reported to detectives to-day they had sighted a woman's severed head floating in the river. The dredgers said they had seen the head a short distance below the point where the leg was found.

Members of the homicide squad, searching the muddy industrial stream for other sections of the body began a search in boats in the area designated by the dredgers.

Date Back in 1934.

"This technique is similar to that in the previous butcheries," said Dr. Gerber after examining the severed leg. Authorities hold to the theory that a demented doctor, male nurse or butcher has wielded a sadistic scalpel in the series of slayings, dating from 1934.

Spring Storms Take Toll Of 42 Deaths In Path East From Rockies

Chicago, April 9.

FORECASTS of rising temperatures betokened relief today to a vast area of the United States buffeted for three days by rain, snow, sleet, and tornadic winds.

Warmer weather by Sunday was in store for most of the snow-clogged middle west and the rain-drenched Atlantic seaboard, forecasters said.

Forty-two deaths were attributed to the Spring storms which lashed the area east of the Rockies.

Thirteen persons were killed by an Alabama tornado and as many died when a cloudburst washed away a store building in Georgia. Seven were found dead of asphyxiation in a home in snow-swept Texas.

Flood damage drove thousands from their homes in Alabama. Boats removed refugees from flooded Prattville, a town of 2,500.

All Ontario Timber Limits Given Liberal Friends Says Gordon

Predicts Heads Behind Sulphite Fiasco Will Get Hepburn Approval For Export

BARRIE, Ont., April 9 (CP).—In an attack on the Hepburn Government's timber policy, Hon. Wesley Gordon, a former Conservative Dominion Labor Minister, last night charged that not one single commercial stand of timber was owned by Ontario.

Speaking last night at a complimentary banquet to Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, Mr. Gordon, who substituted for Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, charged the Hepburn Government had given away all Ontario timber limits to friends of the Liberal Party.

"And I make the prediction that those behind the Lake Sulphite fiasco will, now that the Legislature has prorogued, go to Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Heenan and get approval for export to the United States of the pulpwood that is lying there," said Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Gordon spoke of the "Heenan-Sweezey crowd," and asserted the policies of the Liberal Government had reacted most unfavorably on Ontario as a whole and the timber industry in the north, particularly.

He described as tragic the sending of inexperienced men into the north. He warned that Canada's timber resources were not inexhaustible, and, for every tree planted, five were cut down.

The Poorest Paid Jobs.

"Instead of planning for the processing of raw pulp in our own province, we allowed it to go to the United States," continued Mr. Gordon. "The jobs Messrs. Hepburn and Heenan boast of giving to the unemployed were the lowest-paid jobs in the timber industry. The best-paid jobs were made available for workmen in the United States.

"We should take some members of the Legislature and put them to work to investigate the pulpwood industry," said Mr. Gordon. "The present Government at Queen's Park is squandering the assets of the people."

Mr. Rowe spoke briefly, declaring the need in Canada today was the pioneer spirit that united the Dominion in the last century. Through it Canada might be reunited in this century. He deplored the belief Canada's future was tied up with the United States.

"We are either in the Empire or out of it," he said.

Critical of Canadian defence, Mr. Rowe said "we are pikers if we think we can snuggle behind the Monroe Doctrine."

DALADIER TO HAVE CABINET SUNDAY

PARIS, April 9.—(C.P.)—Edouard Daladier, chief of France's Defence forces since the first popular front cabinet took office in June, 1936, promised his radical Social group in the Chamber of Deputies today he would have a strong Government formed by tomorrow.

France then can face the troubled international situation "with calm and assurance," he said.

The "strong man" of successive popular front ministries, who before has been summoned to form Governments when the nation was faced with the danger of civil dissension, said France could not afford to be without a Government with Adolf Hitler's Austrian plebiscite coming up Sunday and the Spanish Civil war nearing an acute stage.

Daladier asserted he would be able to form a Government whether or not the Socialists—strongest party in the Chamber—agreed to accept posts in the cabinet. He previously had held a long conference with Leon Blum, the Socialist leader, whose popular front cabinet was forced out yesterday.

Socialists To Stay Out.

In parliamentary quarters it was predicted Socialists would refuse to enter the cabinet, although they might support it with their votes.

The strike situation meanwhile remained unsolved. Nearly 60,000 strikers were tying up production in 34 factories, including those supplying the French Air Force with almost all its plane motors. Some of the strikers hoisted red flags over factories.

If he succeeds in forming the 105th cabinet in the 67 years of the third republic, Daladier faces the task of maintaining discipline and order. Leftist parties summoned a mass meeting for Sunday to demonstrate against the 'reactionary old men of the Senate."

"Officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Navy, the permanent active Militia and the Royal Canadian Air Force are competent and efficient but, as you well know, relatively very few in number. Man power which would be required in time of emergency or war would be drawn from the non-permanent forces.

"The immediate purpose of this letter concerns the training of the non-permanent forces. Given that young Canadians in sufficient numbers offer to serve with non-permanent forces, which indeed is the case, it become necessary to train them and this is carried out by members of the permanent forces.

"Training of personnel of the non-permanent active Militia, for instance, is carried out at local headquarters of the regiments or units. In the summer, training is carried out at military camps at different points throughout the country. Employers of non-permanent active Militia personnel will grant that the training at local headquarters, usually carried out in the evening, does not disturb the ordinary course of work or employment. It may be somewhat different when the employee asks leave of absence in order to attend Militia training camp.

"The non-permanent active Militia is the first line of Canada's land defences. It is to these officers, non-commissioned officers and men that Canada must look for national security. It is submitted that these soldiers are deserving of all possible assistance and encouragement. Speaking on their behalf, I would earnestly request the sympathetic consideration of employers in making it possible for members of the non-permanent active Militia to train without feeling that their positions or employment may be adversely affected by such patriotic action.

"It would be greatly appreciated if the gentlemen to whom this letter is addressed would extend their co-operation by bringing this request to the notice of all members."

"Yours faithfully,
"Ian MacKenzie."

One Property Sold Tax Arrears Sale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 9. — Although a large number of citizens attended Campbellford's 2nd tax sale in the past three years, only one property was sold when the buyer elected to pay the full amount of arrears and penalties against it. The house and lot situated on parts 55 and 56, Queen Street, was sold to Charles Blake for $210.98, and unless the owner can pay the full amount within one year's time he will lose the property.

At the conclusion of the sale, which offered a total of thirty-seven properties with eleven houses, F. W. Wood, the town treasurer, reminded citizens of the adjourned sale which would be held in one week, "when they would be assured of some real bargains."

PRE-ELECTION ADS BRING FINAL KICK AS SESSION ENDS

TORONTO, April 9—(CP)—After a session calm settled over Queen's Park today, but veteran legislative observers were of the opinion it was little different from that prevailing during the past six weeks when Ontario's 20th legislature was sitting.

For none could recall a session with so little acrimonious debate and with so little legislation as that prorogued yesterday by Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant - Governor. Seventy-nine bills were enacted into law with only six divisions — two of them not actuated by party politics.

The first session of the legislature elected in last October's general election came to an end with brief ceremony. It required only 16 minutes for Lieut.-Gov. Matthews to give royal assent to bills passed since February 23 and to read his prorogation address.

All business was cleared away in the morning. Estimates for the attorney-general's, agriculture and education departments were passed quickly and then the House formally carried the entire estimates for the 1938-39 fiscal year. Expenditures of more than $61,00v,000 were provided for.

EXPERTS DISAGREE IN SPENCER CASE

SAULTE STE. MARIE, Ont., April 9 (CP)—Expert witnesses were in disagreement at the murder trial here of Vernon Spencer as to whether Helen Grier could have shot herself to death with the rifle found beside her Oct. 28 in the hunting cabin she occupied 38 miles north of here with Spencer, 40-year-old former professional baseball player from Wixom, Mich.

W. H. Hanley, defence counsel, cited the conflicting testimony when he asked Mr. Justice C. P. McTague to take the case from the jury and acquit Spencer of the charge of killing the Pontiac, Mich., stenographer who had been his companion on hunting trips to this area since 1932. Mr. Justice McTague refused the motion, made yesterday after the Crown had concluded its case.

Dr. E. R. Frankish, Ontario medico-legal expert, said that "considering certain angles" it was possible for Helen Grier to have shot herself. He said that in his opinion the gun that killed Miss Grier was held "close to" her head. The rifle was found beside the body on the kitchen floor of the cottage.

Couldn't Have Done It

Professor W. M. Treadwell of the University of Toronto engineering faculty testified Miss Grier could not have held the rifle against her right temple and pulled the trigger. He said she could have reached the trigger only with the back of her finger, taking into account the length of the rifle, the distance from the right temple to the end of her arm and the angle at which the shot was fired.

Defence counsel J. A. MacInnis asked if it were not true that anyone with arm extended, and holding a rifle in the hand, could give additional length by moving the head to one side. Professor Treadwell replied this, in his opinion, would alter the line of fire. He said that in the case of Miss Grier the line of fire had been "square with the head."

QUEBEC, April 9—(CP). — Quebec province may adopt Ontario's system of licensing taverns according to the amount of liquor sold instead of imposing a straight $300 license fee.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, April 9 (C.P.). — Bolstered by the United Kingdom wheat import business, estimated as high as 10,000,000 bushels, Winnipeg wheat futures soared more than four cents yesterday. Despite profit-taking final quotations were 2¼ to ⅝ cents higher, May $1.26⅞, July $1.13¾ to ⅞, and October 90¾ cents.

Canadian export sales of 750,000 bushels, chiefly new-crop grain for October-November shipment were reported among the general buying activity that provided the busiest session in weeks.

Of the huge unexpected United Kingdom mill purchases, Canada received orders for four cargoes of new-crop wheat, Australia 13 to 20 cargoes, United States nine cargoes of hard winter grain, and Argentina three cargoes.

Fears of sensational frost damage in Texas and elsewhere south-west appeared largely responsible for the abrupt outburst of European demand. Beneficial heavy snows reported in that region may prove an offset, some trade experts said.

By far the largest international purchasing was credited to English millers. A majority of trade opinions was that the millers acted for th British Government.

Church Of England Planning War Against Spiritualism

Committee Of Prominent British Churchmen Have Been Investigating Claims

LONDON, April 9. — The Church of England is to-day planning to wage war on Spiritualism.

Archbishop of Canterbury

In great secrecy a committee of prominent British churchmen doctors and scientists have been investigating the claims of mediums.

Their report signed by Dr. Cosmo Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, will be issued in a few weeks' time.

The church's attack, it is learned will be threefold.

To Discipline Clergymen

Clergymen who openly practise Spiritualism will be severely disciplined. Legal proceedings will be instituted against certain mediums on the grounds of false pretenses, and a nation-wide campaign, in co-operation with a group of eminent doctors, will be launched to warn the public against the dangers of "tinkering with the unknown."

For a long time the church authorities have felt alarm at the growth of Spiritualism in Britain, with the Church of England in particular being hard hit.

Thousands of members of congregations all over the country have gone over to this new faith and a number of clergy are now open and avowed Spiritualists.

Bishop Retaliates

The Bishop of London, Dr. Winnington Ingram, retaliated by forbidding any church or church building to be used for seances.

Then the church decided more drastic action was needed. Under the Archbishop of Canterbury's commission a committee was appointed to investigate the whole spiritualist movement.

The preident of this committee, which included a number of high church dignitaries and two women, was the Rev. Martin Linton Smith, Bihop of Rochester, Kent.

Committee Attacks Medium

"We feel that attempts to communicate through medium with those in the other world is wrong, dangerous, dishonoring to the dead, and a waste of time for the living," a member of the committee said.

"Even those who practise it admit its dangers, and further admit that it is possible to get into contact with evil spirits who can do nothing but harm.

"We believe that the mediums, consciously or unconsciously, read the thoughts of the people who come to them, and that this is the explanation of the revelations which appear to come from the other world."

Biblical Thoughts For The Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James, Toronto

CHRIST RAISETH LAZARUS
St. John 11

"Martha called Mary her sister, secretly". The practical Martha again for she knew that the Lord had enemies. After the miracle "some of them went their way and told the Pharisees what things Jesus had done".

"The Teacher is come and calleth for thee". He is indeed the Teacher Who calls upon you when sorrow enters your home and when your heart is heavy with grief. He is come to teach you what you could never learn except in the school of sorrow. Like Mary you will arise quickly and go unto Him. You will pour out your trouble at His feet, for He is a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, full of compassion. He knows, yet it is good for your whole being to tell it unto Him. Your telling will lift the burden from your heart and let loose the emotions, which if repressed, may do you harm.

"Jesus wept". He is no Stoic, who prides himself as being above all joy and sorrow. He knows the place of tears and the relief they bring. To weep is a sign that you have not lost the gift of tears. You have not been hardened by the adversities of this world. A great man in the closing years of his life confessed with deep regret that he had lost the power to weep.

In this chapter describing so fully Our Lord's greatest miracle and proving Him to be Divine we have abundant evidence that He is also a real Man. His affection and love for His friends. "Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus". His compassion for the mourning sisters. His indignation: "He was moved with indignation in the spirit. V 33, 38. The Christian's ever present danger is to over emphasize His Manhood or His Diety.

"Where have ye laid him?" He does not use His supernatural power when others can give Him the necessary information.

"Take ye away the stone." The Master demands human co-operation in every miracle. In turning the water into wine "the servants filled the water pots with water up to the brim" So here men take away the stone. The Evangelist is writing 50 years later and he sees the spiritual meaning of this command. The Lord needs your help before He can do anything for you. You must take away the stone of unbelief; the stone of selfishness or avarice from your soul. You must make the effort to turn away your eyes from the sin that so easily besets you. When you make the effort to turn away your thoughts then He can do the wonderful work of awakening your soul to new life and power.

"Jesus cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth." "And it was so". What value and meaning has it to you and me when we look upon the face of our beloved dead? It has an inward, symbolic, meaning. Though he is dead yet he lives because his life is united with the life of God in Christ Jesus. This is the Christian principle and truth. In very truth we obey the command: "loose him and let him go". We loose our dead from the grave clothes, the weaknesses and frailities of his character which hindered him and we see him in a clearer light. It is God's gift to give him back to us purified, glorified and you dimly understand that this sickness was "for the glory of God and that the Son of God might be glorified thereby".

When the angel of death enters your home read this 11th Chapter of St. John. Ponder deeply upon its words. They are for your comfort and consolation. You will weep, but not too deeply for he will grieve at your tears. An English poet has written a poem entitled: "A mother's dream" in which the mother sees the little children carry lamps in heaven, but her own child's lamp is not lit. She enquires and her child tells her her tears put it out.

So in the day of sorrow remember that "The Master, the Teacher, is come and calleth for thee". Arise quickly and go unto Him for He is come to teach you.

"Speak, Lord, for Thy Servant Heareth".

Finding Ourselves in Service

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 10 (Palm Sunday) is Mark 8:27-38, the Golden Text being Mark 8:36, "What doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?")

ON THIS HAPPY Palm Sunday, or during the Holy Week, hundreds of thousands of boys and girls and men and women will be confessing their faith in Jesus Christ as Son of God and Savior of their souls. Uniting with the church they should immediately begin to find places of service for themselves, for they are saved to serve.

Preparation for Service

Over two years of fellowship and teachings had preceded the examination through which the Master Teacher put his pupils at Caesarea Philippi. They have seen his divine power over disease, demons and death; they have heard truth from his lips and seen it lived perfectly in his life. He is now ready to reveal to them the objective of all his teaching and of his mission in the world, viz: the principle of the cross and its necessity for him and for them. Are his disciples ready to see the cross emerge in his life and theirs? Can they take it? Are they following him for what they can get out of him or for what they can give in service to others? This will depend upon their appreciation of him and of his mission in the world.

Faith Basic to Service

So Jesus asked them, "Whom do men say that I am?" They replied, "John the Baptist, Elijah or one of the prophets." But Jesus was more than any of these. He was himself the goal and fulfillment of all prophecy. Then because religion is nothing unless it is made vitally and warmly personal, Jesus asked them pointedly, "But who say ye that I am?" That this is the crux of his religion is evident in the similar question fired later at his enemies, "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he?" Voicing not only his own faith, but also that of all the twelve, Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matthew records our Lord's satisfaction at this reply and his declaration that upon this faith in his deity and saviorhood he would build his Church and guarantee it perpetuity through the ages.

The Cross Emerges

Assured of this faith in the hearts of his disciples, Jesus sets his face definitely toward the cross and explains its necessity for himself and those who would follow him. "He began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer many things and be rejected by the elders and the chief priests, and the scribes, and be killed and after three days rise again." This was not only a new idea of his disciples, but an entirely different ideal from what they had set up for their master. To them it was shockingly abhorent, so much so that Peter began to rebuke him for entertaining any such thought about himself. Our Lord recognized Peter's offense at the cross to be the same old satanic suggestion that had assailed him in the wilderness temptation, and accordingly, rebuked it as of devilish origin: "Get thee behind me, Satan; for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men." He went further and proclaimed the necessity of the cross for his followers as for himself: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Refusal of this challenge of the cross means failure and loss of life, for "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it."

CATHEDRAL MUSINGS

While the Cross has its objective and historical significance, yet it has also its mystical meaning. In this respect we cannot do better than quote from Jacob Boehme, the last of the really great Christian mystics. "The Cross with the image of a dying person nailed thereon is the symbol of regeneration and initiation. It reminds the true follower of Christ that he must pass through the mystic death and become regenerated in the Spirit before he can enter into the glory of eternal life. The Cross represents earthly life. The crown of thorns, the sufferings of the spirit within the elementary body, and also the victory over the elements of darkness. The body is naked, to indicate that the candidate for immortality must divest himself of all desires for earthly things. The figure is nailed to the cross, symbolizing the death and surrender of the self-will, and that it should not attempt to accomplish anything by its own power, but merely to serve as an instrument whereby the Divine Will is done. Above the head are inscribed the letter I.N.R.I., whose most important meaning is: In Nobis Regnat Jesus (within ourselves reigns Iesous). But the significance of this can be practically known only by those who have died relatively to the world of desire and risen above the temptation for personal existence, in other words, those who have died to self and become alive in the Christ, and in Whom the Kingdom of the holy love-will issuing from the heart of God has been established. To the synic, sophist and fool this symbol is incomprehensible. In the hands of the bigot and hypocrite it is a token of his disgrace and a testimonial of his own godlessness and self-condemnation. The external life is not a valley of suffering for those who enjoy it, but only for those who know of a higher life. The animal enjoys animal life, the intellect the intellectual realm, but the reborn recognizes this earthly existence as a burden. With this recognition he takes on himself the Cross of Christ. The Cross is the first sign by which the virgin of Divine Wisdom marks her disciples."

If we meditate on this we see that the only true righteousness is not of the letter but of the spirit. It is, as typified by the little children, the righteousness of unselfish love, giving all, desiring nothing and so very near to the loving heart of the Father.

A National Message

By the late Rev. W. Pascoe Goard, LL.D., F.R.G.S., F.R.E.S.

Thirdly, let us turn to the question of National Safety and continuance.

We know that the throne of David is established by the oath of God until the end of time.

The continuance of the race of Israel is also guaranteed to the end of time and beyond. But the undisturbed and continuance of the nation was at the first made subject to the keeping of the constitutional law. Deut. xxviii-7. "The Lord shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face; they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways." verse 13; "And the Lord shall make thee the head and not the tail . . . if that thou hearken unto the commandments of the Lord thy God, which I command thee this day, to observe and to do them.

Now Israel did not keep the commandments and statues of Jehovah but instead "the statutes of Omri are kept," that is man made statutes.. As a result the predicted forfeiture of the promised possession has eventuated. Judah has been scattered and ceased to be a nation. Israel driven into exile, has been scattered throughout the nations till gathered in the Isles, but her national organization is working, its part today because she is blind. If you read the sixth chapter of Isaiah, we see that the pudgment on Israel was that she should be deaf and blind. From this time Israel went forth deaf and blind, lead unconsciously by God to the fulfilment of her mission. "Bring forth the blind people that have eyes." "Who is blind but my servant, and deaf as my messenger. "Blindness in part is happened to Israel until the fulness of the gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved," that is through her blindness. For Jesus declared; "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now ye say, we see, therefore your sin remaineth." This was spoken to the Jews. But with returning vision, comes returning responsibility, and the very first act, after accepting Jesus as Saviour, is the accepting of His constitutional law.

In fact his first administrative act on his return will be the re-establishment of the constitution, exemplified and reinforced by the sermon on the mount.

It is seen that although Israel was guaranteed that she should remain a nation, her position as a nation was woefully different from what it would have been had she continued under the Divine Constitution. Settled in the Isles, Israel carried out the Divine mission assigned her, but carried it out as one blind and deaf. She has the labour but not the understanding joy of the task. All these ages the nations of Israel have been in danger from the aggression of their foes, inspired to their destruction by the devil, "Dragon." Finally the culminating terror shall arrive in the Great Day of God Almighty, when all the Gentile nations shall mass their forces for the destruction of the "Chosen" people.

Mark 8:36—"What doth it profit a man, to gain the whole world and forfeit his life?"

Baby Smothered By Sleeping Cat

TIMMINS, Ont., April 9 (CP).—A four-months-old child died here yesterday with a cat sleeping on the babys chest. Mrs. Harold Cox found her child dead 30 minutes after she left him in a carriage in the yard behind the Cox home. Hunched on the baby's chest, preventing it from breathing, was the unusually large cat.

The child's face was purple from asphyxiation and Dr. A. S. Porter, called to the Cox home a few minutes represented as the "Beast" and the after the body was found, said the cat probably had stretched its body over the baby's face, preventing proper breathing.

PORT OF TORONTO OPEN

A tug, the R. C. No. 2 owned by the Russell Construction Company was the first ship to clear the port.

Finding Ourselves in Service — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Mark 8:27-38.

On this Palm Sunday thousands of youths and older folk will be confessing Christ as their divine Lord and Saviour just as Jesus endeavored in our lesson to get his disciples to confess Him.

Jesus asked his disciples, "Who say ye that I am?" Peter replied, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." Jesus commended Peter and said he would build his church on this faith.

At this time Jesus began to speak plainly of his cross: "The son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected . . . and be killed, and after three days rise again."

Jesus insisted his disciples show similar willingness to sacrifice: "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it . . ." (GOLDEN TEXT—Mark 8:36.)

Remanded For Sentence

They were remanded one week for sentence. That phrase is often used in reports of police court cases, and it comes again in a report from St. Thomas. Three youths are under arrest there—19, 18 and 16 years being the respective ages. It may be and possibly is a fact that the magistrate desires some time in which to think the case over. If he were in a hurry he could impose sentence at once.

In all cases the father of the boy concerned is dead. The oldest youth told the court he would like to learn motor mechanics; he was sure he had a bent in that direction, but had never had a chance to work at it. The youngest of the trio, a lad of 16, said he had been working in a shoe factory and thought he was going to learn the business, but he got laid off when things became slack and could find no other place to work. He liked the work he had been doing and would be glad to get another chance at it.

These youths were not working at the time they got into trouble. They said they spent some time hanging around in pool rooms and other places, not knowing where else to go. They were just loafing and they had no money. It may be that is why they put their heads together and decided the easiest solution to their problem would be to do what a number of others had done—go and steal something. If they had been working it is highly probable they would have never turned to theft and breaking in premises. They came upon that notion when they were loafing and when they were not earning any wages.

The thing might not be so serious if these three youths in St. Thomas were the only ones who were loafing and plotting for want of something better to do. The same situation exists in many places. Too many unfortunately. No wonder the magistrate prefers to set a case of that kind over for a week. Like other magistrates he has probably seen quite a bit of life; possibly too he knows it is not going to help much to send these youths to a reformatory. For the moment it seems to be the problem of the magistrate, but the truth is it is the problem of every one of us. But we're not facing it.

He Said Too Much

Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., who is leader and the entire membership as well of the Reconstructionist party in the Commons, is credited with having stated during a debate that "there was not a single municipality in the whole Dominion which was not either bankrupt or facing bankruptcy."

This is one case where we hope Mr. Stevens will return to the scene and claim he has been misquoted. If he has been correctly reported then he has said something which never should have been said. He is merely crying about woe in the land and confusion and stringency which has fallen upon the people. There is no hope in him.

Peterborough is not bankrupt, nor is it facing bankruptcy. It is actually in a sound financial condition. Its methods of financing are better and safer than those followed by the Dominion or Provincial governments. According to the last report of the city auditor the city is spending a little less than it receives, and Ottawa and Toronto are not in that safe position. The city has a debenture debt but it has a fully-sustained sinking fund to meet the obligations represented in those debentures. When Peterborough borrows money by way of debentures—which has not been done in several years—provision is at once made for the setting aside of enough each year to discharge that debt at maturity. Ottawa follows no such plan; neither does our legislature at Toronto.

Peterborough has paid in cash out of its current tax levy year after year the amount required for relief. It is the application of the old pay-as-you-go plan, and that of course is foreign to either federal or municipal financing.

According to the last report of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs there are six counties in Ontario which have no debenture debt at all. In the column where such figures should go there is just that little word "nil" inserted. The counties in that splendid position are: Elgin, Kent, Lambton, Perth, Simcoe and Wellington. Mr. Stevens would look a long time and in vain to find a debt column under Federal or Provincial methods of financing with that happy little word "nil" inserted therein.

We have municipalities which are not in good financial condition, but for the most part they have tightened up on their methods and are working their way out. They are not allowed to borrow and keep on borrowing, nor can they discharge one obligation by the issuing of another loan as is done by both Ottawa and Toronto.

Mr. Stevens can find a large number of municipalities in Ontario for instance where financial conditions are sound and where credit rating is high. They have not all headed for the bowbows.

That Word Is Barred

The business of being an editor is becoming more dangerous especially when the work of the gentleman in charge of the Fortnightly Law Journal finds himself in danger of being locked up in the tower of the Ontario Legislative building.

The editor of legal wisdom wrote vigorously in the last issue about something the legislators had done as being "about as glaring an injustice as a moronic legislature ever perpetrated on an unwary public."

It was that word "moronic" which bothered members. It is a build-up from the noun "moron" meaning an adult whose mental development ceased during childhood. The idea of having perpetrated something on an unwary public bothered them not in the least because every legislature which has ever legislated has been charged with the same thing.

There was some slight discussion over what might be done with the offending editor. He could have been called to appear before the bar of the House and there he would have several options. He could apologize or withdraw the offending word, or failing to do that he could have been locked up in the tower of the House where he would be fed and watered. But as the Legislature is near its close that form of punishment would be insufficient owing to its limited duration. So it looks as though the man were going to run free.

We don't think much of the word "moronic" which he used. It is not at all likely the editor would care to be so classed himself. But when a man who writes for the entertainment, enlightenment and edification of the legal fraternity trips and comes nigh to the point of tumbling into custody over such a word, it must mean that editors in general who have to select thousands of words, daily and not fortnightly are faced with a rather hazardous occupation. So we shall make a little note for future reference—do not refer to our provincial legislators as being "moronic." It is unbecoming and carries with it the danger of being locked up in the tower at Toronto. And with the season for rhubarb pie approaching that would be bad.

"The Paper Said So"

A gentleman was in the office today, and in the course of conversation revealed the object of his visit. "The Examiner said" was the place he started, and he proceeded to quote something which had appeared in a letter written to this paper. At other times it has been found that "The Examiner said" has been applied to statements which have been made to reporters regarding various topics of interest.

What a newspaper says should be regarded as that which appears in its editorial columns. When an individual writes a letter to a paper the printing of that letter does not for one moment place the paper's approval on the views expressed in it. Letters are accepted because the paper believes that people who have something which they desire to say or discuss publicly should be given opportunity to do so, but it is not correct to read a letter in a newspaper and then conclude that "the paper said so." The writer of the letter said so.

This Seems Strange

Estates of fatal accident victims may not sue for loss of expectancy of life, the Ontario Legislature decided today as it advanced through committee a bill amending the Trustee Act. The committee rejected an amendment which would allow the wife, husband, parent or child to sue for damages.

The above is a partial report of the progress of legislation at Toronto, and it is important. If a husband were killed on the highway when he was 40 years of age, and the wife was thus denied the benefit of his earning powers for the remainder of his reasonably expected length of years, why should she not be able to approach the courts and seek redress?

The objectionable point is denying the people the right to go to our courts which are supposed to be free and open to all those who have claims or grievances which require adjusting.

Why Was A Strike Needed?

The drivers of some 600 taxicabs went on strike in Toronto, and the trouble was settled shortly after when the drivers were assured of a $12.50 per week salary with 10 per cent. of their total earnings added. For this amount they are to work 60 hours weekly. What the 10 per cent. amounts to we do not know, but the men offered at the outset to work for a flat rate of $17 per week.

The wonder is they would have to go on strike to receive that amount of money in a city the size of Toronto. It looks as though even a fairly good week would leave them taking home something under the $20 mark and for a married man to live in Toronto on less than $20 per week means a low standard and barely getting by. A little unforseen expenditure and he is sunk.

Now We Understand

It is a relief to come across something in discussions in the Ontario Legislature which one can readily understand. Often enough we are just a trifle puzzled about some of the topics upon which men in places of authority wax eloquent and also long.

So it was that when we read about a statement of Public Works Minister Colin A. Campbell we became delightfully interested. He was reporting on the condition of Chorley Park, for twenty years the official residence of the Lieutenant-Governor of the province of Ontario. Two governors had informed Mr. Campbell that they feared to hold reception and affairs of a large nature, the element of fear being injected by the possibility that it might rain before the last of the guests had made their exit from the vice-regal premises. When the rain came and beat upon the house it was necessary for the folk inside to go romping about gathering up pots and pans to catch the water which dripped through the leaking roof. If such things had to be done while honorable and distinguished guests in goodly numbers were partaking of gubernatorial hospitality it is easy to understand that the honored occupant of the exalted post in Ontario might well be in somewhat of a dither. A guest be gallant gentleman or fair lady could not well sustain dignity or poise of carriage if it became expedient to be hopping over or dodging about between pans and kettles, each container being more or less filled with rain water as it had trickled in through holes in the roof.

Such a problem as that is one in which the populace will find community of interest because of its frequency of occurrence in other habitations. It seems to clarify the situation and do much to simplify the discussions regarding Chorley Park. We have read at times of the way in which responsibility and expense is divided between Ottawa and Toronto, and at times we have been moved to make inquiry into the depths of the constitutional issues involved in having a Lieutenant-Governor in our midst. But not until we read that the roof of the former home of our lieutenant-governors is and has been leaking and that the stately chambers and corridors were liable to be littered with pots and pans on a rainy day did we come to full understanding of the situation. Our conclusion is that it is more serious than we ever anticipated.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Perhaps the Ontario legislators could attain the same end if they would try to act more like members of parliament.

Hitler started out as a paper hanger and it's just like the world's luck that he didn't fall off the ladder.

Ontario has voted $40,000 to fight infantile paralysis in human beings and $75,000 to battle Bang's disease in cattle. The moral is self-pointed.

It promises to take about as long to put the Ontario government's bridge bill over at Ottawa as it would to put the bridge itself over the Niagara.

Blood tests for drunken drivers have been rejected by the Ontario Legislature. That means the hit-and-miss system at present in use will be continued.

We are told that coronary thrombosis is caused by the nerves releasing too much acetyl choline. That is simple enough, when you know the answer.

Saskatchewan farmers find themselves short of horses. That is not the case with the Ontario Hydro which has more horsepower than it knows what to do with.

The Ontario Training School for Boys at Bowmanville has suffered the loss of its camp dining room by fire. Between government mistakes and flames the whole institution will soon be wrecked.

Toronto paper published a picture of the managers of the Leafs and Black Hawks but whether they are shaking hands or merely holding the other fellow's arm to keep him from swinging we are not prepared to say.

METHOD

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Old Grabbem's lived in town for years, the wool's rubbed off above his ears, he's wrinkled and he's brown; for years he says he's always tried to build a bit of civic pride, he aims to boost his town.

¶ And when some movement's under way, then Grabbem has a lot to say, he's right there with the boys; he knows the very thing to do, to make their civic dreams come true, he makes a lot of noise.

¶ And if there's something to be bought, then Grabbem talks an awful lot, he'll rake the ducats in; he'll take a list right down the street, and put the project on its feet, if they but follow him.

¶ And he goes here and he goes there, and does collecting pretty fair, it's hard to turn him down; his reputation seems to fit, for folk around will all admit, he is the best in town.

¶ Then when the funds have all been raised, then Mr. Grabbem's name is praised, and he just laps it down; but he explains with modest view, the only thing he loves to do, is boost the old home town.

¶ But when they total up the cash, if one might ask a question rash, with every good intent; they'd look and search for Grabbem's name, but they would have their work in vain—he never gives a cent.

Editorial Just Plain Nonsense

From Official Parliamentary Reports.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. C. GREEN (Vancouver South): In view of the importance to Canada, and in particular to my own province of British Columbia, of the defence measures which are being taken to protect the Canadian coast I should like to direct the attention of the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Mackenzie) to an editorial appearing in the Halifax Daily Star of April 5. I believe this paper is the evening edition of the Halifax Chronicle. The title of the editorial is:

What Goes on Behind the Scenes.

And it reads as follows:

Some hon. MEMBERS: Order.

Mr. BENNETT: He has a right to read it.

Mr. GREEN: The editorial reads:

During recent weeks there has been much ado in military circles around Halifax. Giant guns have been uprooted from their emplacements along the harbour mouth, munitions have been moved to and fro about the waterfront.

Most of the activities have been conducted under cover of night and everything done with the utmost secrecy—barring what gets told to every Tom, Dick and Harry around the military canteens.

First, the guns were torn from their positions, put on flat cars and started off for Vancouver—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. The hon. member should state his question. What is he reading from?

Mr. GREEN: I intend to ask the minister for a statement in regard to this editorial, and I think in fairness to him I should read it so that he may know exactly what it says.

Mr. SPEAKER: A question can be asked based on the facts stated in the editorial, but I do not think the editorial can be read.

Mr. BENNETT: But it is the only way the hon. member can put the question properly. This is not a question of reading a telegram. We have discussed that before, and the sense of this house has been entirely against that limitation. I endeavoured to have that limitation imposed, but the Prime Minister was of the opinion that it was an improper limitation to impose and it was not imposed. If the reading of the editorial is the only way in which the question can properly be put—

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: But it is not in this case.

Mr. BENNETT: It is in this case, unfortunately. The Prime Minister has not quite followed the terms of the editorial. It contains specific allegations; it is not conjecture. It states that guns have been removed from their emplacements, put on cars and started for Vancouver, and e converso, that they have been taken up from their foundations in Vancouver and started towards Halifax.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): The question is now stated by my right hon. friend.

Mr. Green: The reply yesterday dealt only with the situation in Halifax; there was no mention of Vancouver or the Pacific. This editorial concerns the constituency of the minister as well as my own, and I think in fairness the editorial shoud be read to the house and an explanation given.

Mr. BENNETT: The hon. member cannot ask his question without reading the statements.

Mr. SPEAKER: I think the hon. member should give a summary of the article and then put his question.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): I still suggest that this is highly improper.

Mr. SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Surely an editorial which names an hon. member of this house is one that should not be read, particularly when it is so written as to appear to be reflecting upon the minister.

Mr. BENNETT: There used to be great glory taken in reading editorials reflecting on me by name. It has suddenly become a new law to be applied only when the present government is concerned. If the Prime Minister wants me to give references it can easily be done if I am given time to turn them up. Editorials from newspapers all over Canada were read—

Mr. DUNNING: Not on questions on the orders of the day.

Mr. BENNETT: Is there any difference between orders of the day and any other time?

Mr. DUNNING: Surely.

Mr. GREEN: There is only one more paragraph I wish to read:

Everything was done in feverish haste, almost as if the entire imperial Japanese navy had already been sighted in Juan de Fuca straits and heading for Victoria.

I would ask the minister for a statement as to the accuracy of that report and also as to whether or not we have legislation in Canada to protect military secrets, such as the official secrets act in Great Britain. If not, such legislation would seem very necessary at the present time.

Mr. MACKENZIE (Vancouver): I think my hon. friend from Vancouver South (Mr. Green) knows as well as I do that this statement to which he refers—

On top of all that, somebody began to rip out guns from emplaycements at Vancouver and start them off for Halifax. Then that was stopped.

—is the most ridiculous nonsense in the world, because there has not been an emplacement in Vancouver in all the years he has been living there. In the second place, of course, the reference to the entire Japanese navy being headed for Victoria is absolutely fantastic and incorrect. This is the most absolute nonsense.

WINNINGS WELL SPENT.

(London Sunday Dispatch)

MRS. ALICE Vernon, 67-years-old widow, won £200 in a football pool.

She sat down immediately she knew and wrote a letter enclosing the cheque to the Leigh-on-Sea Poor Law Committee, telling them to take £100 in repayment of relief she had received during the past three years.

The committe sent back £116; she had only received £84.

That £84 bought for Mrs. Vernon something more precious than gold. Her friends call her The Most Honest Woman in Britain.

She is something more.

Independent—and VERY British.

NOT FAIR

Editor Examiner:

Sir: It is very hard for one to understand how the painters and decorators are going to get a living when people are hiring men to do their paint jobs who are working in factories and do this work in their spare time. These men go out and do work cheap and it is not giving the painters a chance to figure. This has been happening for a number of years but I'm afraid things will be a lot worse this spring.

I am not against men getting work but when they make it that the men who are depending on their own trades for a living and have no chance whatever of figuring against men who take work so cheap I do not think it is fair.

RE CHEMONG BRIDGE

Editor Examiner:

Sir: As a taxpayer of Peterborough and desiring to be fair, I wish to express my true opinion of this Chemong bridge situation.

Through actual experience, I feel that the satirical item appearing in our local paper recently, came, not from a broad-minded citizen of a county or township, but probably from some person desiring a highway by his door which must be near this head-of-the-lake.

I am as anxious as anyone to keep down expense in our city, and certainly I am in no way partial to any township interested in this project, but I feel I may truthfully say that tourists spend twenty dollars in Peterborough to every one they spend in the townships through which they pass going to Chemong or Pigeon Lakes. I actually saw one tourist who had a cottage on one of these lakes spend fifteen dollars in a Peterborough grocery store, and twenty dollars for fishing supplies.

I have more than once heard tourist discussions that the most beautiful scenic highway not of Ontario, but of Canada, could be built from Peterborough to Bobcaygeon, by constructing not only a bridge over Chemonk Lake, but also one over Pigeon Lake, thence proceeding to the beautiful little summer resort of Bobcaygeon with its many bridges "I cannot understand," said one tourist why the money spent by this government on roads through dense woods back north, would not be better spent on a scenic road of this sort."

Travelling by the head-of-the-lake route to reach these lakes presents, I would say, a different picture. There you cross a bridge over an unsightly bog hole, completely devoid of scenery or beauty of any kind.

Now is this Chemong bridge, a so-called dilapidated structure, an eyesore? It was considered no such thing by one party who had the privilege of seeing the bridge in a Winnipeg theatre, where it created in him a desire to see that odd, and interesting bridge, and witness the scenery around that beautiful body of water. Was it an eye-sore to two business men whom I encountered waiting for an hour at the C. P. R. station, and who inquired about the two noteworthy Peterborough sites, namely the lift-lock, and the Chemong bridge? When I informed them that they might see the lift-lock in three minutes, but that it would take half an hour to view the Chemong bridge, they said as they started for a taxi, "we are going to see Peterborough Chemong bridge anyway."

Contrary to a statement in the item the other evening, I might add, that this bridge in no way disfigures a beautiful lake, but emphasizes the beauty of the lake because from it you get a most beautiful view of the lake and its surroundings.

As for a feeder line for these heavily laden transport planes, I think the mind of the writer is certainly peering into the dim and distant future, in search of a reason for having a highway where he needs it.

Therefore, I know that our capable City Council, whose duty it is to look after Peterborough as a whole, will make no abrupt decision to favor a highway by the head-of-the-lake, which highway in all probability would divert traffic, and tourists in other directions and to other centres to spend their money.

If the tourist industry is one of the greatest in Canada, and we are to support it, I would suggest that if Peterborough city is going to help to build a highway by Fowler's Corners around the head of Chemong Lake, the money so spent would be much better spent on a new bridge if the one there now is such an eye sore. Would we not then be keeping the traffic and tourists in the path of water and scenery always sought by them? Besides, I might add, the road to Chemong bridge is already finished and once the bridge is built there are two county roads to meet it at the Ennismore side. Would it then not be less expense to look after the bridge than to undertake the other long highway leading nowhere?

TWICE AS LARGE.

(The New Yorker)

THEY ARE shooting "Marie Antoinettee" in Hollywood. (Good song theme, that.) They have built a replica of the Palace of Versailles, though it's not exactly a replica. The original was on too small a scale; you couldn't get more than about five hundred dancers in the Galerie des Glaces. M-G-M's Versailles is twice as large and twice as magnificent as that of Louis XIV. The French, we hear, are annoyed at this dimming of their proud symbol of magnificance. Versailles, however, remains a symbol still: of magnificence brought low, of time's tarnishing. The ghosty red heels of Louis XIV tap through desolate corridors, under roofs preserved from leaking by the munificence of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

GLOBE TROTTERS.

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

THE EDITOR of the Peterborough Examiner and the editor of the St. Thomas Times-Journal are in an argument about European hotels. . .

We are not going to get mixed up in this private war about gold toothpicks and full-course dinners in the middle of the night. We've knocked about a bit, too, and know the hotels in question, but our most vivid recollection of all these high-class European hotels is their bills, and the line-up of gold braid and buttons when we departed.

So far as we are concerned, for a long cold one on a hot Summer's day, we recommend that delightful old inn in Fleet Street, London, where pressmen gather, The Falstaff. But for real value, nothing can compare with Mrs. Galbraith's regular shilling tea about a block from the old abbey in Melrose. And, too, you are allowed to nurse the grandchildren while she prepares it.

A Bit of Nonsense

THE PLATFORM

Old Lady (on platform)—"Which platform for the London train?"

Porter—"Turn to the left and you'll be right!"

"Don't be impertinent, young man."

LIFE IN THE EAST NOT ATTRACTIVE TO THE BRITISH

"It's all right to talk about the mystic East, but you wouldn't wish to stay here longer than to get the next boat or airplane back," wrote Frank Hill from Manamah, Capital of Bahrein, the Bahrein Islands in the Persian Gulf, to his sister, Mrs. L. R. Groombridge. Mr. Hill is employed with Imperial Airways at the capital of the Islands in the far East, one of the outposts of Britain's new mail service to India and Malaya.

"This dashing Sheikh and harem business has been overdone. They are still here, I admit, but if you were not used to associating with them their smell would knock you flat."

Mr. Hill described in his letter events connected with the visit of Prince (or Sheikh) Saud Bin Abdul Aziz, heir apparent to the throne of Arabia, to Bahrein on the occasion of the annual celebration of the coronation of Sheikh Hamed Bin Isa Al Khalifa.

"About an hour before Prince Saud Bin arrived with his retinue of forty servants in three large motor launches, His Highness Sheikh Sir Hamed Bin, ruler of Bahrein, accompanied by his numerous brothers and countless other Sheikhs, drove on to the pier. They were all in smart American cars, Plymouth, Nash and Ford, but His Highness' car was easily distinguishable as it is painted a bright silver, the only one of that color in Bahrein as apparently he will not allow any other car to copy it.

Smart Troops

The police, composed of 100 foot, 8 camel and 6 horse, looked very smart in their khaki shorts, shirts and puttees, and excelled themselves in their handling of rifles and bayonets and also with their "very brass" rendering of "Colonel Bogey,"—the only tune they knew.

After all the salaaming and hugging was finished after the visitors landed, the Sheikhs all went off to the palace amid much yelling and screaming. I forgot to mention that Bahrein is the proud possessor of three fieldpieces that seem to have been used by Cromwell or some other ancient. A royal salute of about 60 (? ?) guns was fired as the Prince came into the harbor. By the way, our harbor as about the size of a billiards table. This salute was made possible by having three convicts to each gun, loading and unloading, while the fastest policeman ran up and down the line pulling the strings that fired the shots! Very original, what do you think?

The next day there was a big reception at the palace. All the Sheikhs looked very picturesque in their native dress and there was an abundance of gold and silver. Their swords and daggers were all of gold and their rifles inlaid with silver. These Arabs sure are lads for their finery and ornaments, but I would never relish being their prisoner had I by any chance to fight against them. Their dancing in which they use rifles held aloft with both hands was too realistic at times for me.

Visited Market Daily

After the reception and each day until the day of his departure, the Prince visited the market and shops and spent the whole of 10,000 rupees. Three rupees are worth about a dollar. All their money was in gold sovereigns. I am nearly prepared to swear that there are more sovereigns in Arabia, than in any other part of the world. The Arabs do not trust paper money.

When the Prince left Bahrein he was presented by Sheikh Hamed with—two rows of pearls (this place is the home of the pearl industry) 10 camels, 6 horses and 4 cars. Sheikh Hamed has since been to Mecca where he stayed with Idn Saud and returns the day this letter leaves, bringing 10 cars and countless other buckshees. That day will of course be another excuse for a holiday, so I had better leave this now and chase my "boys" so that I can get two days' work out of them today as they are bound to be off on Wednesday.

In accordance with Mohammedan law Sheikh of Arabia can have only four wives at one time, but I hear he has a complaint against life that he had one wife left to him in a will and he can't get rid of her."

NO MORE FACE SLAPPING

WINDSOR, Ont., April 9—(CP).—A City Council meeting Tuesday which ended with Alderman Norman Eansor having his face slapped by a woman spectator had a sequel at a police commission meeting last night. At the suggestion of Mayor E. S. Wigle, one or two police officers will attend each council meeting in future to maintain order.

Collegiate Notes

TRAVELOGUE

The Students' Council will sponsor an illustrated travelogue on Switzerland on April 27. The speaker will be Captain Fred H. Reid. This should be very interesting as well as educational. Captain Reid gives biweekly addresses in the Eaton Auditorium in Toronto. There will be a students' matinee in the afternoon and tickets will sell for 10c. In the evening Captain Reid will address the adults. Both these lectures should be well worth hearing. Tickets for the evening show have been given to the form representatives. The tickets sell for 25c, and the form selling the most tickets will be rewarded with free admission to the afternoon lecture.

MORNING ENTERTAINMENT.

Miss Margaret Lundy, vice-president of the Students' Council, announced that there will be another form of entertainment in the assemblies from now on. The newly organized Harmonica Club started the series by giving a medley of old-time numbers, including "Susannah," "Shell Be Comin' Round the Mountain," and others. The leader, Garnet Windsor, promised to have some popular music soon. This club was formed recently and has been practising regularly. They have done a fine job so far, and deserve much credit. Other entertainment during the week was tentatively suspended.

BASKETBALL.

The basketball team is still waiting for word concerning the rest of the playoffs. H. A. Craig is coaching the team in the absence of H. L. Bamforth, who is recovering from an appendix operation. There may be an exhibition game some time next week to help keep the boys in shape and to defray travelling expenses.

CADETS.

The Cadet Officers Training Corps met in the Armouries. A good turnout was advised by Capt. Craig to attend drills regularly from now on. Sergeant-Major Frape of the Prince of Wales Rangers divided the officers into small companies and instructed the boys in company drill. At organization drill the corps was divided into three companies, each with three platoons and also a special voluntary squad. Colonel Bill Wheeler has been appointed O. C. this year, with a capable assistant, Major Donald Duncan as second in command. The voluntary squad will be under the Adjutant, Barrie Jack.

The auxiliary corps, consisting of signallers and first-aid men, has been drilling for some time now. The bugle band, under Major Hugh Davidson, is organizing now, and should be, as in other years, a success. A great deal of thanks is due to Sergt.-Major Frape. He has voluntarily come out to the Armouries once or twice a week since Christmas to drill the officers and to try to improve the corps in general. His help is appreciated by the Cadets.

OBSERVATION PLATFORM.

Mr. Henry, a victim of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, surprised those present at the morning assembly on Wednesday. He was heard to utter the following statement in reference to the poor response to his ticket selling campaign: "I don't want to be Grumpy, but those form representatives who have not called for tickets must be Dopey. Please come and get them and make me Happy."....Miss Edna Borland gave a rousing pep talk on Tuesday morning about the coming illustrated lecture by Capt. Reid.

Dr. H. R. H. Kenner returned to school on Monday morning after a week's absence. He received a great ovation when he appeared on the platform in the auditorium.

EASILY ASSUMED.

Some people are easily amused. In a spare on Tuesday, a certain scholarly fourth former spent his time by playing solitaire. His cards consisted of a driver's permit, several dance tickets and other assorted tickets. Owing to a short period he did not finish his game, but Jim would have "got out" one way or another if the bell had not rung.... The music for the morning assemblies continues to improve. Until recently the accompaniment to the singing was just a piano. Now, there is a three-piece orchestra. Miss Merrill Smith is pianist, Bob Graham plays the saxophone, while Jim Lillico blends in with his violin. This orchestra has been doing fine work and has introduced several new pieces....The Echoes will be published on or about April 25....The annual supply of school pins and rings arrived this week. The rings were distributed from the library after school. The pins will be given out next week. Both rings and pins are very smart, and every pupil should own one or the other.

EXAMINATIONS.

The time for examinations draws near. On Wednesday the third forms wrote the final examination on French prose. The Easter examinations for Lower School began on Friday. Owing to these examinations, the regular classes in the Lower School will be suspended until after Easter. The classes in Middle and Upper Schools will be carried as usual except that the rotary system will not be used. Pupils will remain in their formrooms until after the exams.

The application forms for the Departmental examinations have been issued, and students are busy filling them out. This is one of the less favorable signs of the coming of summer in the eyes of the student. The Departmental examinations will be written between June 14 and June 29.

WESTERN RELIEF.

Mr. L. J. Pettit announced that P.C.I. has "adopted" six schools in Western Canada. These schools, public schools, are badly in need of such school supplies as chalk, crayons, maps, paper and text books. The pupils want clothes and shoes. A list of the articles needed is posted in each of the rooms. Pupils are asked to bring whatever old clothes or text books they have to the school dining-room before 9 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. A committee composed of Helen Smoke, Lenore Lewis, John Craig and Ken Gillespie has been appointed to superintend the campaign. Cash will be gratefully received by the committee or by Mr. Pettit. Among the books needed are "Prestor John" and "Path of a King," both by John Buchan, "A Tale of Two Cities" by Charles Dickens, High School Latin Text Book and scribblers.

P.C.I. is not the first school to adopt this idea of Western relief. Lindsay Collegiate looks after two schools in Saskatchewan, while one of the Hamilton High Schools supports ten.

Candid Camera Shots

Candid camera shots clicked at random in Peterborough the other afternoon are shown here. The unsuspecting victims were intent on other things when the Examiner photographer "shot" them. If persons whose pictures appear here come into Examiner office and identify themselves they will each be given an enlargement of their photograph. And to other Peterborough residents; who knows, you may be the next victim.

MORE ABOUT— RUPTURE CAUSED

shunting crew who was on the train at the time said that he had seen Staunton just before the accident, standing on the car behind the engine. Witness explained that the shunter backed into track 4 of the Quaker Oats yard and after picking up a box car there had just travelled about five car lengths when the brakes were suddenly applied and the witness, looking back, saw Staunton on the ground. Mr. Meagher said that he had exchanged signals with Staunton shortly before.

Witness said that it had been snowing earlier in the afternoon but that the top of the car was dry immediately after the accident. There was a strong northwest wind blowing but witness was not prepared to say whether that had anything to do with Staunton's falling. The dead trainman, he said, was a reliable capable workman who understood his job thoroughly.

Finds Scratches

Mr. Meagher said that in examining the top of the car after the accident he had seen some scratches near the edge on the east side that might have been made by the nails in Staunton's boots.

The ground where Staunton fell was sod and was level. The road bed, he said in answer to a question from a juror, was in good condition. The distance from the top of the car to the ground was about 15 feet.

The train was only going about three miles an hour and was stopped almost instantly.

James DeFinney, brakeman on the shunter, testified that he was riding at the rear of the third car away from the engine, about 90 feet from Staunton when the accident occurred, and when the train was stopped he saw the fireman down on the ground with the injured man. When he last saw Staunton before the accident he was standing about the middle of the car back of the engine. DeFinney said that the train was running at about three miles an hour on a straight track and there was no bumping or jolting. The weather was quite cold and windy but the top of the car was not slippery, he stated.

Calls It Mystery

"Can you account for Mr. Staunton's falling?" asked Mr. McElderry.

"No, I cannot," replied the witness. "It is a mystery to me."

DeFinney told of seeing Staunton half sitting up with blood on the side of his face and of noticing after the man's mitts had been removed that his finger was injured. Staunton had said that he was all right and wanted to get up from the ground. He walked over to the doctor's car.

Witness said that Staunton had not complained before the accident of feeling unwell.

"After the accident didn't he say what made him fall?" queried a juror and the witness replied in the negative.

Saw Him Fall

Norman James, fireman on the shunter saw Staunton fall off. He was sitting in the cab he testified and could see Staunton on the car next to the engine standing with his back toward the witness. There was no jolting and the train was not moving faster than three or four miles an hour.

"I saw him disappear over the side of the car," witness testified. "He threw his arms up and seemed to go over sideways."

James told of seeing the injured man after the accident, and corroborated DeFinney's evidence in that respect. Witness had not asked Staunton what had happened.

"Have you any opinion as to what caused him to fall off?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"No, I have not."

Witness said that he had not heard Staunton complain of not feeling well on the day of the accident.

Engineer's Evidence

Andrew Clegg, engineer of the shunter said Staunton had been on top of the first car next to the engine all the way down from Auburn.

"I saw him fall off the car," witness said. "He seemed to make a half turn before he went over. I couldn't see anything to cause him to fall. There was no curve in the track there. His feet was the last part of him to leave the car."

Witness told of applying his brakes immediately and of hurrying to where Staunton was. He had noticed his injured hand he said. When he first spoke to Staunton the latter did not answer but later when witness had asked him how the accident happened the injured trainman said something about having been trying to get down. It was witness's opinion that Staunton was stunned when he said that. He would not have tried to get down at that place on the car.

Mr. Clegg said there was a strong wind blowing and that possibly a sudden gust striking Staunton had caused him to lose his balance.

Medical Testimony

Dr. R. K. Magee testified he was called to the scene of the accident about 4.30 o'clock and said that the injured man had not complained of any other injuries other than to his hands. He had driven him to Nicholls Hospital in his own car and the patient's hands had been X-rayed, revealing a compound fracture of the index finger of the left hand and a fracture of the right hand. Witness had examined him for other injuries but had found no indications of any nor did Staunton complain of being hurt in any other part. The injured man had been given an anaesthetic, the dislocation was reduced and the fracture set and he had recovered consciousness and was apparently well when Dr. Magee left the hospital at ten minutes to 7 o'clock. Staunton, in fact had expressed a wish to go home but witness had refused to allow him to do so. Dr. Magee said that he had been called back to the hospital at 8.10 o'clock and Staunton was then dead. Dr. Cameron who had been at the hospital had been called just before.

Dr. Magee said that he had learned of the cause of death after the postmortem. It had been caused by internal bleeding. There had been nothing to indicate that condition. He had examined the patient's chest and abdomen for any indication of internal injuries but pressure had failed to reveal any soreness nor had Staunton complained of pain at all.

Postmortem Discoveries

Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield who with Dr. T. W. H. Young had performed the postmortem examination gave the results of the inquiry. They had discovered the peritoneum full of flood showing a serious hemorrhage. None of the larger organs had been ruptured but examination revealed that there had been a number of tears in the mesentery, a fold of the peritoneum which connects the intestines with the wall of the abdominal caviety. This injury had caused the internal bleeding which resulted in death. Heart, lungs and other organs were in healthy condition, except the liver which was in the condition known as hob-nailed.

Dr. T. W. H. Young agreed that Staunton's death was due to abdominal hemorrhage and shock. The tears in the mesentery could have been caused by the jolt of the fall. Dr. Young said the injury would cause a slow hemorrhage. In case of serious injury there was sometimes shock enough to cause numbness and there was less pain than in less serious cases. In this case there had been no complaint from the patient of pai nand examination had failed to reveal the injury. In answer to a juror Dr. Young said that a X-ray would not have shown the existing condition.

"The injury was such" said the witness, "that no matter what had been done for him it could not have saved his life and there was no indication that anything should have been done."

Dr. Young said that from the injuries to Staunton's hands he was satisfied that he had been conscious when he fell from the car. These injuries were such as would be caused by a man trying to save himself as he hit the ground whereas if he had been unconscious he would have fallen limply and the broken hand would not likely have eventuated.

In summing up the evidence briefly Coroner Dr. Herbert Young pointed out that it was Staunton's duty to ride on top of the car.

After half an hour's deliberation the jury brought in the following verdict:

"In the opinion of this jury Harvey Staunton came to his death as a result of shock and internal hemorrhage caused by falling off the top of a box car in the Quaker Oats siding, Peterborough, Ont., on April 4, 1938, north of the Quaker Oats plant. The accident happened at 4.25 p.m. and Mr. Staunton died in Nicholls Hospital about 8 p.m. the same night."

Zululand is to have a large new national wild game reserve.

ST. JOHN TEENITES CAPTURE SENIOR GIRLS BASKETBALL TITLE

QUAKER MAIDS TAKE JUNIOR GROUP TITLE

St. John's Teenites captured the Ladies' Basketball League senior championship for the year last night at the Y.W.C.A. with their second straight playoff win over Westclox, 8 to 7. Quaker Maids won the junior sectional title with an 8-6 decision over Quaker Debs in a sudden-death playoff. Orfuns won a 14-8 challenge match from C.G.E. on the same card.

Another big and noisy crowd of followers of the girls' teams whooped it up during these thrilling final tilts. Competition was of a high standard and as keen as the close counts in the playoff fixtures would indicate. It was the second win in two starts for the amazing Teenites, who brought their church the first girls' cage title, and a neat win for the amazing Teenites, who brought their church the first girls' cage title, and a neat win for the Maids over the young and smart Debs. The third tussle of the evening was an exhibition match. This trio of games brought to a conclusion a successful season of basketball at the Y.W.C.A.

Shading the Debs by but a single point in each half of their torrid tilt, the Quaker Maids survived the sudden-death final to win a junior championship. They earned the decision but the result was decidedly in doubt till the final whistle. Play was fast, even and exciting with close but clean checking shown by both youthful squads. The score was 5-4 for the ultimate winners at halftime, and they add a point margin the last stanza. R. Dalliday had three points for the winners, with M. Sullivan and M. Boyle getting two each, and V. Woods one. For the losers, H. White led with three points, as R. Farr got two and B. Frizzelle one. The teams:

Quaker Debs: H. White, M. Andrews, R. Farr, E. Roberts, B. Frizzelle.

Quaker Maids: M. Sullivan, M. Boyle, R. Dalliday, E. Alexander, E. O'Leary, V. Woods, A. Frost, D. Frost.

Referees—K. Killespie and W. Thirnbeck.

Teenites piled up a good lead in the first half of the senior struggle and then barely staved off a sustained attack by Westclox in a hectic final frame to gain the decision by the narrowest of margins. It was 8-4 for St. John's at the rest period and they were blanked the rest of the route as Westclox counted three points. Checking was quite close as the rivals played careful basketball, but it was always exciting. J. Coleman topped the Teenites in tallying with four points, while A. Bowler got three points and E. Gynane one, this squad playing fine basketball. C. Metcalfe and M. Allison got two points apiece for the losers, with M. Hawthorne, P. Wolstenholme and L. McNaughton counting a point each. The teams:

Teenites: J. Coleman, E. Gynane, I. Young, A. Bowler, C. Clark, T. Law, E. Harte-Maxwell.

Westclox: L. McNaughton, J. Crowe, C. Metcalfe, M. Allison, A. Flynn, M. Hawthorne, D. Dawson, N. Pammett, P. Wolstenholme, M. Goldie.

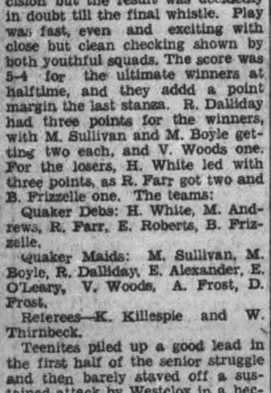
Referees—J. Cooper, K. Gillespie.

Orfuns edged out a 14-8 triumph over C.G.E. in a challenge match, play being fast and fairly close all the way. The Electrics finished stronger but had a big early lead by Orfuns to combat. B. Blade was top scorer with five points and F. Bestard counted four. K. Rogow led the losers with three points. The teams:

Orfuns: G. Mortimer, S. Levine, B. Blade, J. Dawson, M. Snowden, M. Ferguson, F. Bestard, P. Davies.

C.G.E.: M. Hodson, V. Bartley, A. Craig, K. Rogow, G. Mann, E. Foster, F. Nolan, M. Wood, M. McCarthy.

Junior Coach



Coach of St. Boniface Seals, junior hockey champions of western Canada, is Mike Kryschuk, ABOVE, who will shortly take his team east for the Memorial Cup finals against either Oshawa Generals or Perth Blue Wings. The finals will be played in Toronto on Saturday.

Pockets Pesos

This year's winner was Henry Picard, ABOVE, who led all the way and registered a 285 for the 72 hole affair to pocket $1,500.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well Mac, this screwey N. H. L. play off serious is still with us and at the present writing the Leaves and the Black Hawks is all tied up with I win each and they tie into each other into Chicago Sun. nite. You can call your own winners, customers. I ain't even going to try and guess the lineups, for what with injuries and league rulings and such the Hawks is liable to start out with Manager Bill Stewart on right wing and Major McLaughlin in the nets. I thing is clear the refereeing in these playoffs has got to be a joke. The face and head injuries in Thurs. nite's game in Toronto shows how high the sticks was being carried and judging by the casualty lists the Hawks was on the catching end of most of the stuff and yet very little of this rough work was penalized.

The Wrong Slant

Whoever sold the officials the idea that they should let things go in the playoffs that they check up during the regular season I don't know but I do know this that if this laxity goes on to the end of the serious there may be some one seriously hurt. Then the fickle public will swing around pronto and say the officials should oughta stopped that kinda thing. They has been too many folks cut around the face and head, Mac, and I for I don't believe the real fans want to see it. Good lusty body checking and that kinda strenous play is all right but cross checks and slashes across the face aint what the customers pay their way into the ice box to see. It will keep on, we suppose until somebody has a skull fracture or loses a eye and then they will be an outcry to cut out the rough stuff.

Can't Get Excited

As for this final serious I can't get steamed up about it. On the season's play and taking the League as a whole all it really amounts to is that the Leaves which finished third in the matter of points is playing off with the sixth place team for the Stanley Cup. If that makes sense you can't prove it by me. Here's Chicago which only win 4 games on the road all season outa 24, turns around in the playoffs, knocks Canadiens and Americans for a loop and opens up the final dash for the mug by licking the Leaves. If that aint something. All that is necessary now to close the season and a gale of laughter everywhere but in Toronto would be for the Hawks to go and cop the serious. How they kin do it with Karakas with a broken toe and 2 of their best forwards Mister Romnes and Mister Mush March injured aint very clear but the whole season is so blamed cock-eyed that the Hawks might toss the stick boy out there and have him pop in a goal or 2 at the critical moment. Anyway if the Chicagos, cripples and all, grabs that 3rd game tomorrow night, that should get the biggest laugh of the whole Sunday nite broadcast belt and that includes Charlie McCarthy and Jack Benny.

Our bal lteam is called to begin physical jerks next week. We would suggest the exercise including swinging for the left field fence. All these years we been longing for a guy in a Peterborough unle what could pop one over the board when he came up to the plate and found the cushions crowded with teammates.

That seems to be the works.

Sportfully yours,
A. Wise Cracker.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC PERDUE

THIS blinkety-blank weather has our chilblains yelling again, and when our dogs bother us we have difficulty thinking. However, the show must go on, and a snitch in time saves time, so we will snitch a few clippings thither and hither. Might just as well admit it as Socrates or Helen of Troy or someone once said: You can fool some of the people some of the time, and some of the people some of the time, but you cawn't fool some of the people some of the time. Or something. Too many of the better columnists take their scissors instead of their pens in hand, and who are we to break the rule of Scribes' Union 541? Anyway, there isn't much stirring in sports locally in April, barring the odd—some really odd—re-organization meetings, and we gotta fill up somehow. But enough of apologies. On with the chatter.

* * * * * *

AGENT with the good Gaelic monicker of Walter Gilhooly, who is sports editor of the Ottawa Journal, writes of the Oshawa Generals: "The team has speed, balance, combination and a defence that's not often found in a collection of juniors. They're all natives of Oshawa with the exception of two, who hail from nearby Whitby, and it is rather amazing t he type of hockey player being bred in that section. The fact that they chased the Wolves back home to Sudbury was in itself an indication of what a fast, skilled young aggregation they are." We differ with Walter as to them all being from Oshawa or Whitby. Tonn and Taylor are from Toronto and Knipfel hails from Kitchener. And Dafoe is from Port Perry. The rest may all be natives. Not that we're being like the kettle turning its spout up at the pot, but just to keep the records straight. What junior team ever went into the Memorial Cup finals without some imports?

* * * * * *

BEFORE leaving hockey, let us say we are all for the Leafs to win the Stanley Cup, and think they will. They deserve it this year, and hasn't Chicago done well to get in the finals? But we sure admire Manager Bill Stewart of the Hawks for several reasons. 'Cause he is a battler, because he is a first-year manager who made good, because he proved our contention that there is no magic to being a good coach but just ability to handle players—as the players make a coach—and finally on account of he seems to be a real good scout. He battled Smythe and Cotton with his fists before the first game in Toronto, but was quite willing to bury the hatchet next day.

* * * * * *

AND here's a story they tell of him in the Montreal Star: "Stewart called his Hawks together before playing Canadiens in the third-place cup series and said, 'Boys, Babe Seibert has a bad knee as you all know; he also has an invalid wife and kid. I don't want any of you to rough him during this series. Don't let him get away with anything, but don't pick on that injured knee. I'd rather we lost than make a cripple of a guy for life.' Hats off to a fellow like that." We just thought some of you neutral fans who will listen in tomorrow night to the third game in Chicago might be interested. There are too few guys in hockey like this Stewart, who umpires Big League ball in the summer, and who quit being the best N.H.L. referee in the business to pilot those surprising Hawks.

* * * * * *

BILL WALSHE, Kingston scribe, has just returned with the victorious junior "B" champs of Ontario, and is getting settled down to office work again. He says there isn't much doing in baseball down that way yet, but a meeting may be called next week. Bill states Johnny Goodfellow is home on a visit to Kingston from collitch in Canton, N'Yawk, where Tony Paczkowski is also a student, and that both players would like to play for the Ponies again. No doubt Tony will be back with several more U.S. ball players who are ambitious to learn summer mathematics—pertaining to percentages, angles, etc.—in the C.O.B.L. Yeah, summer students have long been a boon to Joe Daley. Red Scrutton is located now in Kirkland Lake.

* * * * * *

SPEAKING of figures, we are rather amazed that Belleville—which must boast a population of at least 16,000—can't field a senior ball team. They used to trot out the best C.O.B.L. squads and won Ontario honors more than once. But the past two years have seen the diamond game die an agonizing death. The passage of Peeney Mills seemed to put a period to the game in the Quinte city. It is not the sports writer's fault as he is a constant booster for baseball and will, no doubt, in time get it going once more. Even towns the size of Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville and others can field good intermediate ball teams, but Belleville can find no sponsors. They did put out a fair junior outfit last year, which may within a few years form the nucleus of a senior team. Meantime, they have nothing.

* * * * * *

NAPANEE have less than half the population of Belleville, yet they had a C.O.B.L. outfit last year. Dunno about this season, yet. And look at some of the Ontario towns which supported pro squads in the Can.-Am. class "D" loop the last few years. Perth had but 4,000 folks, Smiths Falls but 7,000 and Brockville barely 10,000. In fact, Knotty Lee's champs of Ogdensburg played last year in a town of 17,000 people. Peterborough is no metropolis by any means, but we have some 25,000 souls in this city and quite a few of them are baseball fans. If they have a good home team. We are lucky in this population and in having diversified industries, so that a slump doesn't affect us as badly as, say, Oshawa. And we are lucky in generally having fair ball teams and pretty good crowds at the game. But so much for figures. We enjoy figures best around the bathing beaches.

GIRLS' cage season terminated last evening in the Y. W. C. A. with St. John Teenites and Quaker Maids winning leage championships. The Teenites finished a fine season by bringing home their first lasses' hoop championship and they did it decisively with two straight playoff nods over Westclox in the senior section. Quaker Maids copped the junior honors over Quaker Debs and deserved it but had to hustle plenty against their younger rivals in this sudden-death final. Orfuns also beat C. G. E. in a challenge match the same eve. Quite a crowd of fans whooped it up at the keen competition and close scores in those playoff tilts. Teenites took an 8-7 win over Westclox whilst the Maids grabbed an 8-6 verdict over Debs—and you can't make 'em much closer, eh? A good season for a classy circuit.

ESCAPE IN A CEMETERY

TORONTO, April 9 (C.P.).—Police fired two shots during a mile-long chase through streets, over back fences and into a cemetery early to-day after two car thieves dressed in soldier's uniforms.

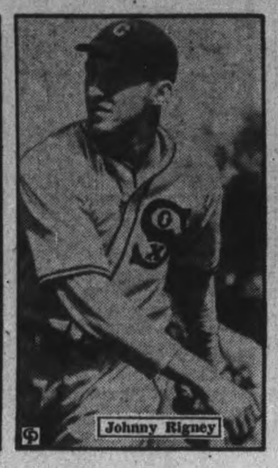
Loss Of Appling On Top Of Bonura Deal Puts James Joseph Dykes In Tough Spot

Gee Walker



Johnny Rigney

Henry Steinbacher

Arguments about the destiny of the White Sox as a result of the trades Manager Jimmy Dykes engineered during the off-season must wait upon the recovery of Luke Appling.

If Appling doesn't get back in there before June the White Sox chances to stay in the first division must be regarded as slim. The hard-hitting shortstop one of the best infielders in the American league, suffered a broken ankle in a training camp game. The medicos figure he will be out of the game for five to eight weeks. But it may be three months before the star can get back to his job, both bones in the lower right leg being fractured.

That Bonura Deal.

That blow to Sox hopes came on the heels of a decision by the United Order of Atavistic Arguiers to he effect that Dykes had thrown a wrench into the works when he traded Zeke Bonura, fourth-best hitter in the league, for Joe Kuhel, a fancy first baseman without much authority at the plate.

The Arguiers previously had given the Sox no worse than an even break in the deal that sent Fred Walker, and Vernon Kennedy to Detroit in exchange for Gerald Walker. Marvin Owen and Mike Tresh. With the developments such as they are, Gee will have to hit .500 to keep the Sox up there, and Owen will have to add 40 points to his .288 batting average of last year. Tresh is a young catcher who probably will be Luke Sewell's understudy, and not much except cheers can be expected from him for a year or so.

Walker, Kreevich Plus Somebody

Director Dykes figures on Gee Walker and Mike Kreevich for regular outfield berths. A couple of rookies are threatening Rip Radcliff for the other position. They are Rupert Thompson former Bee who hit .327 for San Diego last year, and Henry Steinbacher, returned from St. Paul, where he hit .310 after being remanded for another trial. John (Larry) Rosenthal has been on outfield relief for two years and is trying for regular work.

It is likely most of the hurling will be done by Ted Lyons, Monty Stratton, Lefty Thornton Lee, Sugar Cain, Johnny Whitehead, Clint Brown, Bill Dietrich, Johnny Rigney and perhaps Bill Cox a young man from St. Paul. Director Dykes has hope for improvement by Rigney and if Johnny should decide to become a stand-by it would be a great help indeed.

How to Plug Gap?

Plugging that hole at short during in the absence of Appling is the hardest job Dykes faces now. Figuring that Hayes and Berger are second basemen he has only rookies for the role—Joe Martin from Baltimore, who once had a trial with the Giants, and one Jesse Landrum from St. Paul. What he may have to do is shift Hayes to short and use Berger at second, which would give him a makeshift combination at best, neither Berger nor Hayes being able to hit the size of his hat, and Berger coming up with untimely misplays afield.

Dykes is in a spot no other major league manager would relish. But he's a great guy in an emergency. Let's hope he gets out of this one with a whole skin.

Australian Cricketeers Depend On Amateurs to Form Test Team

A review of the new book on the cricket test matches in Australia by Cardus, the English journalist who accompanied the last team to Australia affords some interesting and surprising information. It is customary to suppose that the Cornstalks play cricket all the time whereas Cardus discloses there is much less cricket played Down Under than in England. To begin with the Aussies do not play in the evenings and they also have no midweek matches. They play club matches on Saturday afternoons and have no first class matches corresponding to England's county cricket at all. With this lack of cricket practice they are chosen for the Sheffield shield interstate matches from which the test players are finally selected.

With this absence of what is known in England as village cricket, how comes it that the Australians rank so high in the game. First of all they love the game and it is reckoned a greater honor to be chosen for a test match than to be prime minister. Secondly they are all amateurs, there are no professionals in Australia and of course there is none on their test teams. England's weakness undoubtedly lies in playing pros in these matches. They have neither the dash, the genius and the keenness nor the brains of amateurs of high standing and play conventional instead of enterprising cricket on the theory that if one stays at the wicket runs will come. Australia plays with the idea of attacking always.

Compared with Australia and her amateurs English professional teams are not playing cricket. The phrase 'it isn't cricket,' an expression in English applies most of all to English cricket itself. It is not cricket. When amateurs like the Steets, read (W.W.) the Hubbs (MacLaren's) and even clumsy old Grace (WS) are compared with Australians they rank equally high and why England cannot master enough amateurs instead of professionals to play what is real sport with no ingrates behind it is a mystery from every point of view.

However the Australians do not object and England continues to be on the defensive. The day is dawning however of a realization of these facts and then the world will see real cricket and not the game as played by men hired for this purpose. Australia shows cricket superiority for the world, Cardus says. It is character not proficiency that tells in this world.

Johnny has been with the Hawks for 10 years now.

NAME CANADA'S DAVIS CUPPERS

MONTREAL, April 9 (CP).—Four youths, untried in Davis Cup competition, were named Friday to represent Canada against Japan in the North American zone Davis Cup tennis matches, opening in Vancouver or Montreal late in July.

The quartet named: Young Bobby Murray of Montreal, the Dominion's ranking number one played in 1937; Laird Watt, also of Montreal; Ross Wilson of Toronto, and Doug. Cameron of Vancouver.

E. H. Laframboise of Montreal, a former Davis Cupper, was named as non-playing captain who will take his youthful charges to United States for a month's active training. It was announced the team would enter major United States tournaments as part of the preparation for the battle with the Japs, now en route to England.

Announcement of the personnel was made by officials of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, which decided last autumn to re-enter the cup tournaments after an absence of three years. Defeated by the United States squad in 1934, Canada has not since entered a tournament team.

CORNWALL FLYERS WIN EASTERN CANADA SENIOR HOCKEY TITLE

FLYERS DEFEAT QUEBEC 2 TO 0 TO GAIN FINALS

OTTAWA, April 9 (CP).—The new Eastern Canada senior hockey champions, Cornwall Flyers, headed for Western Canada today and the Allan Cup finals after winning the eastern crown here last night by downing Quebec Aces 2-0 with a methodical, devastating offensive.

Hitting the top of their form in the rubber game of the best-of-three series, Flyers played an almost perfect game, featuring a brilliant passing attack and an effective poke-check defensive. Quebec won the first game in Montreal on Monday 6-3, but Cornwall evened the series Wednesday with a 5-2 win.

The team from the textile city meets Trail Smoke Eaters, Western champions, in the first game of the best-of-five Allan Cup series in Saskatoon possibly Tuesday night. The remaining games will be played in Calgary.

The Trans-Continental train was held here 40 minutes last night to enable the Flyers to catch it after the game. A huge crowd surged through the concourse of the Union Station to bid goodbye to the champions who go West with a new slogan coined by Coach Don Penniston: "We'll keep hittin' all the way, gang."

The largest crowd ever to watch a hockey game in the capital, 9,602 fans, roared their approval as Cornwall bagged a goal shortly after a minute of play and followed it up with another at 1.10 in the second period.

Bill Meloche, Flyers' right winger, who hailed from Montreal, beat Alex. Bolduc in the Quebec nets with the first goal.

Harvey McClelland, who learned his hockey on West Toronto playground rinks, scored Flyers' second goal.

More Sox Woe

Everything happens to Jimmy! We mean Jimmy Dykes, manager of the Chicago White Sox. Luke Appling, shortstop de luxe, breaks his ankle, and then it develops that Monte Stratton (Above), one of the team's dependable pitchers may be out of the game until June after pulling a muscle in his pitching arm.

Baseball Briefs

(By The Associated Press)

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Burgess Whitehead, Manager Bill Terry calls him the best second baseman in the league, may make his 1938 debut in the Giants two games here. Terry has nothing but praise for Lou Chiozza, who has been filling in while Whitehead recovered from an appendectomy, but he is anxious to get Whitehead into actual competition.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Lefty Gomez, who has a regular job as the Yankees' pitcher on opening day, is being groomed for the job again. But Manager Joe McCarthy of the New Yorkers wishes Lefty could get some work. Two days of bad weather have disrupted his hurling plans, and Gomez has gone only five innings thus far this season. The Yanks meet Little Rock to-day.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.— Casting around for the Brooklyn Dodgers' most improved player, Manager Burleigh Grimes calls it a toss-up between Buddy Hassett, the ex-first baseman who apparently has been converted into an able outfielder, and Pete Coscarart, the best-looking rookie on the club. Coscarart is not hitting, around .220 thus far, but Grimes say she will make it up in double plays.

AVON PARK, Fla.—Detroit will not wear uniforms of bright orange and blue—which Manager Mickey Cochrane called "true Tiger colors"—this season, after all. Owner Walter O. Briggs has vetoed the idea. Undaunted, Cochrane opined, "I'll bet that kind of uniform will be standard equipment in a couple of years."

HAWKS TO PLAY ROUGH IN THIRD GAME OF SERIES

CHICAGO, April 9—(CP). — The maddest, and at times the most humorous series ever played for hockey's Stanley Cup took on another novel twist to-day as word went out that Chicago Hawks meant to meet Toronto Maple Leafs on a 'survival of the fittest' basis in their remaining games.

Little Bill Stewart, Chicago coach, supplies the information yesterday that Hawks intend to "make it tough" for Leafs when the teams bump into action here Sunday nigh in the third game of a best-of-five series. No matter what turn is taken it wouldn't surprise anyone, for about everything has happened in the first two games which the teams divided.

Stewart snapped that out after Hawks arrived here from Toronto, scene of the first two games and the stage for fistic fireworks between Stewart and Manager Conny Smythe of Leafs in one brush and Stewart and Harold "Baldy" Cotton, a former Leaf, in another. The Hawk coach claims his men came in for a lot of "butt ends" in the second contest which Leafs won 5-1.

Unnecessarily roughed up or not, Hawks started a parade to hospital shortly after their arrival here. Leading the march was Doc Romnes, star centre, who suffered a fractured nose. Others who required attention were Defenceman Alex Levinsky and Art Weibe, and Forwards Johnny Gottselig, Cury Dalhstrom and Louis Trudell.

Stewart still wasn't sure to-day whether Mike Karakas, who missed the first two games because of a fractured toe, would be in shape for the remaining contests. If he isn't, the mentor will have to call on Rookie Paul Goodman of Wichita's American Association team again for duty. Goodman was used in the second game at home and Stewart, never one to come out flatly with a prediction of victory, figures that the team may be able to keep it up. Winners of those five games, the Hawks only had four goals scored against them in the contests two of which ended in Chicago shutouts.

TRAIL HOCKEYISTS REPRESENT WEST

SASKATOON, April 9—(CP). — Trail Smoke Eaters, five times beaten in a Western Senior hockey final, found the sixth time lucky and today they await arrival of Cornwall Flyers for the opening here Wednesday of the three-of-five Allan Cup series.

Flying skates of the British Columbia champions carried them to a 7-3 overtime victory over Port Arthur Bearcats last night, and gave them the Western title in three straight games.

The plucky Thunder Bay team tied the score at 2-2 with a pair of goals in the last eight minutes of the third period and again at that took the lead early in the second overtime session. But Trail's vaunted attack, checked most of the game by the hard-hitting Port defence, spurted suddenly to net four more goals before the 10-minute period ended.

Trail added Port Arthur to a list of playoff victims including Nelson Maple Leafs, Kimberley Dynamiters, Calgary Rangers and Flin Flon Bombers.

It's Crusher Casey And Danno

When two Irishmen get together you can generally count on a good scrap. That's what it turned out to be when Steve "Crusher" Casey hooked up with Danno O'Mahony in a wrestling match for the world's championship in New York. The "Crusher" successfully defended his crown against Danno, a former titleholder, but just how many states Mr. Casey's crown is recognized in we couldn't say offhand. Danno is the one on the bottom, and the fingers you can see in the lower left hand corner are those of the referee, who, no doubt, was an active participant later in the battle.

Foster-McLarnin Combination Untouched By Fight Managers

Pop Among Greats As Fight Manager According To Arthur Donovan

NEW YORK, April 9.—(CP).— In the punch parlors of mid-town New York where fighting men train daily, they still sing the praises of that old ring combination—Pop Foster and his Vancouver belter, Jimmy McLarnin.

The McLarnin-Foster duo rate as one combination in the so-called "golden era" of boxing that couldn't be reached by the gamblers who thrived on the fight business in those lush days a decade ago. And in spite of ridicule heaped on Pop at one time or another, no less astute a ring personality than Arthur Donovan, thinks Foster was tops as a manager.

"McLarnin was a natural-born fighter," says Donovan, dean of fight referees. "But it was Pop Foster who brought him along, perfecting his timing and making him the fighting machine that he was."

Of present day battlers, fight men figure the nearest thing to McLarnin that Canada has sent to the ring wars hereabouts since Pop and Jimmy operated, is Maxie Berger, the lightweight puncher whose daddy presses pants for a living in Montreal.

Berger, Canadian lightweight champ by virtue of a victory over Dave Castilloux of Montreal, is pointing for Lou Ambers' world crown. He's in no hurry to tackle the Herkimer hurricane, satisfied to come up through the ranks with impressive victories over well-known opponents such as Irish Eddie Brink and Enrico Venturi. But already there is talk of a fall title match for the little Montreal Hebrew.

Another Canadian well regarded, is Sammy Luftspring, one-time amateur welterweight champion of Ontario who scored a six-round victory over Felix Garcia in his New York debut April Fools' Day. Luftspring won just about as he pleased though not scoring a knockout.

Al Weill, Mike Jacobs' former match-maker and present manager of Ambers, lost no time putting $3,000 on the line to buy Sammy's contract from Dock Cooke of Toronto. Sammy came to New York "for experience" and because he ran out of suitable opponents at home. That too, is Berger's reason for being here.

Mike Jacobs, aptly named the "Mr. Boxing' of New York because he holds enough fight contracts to choke a horse; scoffs at those who talk on the 'golden era" of boxing—the days of Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and the $1,000,000 gate.

Since last October Mike has staged 14 shows in Madison Square Garden, grossing some $813,000 plus $84,000 on the side for broadcasting and movie rights. And, as Uncle Mike, clacking his store teeth, puts it, "is that hay?"

Winnipeg Challenges Preston Rivulettes

WINNIPEG, April 8—(CP). — W. V. (Bill) Tobias, manager of Winnipeg's Olympics women's hockey club, said last night a challenge had been issued to Preston Rivulettes, Dominion champions. A reply was expected from Manager M. J. Dykeman of the Preston club within a few days.

Dykeman was quoted in Galt as saying he believed a series with Winnipeg unlikely following his team's victory over Charlottetown in the Eastern final.

Remember When—

Montreal Maroons concluded their non-stop Stanley Cup title flight with a 4-1 decision over Toronto Maple Leafs at Montreal three years ago to-night. The Montrealers — who held the trophy in 1926 — previously scored 3-2 and 3-1 victories over the Leafs.

PRESTON WINS HOCKEY TITLE

GALT, Ont., April 9 (CP).—Preston Rivulettes, Eastern Canada's perennial ladies' hockey champions, will hold the Romeo Daoust trophy for the fifth consecutive year as a result of their 12-2 victory over Charlottetown Islanders in a fighting two-game series.

Before a thrilled crowd of 500 spectators, Rivulettes put the finishing touches to the series last night when they walloped the Islanders with both fists and goals in a game that ended 7-1 in their favor. They won the first game 5-1.

TRAPPING DOWN IN COLD WEATHER

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 9.—Trappers in this district and around Curve Lake report that while trapping was fine a week ago, their catch has fallen off almost completely since the cold weather set in.

They claim that now they are unable to reach their traps because of ice bordering the marshes. One Indian tells us that he can see the rats in his traps on the marshes but can't reach them because of the ice which has formed along the shoreline. The ice is two thin to be trusted with the weight of a man but not thin enough to be broken through with a canoe.

SHOOTING VICTIM MAY LIVE

BRAMPTON, Ont., April 9 (C.P.). Doctors said to-day Garritt Lammerse, 61-year-old Britannia Service Station operator, may recover from a bullet wound inflicted on Wednesday night by a masked man who held up the station.

Lammerse's condition improved slightly overnight, though it was still described as critical. He rallied after a second blood transfusion this morning.

JOINT MEETING IS HELD IN MILLBROOK BY FLOWER LOVERS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 9. — The Millbrook Horticultural Society held an "open night" in the Town Hall on Thursday, with a large number of guests from Orono and Peterborough, and the local community extensively represented as well.

A warm welcome to the incoming guests was extended by the president, Mrs. Charles Thorndyke, and Mrs. T. A. Campbell, the secretary.

The chair was taken by the vice-president, P. I. Bentley, who expressed greetings on behalf of the local society. The program opened with piano selections played by William Edworthy, the Orono visitors providing the musical numbers, and the guests from Peterborough bringing many helpful hints on how to carry on with a horticultural society.

Piano duets were contributed by Miss Osborne and Mrs. Melville Staples of Orono, Mrs. Drummond singing "Spring is Here Again," and "Because My Love Has Come to Me" as a recall. A second vocal duet, "Come Away, Elves," by Mrs. Drummond and Melville Staples, also brought warm applause. Jack Smith, president of the Peterborough Society, by request of the chair, then took charge for the group from his home city.

Gave Helpful Hints.

Among those who spoke, bringing much practical information to the Millbrook organization, which is still in the "baby" class, since it is not yet two years old, were H. Graham, chairman of the membership committee.

Dr. A. J. Madill laid emphasis upon the task of beautifying the town or village, which the Horticultural Society accomplishes; upon the favorable impression made upon visitors, and the uplifting effect upon the local citizens as well. New flowers and shrubs which have lately come into prominence were listed.

Mr. Forbes, chairman of the Option Committee, gave practical information about securing premiums in conjunction with the nearest florists, and Mr. Benton followed with particulars regarding the lawn and garden competitions.

Window Displays.

Ernest Watson, chairman of the Horticultural Fair, spoke on the value of window displays and the willingness of local merchants to co-operate; and Mr. Denton, chairman of the Juvenile Department, told of what is being done to interest the children, speaking of the fact that bird houses have been added as a special class for the younger element this year.

Mr. Harris gave some constructive hints on "Home Town Beautification," and Mr. Smith also mentioned the importance of choosing public buildings as the first to be made beautiful in their surroundings.

Melville Staples was the concluding speaker, telling of the civic pride felt by the people of Orono in their Memorial Park, and the adjoining Forestry Station.

Musical selections by the visitors from Orono were again listened to with much pleasure, and after Jack Smith had shaken up the conatiner, Master Billy Smith made the draw, those winning Regal Lilies being: Mrs. Wesley Williamson, Mr. Biddle of Peterborough, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, and Gordon Fallis.

The committee in charge, with Mrs. Percy Stinson as convenor, then served refreshments and a delightful social hour was enjoyed, the National Anthem bringing a most successful evening, the first of its kind under the auspices of the Millbrook Society, to a close.

MRS. JAMES HUTCHISON

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, April 9. — The death of Mrs. James Hutchison, which occurred with startling suddenness on Monday, April 4, in her sixty-fourth year, came as a distinct shock, not only to the members of her immediate family circle, but to the entire community as well.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Lila Ada Might, was the eldest in the family of the late Samuel Might and Mary Elizabeth Collins, who were pioneer and highly respected citizens of Cavan township. She was born and brought up on the family homestead, located on the county highway east of Millbrook, and received her high school education in the local school, under the tuition of the late David Hampton.

Previous to her marriage to James Hutchison, which united members of two pioneer families of the township, and which took place thirty-seven years ago last February, Mrs. Hutchison followed her profession as a public school teacher for a number of years. Her entire married life was spent on the homestead about one mile east of the village where she went as a bride, and where her family of five sons and one daughter were born and brought up.

A faithful and much-loved member of the Centreville Presbyterian church, deceased filled the position of organist for some years, and was active in its other organizations, including the presidency of the Ladies' Aid Society to which office she gave an efficient and constructive leadership. Her home, and her church, were the two chief interests round which Mrs. Hutchison's loving and devoted service were centred.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place from the family homestead, Fifth Line, Cavan, on Wednesday at 2 p.m., the Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., conducting the services. The pall bearers were three brothers-in-law, Thomas Douglas, Harry Coles, and George McBain and three nephews, Charlie Evans of Port Hope, Leslie Moore and Willan Hutchison. Among the many beautiful floral tributes was a sheaf from the Presbyterian church at Centreville, and interment was in the family burial-plot in the historic cemetery in which this church stands at South Monaghan.

Among those from outside points attending the funeral were Mrs. Charles Evans, of Port Hope, Mrs. Ronald Hutchison and Miss Helen McKim of Carleton Place, Mrs. (Rev.) C. E. (Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 8—On Sunday last, April 3, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simpson of Lakefield celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. They were married in Warsaw on April 3rd, 1878, by Rev. Wm. Buchanan, who was then pastor of the Warsaw Church. The couple have resided in Lakefield continuously since their marriage. Mr. Simpson has been a life-long resident of Lakefield district, living in Smith Township before he moved into the village. Mrs. Simpson, who was Mary Ellen Tighe before her marriage, lived in Dummer Township, near Bryson's Landing.

Mr. Simpson will celebrate his eighty-fifth birthday on May 21st of this year, and Mrs. Simpson will be eighty-two on May 26.

The couple have two grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren living at Didsbury, Alta. An only daughter, Etta (Mrs. Tighe) died thirty-four years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson have resided in the house in which they are now living for the past fifty-five years.

The couple entertained a few friends on Sunday to commemorate this unusual occasion. The Women's Association of Lakefield United Church sent congratulations in the form of a basket of beautiful spring flowers.

TORONTO SPEAKER LAKEFIELD W.M.S.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, April 9.—The March meeting of the W.M.S. of Lakefield United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Darling on Tuesday afternoon. There was a large attendance.

The committee responsible for the splendid program consisted of Mrs. George Spence, Mrs. Charles Hunter and Mrs. W. W. Leonard, and the "Easter Service of Worship" was followed. Mrs. McKerchar, at the piano, played quiet music—the hymn of victory, "The strife is o'er, the battle done...now be the song of praise begun."

Mrs. Yake occupied the chair for the business items, and called on Mrs. Renwick for the minutes of the last meeting. Miss Sanderson gave the treasurer's report. The Easter thankoffering service is to be held on Sunday next, April 10, when members of the W.M.S. will be in charge of the evening church service. Mrs. (Rev.) Steed of Toronto will be the guest speaker. Mrs. Yale spoke of Mrs. Steed's wide experience in East Africa missions, and hoped for a large congregation next Sunday. The thankoffering envelopes arrived for distribution. A liberal response will be necessary to meet the allocation.

The question of the bale was discussed, and many donations of new articles of clothing were offered. The knitted quilt—to be made of blocks 10 inches square—was progressing. But many more blocks will be needed to complete it. Mrs. W. J. Charlton offered her home for the May meeting.

The chapter of the study book was read by Mrs. W. W. Yale, in the absence, through illness, of Mrs. Percy Darling. It dealt with "The Light of the Mind," and presented outstanding examples of the power of the Christian Gospel in its appeal to the intellect of men and women.

The meeting was brought to a close by the repeating of the benediction on the leaflet.

The refreshment committee served tea and cake, and a social half-hour followed.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Darling for her hospitality.

TOO MANY HOGS

HAMILTON, Ont., April 9 (C.P.). —Pleas of guilty to charges of cruelty to animals resulted in fines of $25, and costs, being imposed in two cases in Magistrate's Court. Those fined were W. G. Heaslop, Waterford, and A. E. Menary, Walter's Falls. Robert Inglis, inspector for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said that in both cases he had found loads of hogs overcrowded and in both cases one hog was found dead on the truck.

She Looks So Young

Is a tribute to health

"Keep happy—Keep the mind young—don't worry". This is the recipe of a famous actress. Worry, Irritability and exhausted nerves are the greatest enemies to feminine beauty. They bring wrinkles and care lines and make you feel tired and discouraged.

There is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore pep and vigor to mind and body, to give you control of yourself and to bring the color back to faded cheeks. Charm and personality are based on health. The cheerfulness and vivacity, which add so greatly to woman's attractiveness, can only exist when you are feeling well.

Women everywhere know and appreciate this fine restorative of blood and nerves.

TWEED

GREENHOUSE FIRE DESTROYS 200,000 SEEDLING PLANTS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, April 9. — Believed to have originated in overheated stovepipes, fire destroyed the major part of a large greenhouse owned by T. E. Whattam near Bethel. Glass, flats and 200,000 thousand tomato seedlings were totally destroyed, while the larger part of the framework of the building also fell prey to the flames. The building was partially insured, but loss of contents was not covered.

Whattam stated that when he left the greenhouse at nine o'clock everything was in order. Pipes on the stove were new.

Morley Rorabec, a neighbor, returning home noticed heavy volumes of smoke issuing from the building and turned in the alarm. Neighbors rushed to the scene and after an hour's strenuous battle succeeded in reducing the blaze after heavy damage had been done.

Whattam started immediate construction of a new building.

Cheese factories of the district are expected to be opened for the season's work at about the middle of the present month, according to local officials of the industry. The promise of pasture growth earlier in the season has been ended, apparently by the recent cold weather, thereby retarding the "make" season.

When farmers of the County of Northumberland sowed wheat in the lighter soils a few weeks ago, it was the first time in about 35 years that such early March sowing has been carried out, it is estimated by residents of the county. According to the regular report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, wheat, clover and some of the other fall-sown crops have come through the Spring season in good shape, with little loss. No actual seed grain scarcity is reported. Ploughing in the uplands of Hastings County has been carried on since the middle of March.

Fishermen Grabbed

Charges of illegal taking of fish were preferred against Harry Gibson and Paddy Kirby, Prince Edward County farmhands, who were apprehended by Game Inspector Herb McCabe, and Provincial Constable William McBrien, alleged spearing fish in Roblin's Lake near Ameliasburg, on Thursday night.

The investigating officers reported Kirby and Gibson were spearing with the aid of a jacklight and from a boat, contrary to the Game and Fisheries Act. Boat, jacklight, spears and fish were confiscated by the authorities, Kirby and Gibson were held for questioning, following which they were liberated on bail, to appear in police court, facing charges of illegal fishing, next week.

Fires, spreading from a blazing chimney, completely destroyed the home of William Graham, Green Point, Prince Edward County farmer, early Thursday morning. Efforts on the part of a hastily-formed bucket brigade of neighbors failed to have any effect on the blazing structure that rapidly fell prey to the flames, but the men got out most of the contents of the dwelling. Expensive fishing tackle, guns and one thousand rounds of ammunition were destroyed as firefighters failed to save the contents of the upper part of the home.

The Graham family, absetn at the time of the fire, knew nothing of their loss until their return some hours later. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Lake Weslemkoon ice is still fairly firm and will not disappear from the lake until about the middle of the present month, and possibly later if the present cold weather continues, believe residents of that district.

Provincial Police are investigating another in the series of robberies that have recently occurred in the vicinity of Shannonville, which was committed at Jack Fitzgerald's garage after Mr. Fitzgerald closed his garage late Wednesday night. Entry was made into the garage and gas pump handles that were hidden in the garage were found and used to pump the gas from the tank in front. The lock on the tank was smashed. This is the second time within two weeks that this garage has been robbed. The last time it was entered, 26 gallons of gas and a quantity of oil were taken and Larone's store at Shannoville was entered at the same time.

A peculiar factor in the robberies is that the thief or thieves do not take the new tires and other automobile accessories in the same part of the garage.

Taxes in Japan are 26 per cent higher than last year.

HIS INSURANCE NEARLY DOUBLED BY DIVIDENDS

A Mutual Life policyholder was 42 years old when he paid the first premium on a $20,000 policy. The beneficiaries were pleased and surprised at the returns from this policy which has become due upon the policyholder's demise.

Not only did they receive the full amount of the policy, $20,000, but the dividends had been used to purchase extra insurance which with a final cash dividend made a total payment of $39,510.28 to the beneficiaries. The total premiums paid by the assured were $15,680.00. This is a striking example of planned life insurance, with The Mutual Life of Canada—the company that divides all its surplus earnings among its policyholders.

OTTAWA—It was not expected any German nationals resident would participate in the plebiscite to be taken April 10 on annexation of Austria, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons yesterday. He was replying to questions asked by Opposition Leader Bennett.

Storm Of 52 Years Ago

EMPLOYEES OF C. G. E. SUBSCRIBE FOR 3,292 SHARES OF STOCK

Members Of Peterboro Plant Now Hold 11,453 Shares Which Represent $572,650

1,004 Employees Of The 1,617 Eligible Take Up Offer

Employees of the Canadian General Electric Company recently subscribed for 3,292 shares of preferred stock in the company of a par value of $50 a share amounting to $164,600, and of that purchase 818 shares were paid for in cash totalling $40,900.

Including shares purchased under eleven previous annual investment plans, employees of the Peterborough plant now hold 11,453 shares representing $572,650, and the total number of shares owned by employees of the company here and elsewhere is 38,944 with an aggregate par value of $1,947,200.

Another fact relating to the progress of the company in Peterborough during the last fifteen months is suggested by the information that of the total number of employees, at present exceeding 2,000, there were 1,617 eligible for the company's recently offered twelfth Employees' Saving and Investment Plan for the purpose of continuing to provide for the employees a convenient method of saving and also an opportunity to invest their savings in the company.

Of the 1,617 who were eligible for this year's plan which went into effect on April 1 there were 1,004 or 62 per cent, who took advantage of it.

Plan Is Voluntary

Purchase of shares under this plan was entirely voluntary and the inability of an employee to subscribe to it did not in any way affect his or her status or position with the Company. It is significant that as employees have gradually come to understand the advantages of this stock purchasing idea, their investments have been increasing steadily each year until their total holdings now amount to 11,435 shares valued at $572,650.

The stock is cumulative 5% special employees' preferred shares of the Company with a par value of $50. An employee with one year of continuous service on April 1 was eligible to buy from one to ten shares, with convenient arrangement for payments under specified terms and conditions. An employee can turn in his stock for cash at any time.

7 Per Cent. Last Year

Employees holding shares acquired under this investment plan will receive the regular 5% dividend as declared. An extra payment will be optional with the company and will depend on the results of the Company's operation for the fiscal year. An extra payment amounting to 2 per cent. of the par value of the shares will be paid to employees on the active payroll on March 31, 1938, on their holdings on that date of shares acquired under previous Empoyees's Savings and Investment Plans. Cheques covering such extra payment will be forwarded on or before May 1, 1938.

Limited to 10 Shares

Purchases of these shares are not permitted to exceed 10 by any one employee, but there now have been twelve of these plans and some of the employees who were quick to realize its benefit to them have bought the limit each year. These employees now possess 120 shares, representing a total volue of $6,000. The employee who was wise enough and also had the means to buy the stock as it was offered received 7 per cent. on his investment last year, year, an amount any person can quickly compute.

Cost Company $35,000

In an address to the Rotary Club some months ago, C. A. Salmonsen, works manager, stated that the Investment Plan cost the company last year approximately $35,000, but on the other hand it has the desirable feature of enabling eligible employees to share in the profits of the company. Obviously the company does not need the money paid by employees for their shares, and it is of interest to consider that interest rate paid for last year was 7 per cent whereas the money paid for the stock would perhaps yield no more than 3 or 3½ per cent. if invested by the company.

In the recent purchase of shares the total number bought by employees in Peterborough was 3,292, of which 818 were paid for in cash, amounting to $40,900. The other 2,474 shares were bought on the extended payment plan through weekly or monthly deductions from the payroll.

Increasing appreciation of this plan was reflected in the fact there were 39 per cent. more subscribers in the Peterborough plant in 1938 than in 1937, and also a 30 per cent. increase in the number of shares bought through the local issue.

Ability of local employees to continue to buy this preferred stock in C. G. E. company in steadily growing amounts with an accumulation of stock in their hands from year to year is striking evidence of the realization by employees that this investment plan especially when its earning amounted to 7 per cent. last year, is decidedly in their interest. It affords them a share of the profits of the company, just as their cheap form of insurance and free group insurance are all modern means of enabling employees to participate in the company's earnings and to know that as producers they may also become share holders.

THOMAS A. BOWLES IS LAID TO REST

The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon of Thomas A. Bowles from his residence in Cavan township, where he had lived for 53 years.

On March 4th past, Mr. and Mrs. Bowles observed their 53rd wedding anniversary and his death was due to the fatal kick by a horse received on Tuesday evening.

He was the second youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowles, pioneer settlers of Cavan township and was the last member of a family of three sons and one daughter. His wife was Margaret Madill, daughter of another pioneer family of Cavan and by whom he is survived. He is also survived by one son, Norman Alexander at home and one daughter, Amy Elizabeth of Peterborough.

He was a successful farmer and keenly interested in stock, especially so in horses. A great reader and interested in current events, while of a quiet and unassuming disposition, he was a man of sterling qualities and the very largely attended funeral testified to the esteem in which he was held in the community where he had lived his entire life. He was a member of the Presbyterian church, Centreville and a Conservative in politics.

The pallbearers were Walter Brown, Harold Cathcart, Fred Clark, Bruce Elliott, W. McCamus and Sam Staples.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. R. Williams, Millbrook, and interment was made in Centreville cemetery.

APRIL SNOW TAKES STING FROM FROST

Farm reader commented on the weather today as follows:

Sir,—Snow in April is one of the best things that could happen to the country as it is nature's way of taking the sting out of the hard frosts such as we have been having the past week. It acts the same on the earth as rubbing snow on an ear or hand which has been frozen to take the sting and frost out. Snow, also, contains ammonia and this stimulates the growth of fall wheat, clover and grasses as I have heard old gentlemen in the past, say. It is as good as a coat of fertilizer this time of year as it tries to undo all harm the frost has done. An ice storm is one of nature's ways of controlling insects. The ice forms over a crack on rough bark of a tree which has insect eggs on it and when it melts and falls off the eggs adhere to it and thus drop to the ground, are exposed and destroyed thus helping to better our fruit and have more of it. Sleet on trees is nature's way of pruning out small and dead branches, leaving more room for the living ones.

Choir Will Sing The Crucifixion

Stainer's 'Crucifixion' will be sung by the choir of St. Andrew's Church on next Sunday night. The full title is "The Crucifixion, a meditation on the sacred passion of the Holy Redeemer." The words are selected and written by Rev. J. Sparrow-Simpson, M.A., and the music by J. Stainer.

(Sir John Stainer was born in London, England in the year 1840. From 1872 to 1888 he was organist in St. Pauls Cathedral, London. "The Crucifixion" ranks as the most famous of his cantatas, it was composed in 1887 whilst he was organist of St. Pauls. Stainer was knighted in 1888, and amongst many other high distinctions had been made a chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1878.

This Cantata differs from Handel's Messiah in that its scope is more restricted. Handel ranged over the whole life of Christ, and brought in several prophetic utterances. Stainer confines himself to the dramatic narrative from the story in the Garden of Gethsemene to the death upon the cross. The Cantata is dramatic, it sets worth in stirring language and music the outstanding events of the greatest drama of history.

The poetry is frequently based upon the actual words of Scripture; thus in "The Agony" it begins with "could ye not watch with me one brief hour, could ye not pity my sorest need?"

"The Processional to Calvary" begins with the dramatic words "fling wide the gates for the Saviour wants to tread His royal way". The popular anthem "For God so loved the World" is part of this famous cantata. R. B. Harle, organist of the church will direct the music. The soloists will be Adam Hawley, Edward Humpage, James Johnston and Evelyn Edwards.

LINDSAY

GIVEN ONE YEAR FOR CAR THEFT LINDSAY BAILIFF

LINDSAY, April 9.—Robert Simpson, who gave his address as Galt, appeared before Magistrate Gee Friday, charged with the theft of a car owned by R. A. Wilson, local bailiff, and was sentenced to a year in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph. When arrested by Chief Lawler following the theft, accused stated that he just wanted transportation to see a young lady in Peterborough. In addition to the sentence of one year for the theft of the car, Simpson got a month sentence on each of two other charges added. He was charged with theft of gas in Peterborough, Provincial Constable Sylvester, of Peterborough registering the charges. It is alleged that Simpson siphoned the gas from a truck and also drove away from a service station after getting eight gallons of gasoline.

Constable Simnett, five minutes after he donned the uniform as Lindsay's new police officer, made his first arrest. Stafford Teatrotown, sauntered down the main thoroughfare at an unsteady gait and was picked up and taken to the cells. His case was adjourned for ten days. Two Bobcaygeon men were fined $8.00 for trapping out of season, and an Oshawa resident, charged by Game Warden Hodgson with trapping without a license was fined $10.00 and costs.

Col. Robert Ailey, of Toronto, was guest speaker at the banquet held by the Canadian Legion in observance of the anniversary of the Battle of Vimy Ridge.

Local Trappers are in a blue funk. The incessant cold during the past few days has called a halt to trapping and the catches are far below the record of other years. A great many of the rats are reported to be very thin, and as a result the skins are not up to standard.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET IS HELD AT GEORGE STREET

Close to 300 people crowded the Sunday School room of George Street United Church on Friday evening for the annual congregational Father and Son banquet.

Pronounced one of the most outstanding successes of its kind to be held at the church in recent years, the banquet was served by ladies of the church, representing various Sunday School groups. Mrs. W. G. Harris, Mrs. Tom Mark, Mrs. C. H. Fulford, Miss Mary Elliott, were convenors. Leo W. Copp, Homer Borland, and Eddie Rowe, were in charge of the men's committee that provided for a program of wide variety.

Rev. G. F. Kelly of Lakefield United Church was guest speaker. In an interesting address he dealt with the problems that face youth today. A toast to the king was sung and Alex Stewart proposed a toast to the church, response for which was one verse of "The Church's One Foundation," sung by all the guests. Jack Thompson proposed "The Fathers," responded to by Allan Brown. Frank Greatrix proposed "The Sons" responded to by Jack Mark.

An interesting variation in the program that followed the banquet was the presentation by Gordon Clegg, representing the Inter-Church Basketball Association, of crests to the George Street Bantams, city champions in their class. A sing song was under direction of Arnold Lillow and Charles Saunders directed a music stunt. E. L. Sackville supervised "balloon badminton." A hillbilly band played during the evening. Its members were Stan Gilmore, Eddie Rowe, Stan Thompson, Toby Wells, Melville Akers, Ronald Akers, Arnold Lillow, Hugh Arnold, Jack Thompson, and Bob Hamilton. Reg Kingdon presented prizes won by Sunday School pupils in a bond selling contest in connecton wth boys' work carred on by the church.

The long program ended with the banquetters singing "Follow the Gleam" and "Taps."

Heffernan Missing Since Last October

While positive indentification has not yet been made it is thought that the badly decomposed body of an elderly man which was found floating in the water of Rice Lake near Harwood on Thursday night is that of Michael Heffernan, 74-year-old resident of Peterborough who disappeared from here last October.

Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie of Cobourg and P. C. Piercey of the local city force worked on the case Friday endeavoring to trace Heffernan's movements since he left the house on Lake Street where he had been living but it was difficult to get any reliable information. A nephew of Heffernan's who saw the body was almost sure it was that of his uncle but the remains were in such bad shape that it was impossible to be certain.

Canadian Legion Notes

A chields amang ye takin' notes, and, faith he'll print them.—Burns.

The carpetball tournament under the auspices of the Legion team held in the auditorium of the Legion Hall on Wednesday last was a great success, sixteen teams taking part. The Knox Church team skipped by Ald. H. McCannan won the first prize, a short for each man, and the second prize went to the team from St. Luke's skipped by C. Joyce who each received a tie.

The Warriors' Ball to be held in the Legion auditorium on the evening of Monday April 18th promises to be the outstanding event of the Easter season, and the hall decorations combined with the bright gowns of the ladies and the mess uniforms of many of the gentlemen will make it colorful and glamorous.

The regular monthly meeting of the branch has been postponed to Monday, April 25.

The cribbage tournament has proceeded on to another stage and the following members play in the next round, Comrades J. Hawthorne, Howard Hall, S. Bridger, J. Dunslow, W. Fields, W. Gracie, F. Guerin, J. Mackness and A. E. Miller. Will they kindly take notice and phone 141 and ask R. Long when they are expected to play.

Campbellford Court Reserves Judgment In Pin Game Case

Six Citizens Charged With Keeping Common Gaming House—Connelly Out On Bail

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, April 9 — Senior Magistrate O. A. Langley reserved judgment on hearing the conclusion of the evidence of six Campbellford citizens charged under the Criminal Code with keeping a common gaming house and operating pin machines. D. N. O'Keefe the only one of the six accused to plead not guilty told the court through his counsel N. Alex McColl that a clerk had given out a package of cigarettes to the provincial constable who had played the machine when he was absent. O'Keefe testified the clerk had no authority to give out any merchandise on the machine as it was for amusemen only and was played with slugs, the first of which was purchased with five cents and the additional slugs which were given out as the result of high score were the only prize ever offered. Judgment in all six cases will be given on April 14th.

John Connelly, R.R. 4, Campbellford was released on $4,000 bail in a criminal action in which he was charged with stealing a number of trees from the farm in Seymour Township on which he resided. It was shown in the evidence for the Crown that Connelly's property was mortaged to Richard H. Mahoney of town and Chas. Payne, K.C. submitted evidence with the permission of Crown Attorney Boggs to the effect that Connelly had not paid the interest on the mortgage and that the matter had been placed by him in the hands of the Registrar of the Board of Review for Ontario. He claimed that the property was in the custody of the court when Connelly and a number of men employed by him worked with lanterns at night stripping the farm of its lumber on or about the 23rd of February after having already been ordered to give up the farm before March 1.

"I have never heard of a more flagrant and malicious breach of the law" argued Mr. Payne, "if this type of conduct is permitted to prevail the security of a mortagee is at an end."

Evidence submitted by the Crown disclosed that William Flynn of Marmora had purchased about 96 logs from Connelly at $15.00 per thousand.

The accused elected trial by judge and jury and the case will be heard in the June assizes. Tim Connelly, son of the former Connelly was held on similar charge, and will be given a preliminary hearing on April 22.

Memorial Chapel Is Now Completed

The Chapel of the Upper Room, a little chapel that has been established in St. John's church for midweek communion services is now complete. It has been constructed and equipped entirely by voluntary subscriptions. The riddel posts and kneeling rails made by the Peterborough Lumber Company and the curtains and frontal by the Sisters of St. John were provided by the Church Women's Association as a memorial to Archdeacon Davidosn. The standard cathedral chairs are the gift of the A.Y.P.A., and the electric lamps were donated by Mrs. Wheeler. The white Cross made by Bert Graham, who also laid the hardwood floor, paid for by an anonymous donor. Other subscriptions are providing for the rest of the expenditure.

One More Wedding

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Garry Page, New York columnist, has sailed for a few weeks abroad. Among his friends at the pier to see him off was Barbara Kingsley who came to New York the day before to fill a vacancy on a child magazine at the suggestion of her close friend Natalie Kendall. Barbara and Garry became interested in one another a few weeks previously when she was society editor of the Martinsville Post and Garry had come to Marinsville for a wedding. Jack Metcalf, an author and friend of Garry, takes a kindly interest in Barbara to come see Garry's apartment where he is staying temporarily, and Natalie goes along. Jack is surprised to see her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 7

"MY THOUGHTS aren't worth a bright green stamp," Barbara answered Jack Metcalf's careless bet. She was remembering, though, that there had been a scene in one of Jack's books which might have been played by him and Natalie. He had even described Natalie. That, then, was why Natalie had wanted to come along. Did she still care for the man, or did she know his wiles too well to let any other girl risk his charms?

Barbara dismissed the matter with a shrug of green-clad shoulders. A Japanese servant squat and old, was bringing in the tea in a copper service, and the teakettle, round and old, was bubbling on an alcoholic flame. And in the wake of the servant came Ray Lipton.

"Hello, everybody," he greeted them. He crossed to Barbara. "Remember me? I'm the guy who wanted to know you better. I had a hunch I'd find you here. That's why I came."

"Don't believe him, Babbs," Natalie's voice drawled. "He has a way of making a girl think he's on a treasure hunt and she's the prize package. But he's a good egg. He'll treat you well."

"Meaning what?" Jack asked. "Natalie, haven't I bought you a winter full of dinners and first night seats, my love, in olden days?"

Natalie made a laughing remark but Ray was speaking again so Barbara didn't listen.

"I do mean my words, Barbara Kingsley. You met Garry Page last summer one night when he missed a train at a wedding and now you are going to out Disney Disney or something of the sort in rhymes for children. Garry didn't miss a thing when he told about you. Except—," drew his brows together, "he overlooked the dimple in your cheek, and the freckles on your nose, and that curl that keeps getting in your eye. I change my mind. Mr. Page was not a good reporter! Anyway, he's on the high seas, and here I am."

Three or four others came presently. The waiter kept passing trays of canapes and minute sandwiches. The lights of the city swung through the darkness. The tall buildings became checkered with yellow panesof brightness. On the street, far below the traffic lights changed colors and their brilliance faded before the onrush of taxicab lamps throbbing lanterns that fireflies could no longer carry. The rhythm of the city after dark began—haunting insistent a little lonely sobbing as though it had lost something. Someone turned on the radio and found a swing band. ar out at sea where a ship went steadily on, maybe another radio found that same music. Barbara felt a little sad suddenly.

Back in Martinsville Peter would be going into the Shanty for a steak, or ham and eggs. Peter—he was so remote tonight. She wished she could slip into the chair across from him and talk. She must write to him before she went to sleep tonight.

"You're half asleep so you didn't hear the plans we're making," Ray Lipton said. "We are all going on to dinner somewhere and then find activities on Fifty-second street or elsewhere. Do you mind?"

"I'd like it." She liked Ray Lipton, too. He was so genuine, and his eyes had such a funny quirk when he laughed. He was good looking, too. Not as good looking as Garry. Better looking than Peter—dear, homely, lovable Peter.

"Most of the things you'll do in New York that you will remember longest you will do on the spur of a moment," Jack said. "The things you hold are the unexpected gifts. Take what the gods bring. They never repeat."

"I'll remember," she answered. but her eyes were on the green knitted dress. It wasn't appropriate for dining out, unless she went to an automat or cafeteria, she thought ruefully.

"Nobody's dressing." Ray explained.

Nobody else needed to, she was thinking. For the most part they wore black. Crisp black or soft black, relieved with white touches clean as a snowball or popcorn.

"Never mind the white on it," a voice spoke slowly. "You don't need it. Not with that hair." Jack Metcalf, sitting near, had turned in time to hear the scrap of conversation.

Now, at Barbara's puzzled glance, he laughed softly. "You were thinking that to-morrow you must buy a black dress, weren't you? It's the natural reaction of a newcomer. It marks you as a member of the established group. I'd wear green beads, or green earrings and a bracelet with yours. They'll increase the depth of your eyes."

Inconsistently, Barbara decided she would buy a colored dress. But black with green earrings....She put the thought away until to-morrow.

They crowded into taxicabs, a little later, and went spinning over to the river. When the smell of fish and salt came to her nostrils, Barbara turned to Ray Lipton. "The docks again?"

It had been so long since she had taken that lonely cab to say goodbye to Garry. So much had happened. To-night he was somewhere on the ocean and he didn't know that she had been at his house.

"We are headed for Sweets'," Ray was saying. "It's a famous old fish place—terribly ancient. I think George Washington liked its mackerel or something. It's up a flight of stairs and at noon the gents with money from Wall Street fill it. It's not crowded at night. There's an old-fashioned sideboard where the silver is kept....Say, can't you even look as though you are listening?"

Barbara laughed. "I'm sorry. I was listening. They have a sideboard—. But I was wondering when you all work? Do you ever do anything?"

His laughter was spontaneous. "Do we? In this group is the busiest fashion designer in this town, and an attorney who gets his name in the papers twice a week, and a newspaper guy—that's me." He grew serious. "We get tired about dusk and relax.

There was nothing relaxing about the evening as far as Barbara could see. They had dinner, and went up to the Rainbow Room to dance to a tango-rumba band. They dropped in at the Versailles.

"Let's dance," Ray said. "A sweet band. I like them when they swing."

The orchestra was shooting off at tangents now, and he brightened up. "Ah, that's better. You dance like nobody in Martinsville's business, my lass."

Barbara smiled happily. This was the first swing band to which she had danced first-hand. She suddenly realized what a lot of her entertainment had been vicarious these past two years. Always, always she had been writing about other people's lives.

The floor show was going to begin when they finally went back to their table. Barbara watched it idly. Her heart insisted on trailing a ship, far out on the ocean. But when the lights came up, she made a little sign that was an audible gasp. Jack, sitting next to her, followed her gaze.

At another table, at the far end of the room, two people were talking earnestly. They did not know about the ebb and flow of chatter and music that surrounded them. Their table was a cliff, impregnable for the moment. One was Ruth Merryweather, whose gold hair shone like a halo and whose eyes were dark in some serious mood. The other was Bill Jameson from Martinsville, the man who had married Marie Rinehart. Barbara's quick eyes observed that the table was set for several more. But where was Marie?

Jack's voice was low in Barbara's ear. "You've guessed it. That man is the one Ruth loved, the one who married the other girl this summer."

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—We are going through the first hell that has ever been raised in our home in all of our married life of sixteen years. It is about our daughter, who is 15 years old, tall, dark, good-looking and who appears to be at least 17 years old. I love this girl better than anything else on earth, but I can see that she is going to the devil and her mother is aiding and abetting her in it. She is still in the second year at high school, yet her mother dresses her beyond our means, lets her daub herself up with paint and go car-riding and to dance halls with boys and girls who are five years older than she is, without any responsible person along. Her mother doesn't want her to do any housework or wash any dishes as she might roughen her hands or take off the red nail polish. The girl is on the street all the time. Often doesn't come home from school until 6.30 o'clock. Eats her dinner, then wants to go to the movies or somewhere else with a bunch of youngsters. My wife thinks that this is all right, but I know it is all wrong, yet I find that I can do nothing to stop it. I am particularly helpless as I am away from home a great deal on business. I am not an overly strict father. I want my girl to enjoy herself and have all the boys and girls at the house that she wish, but I do want her to be under some sort of control at her age. Am I right or wrong in this.

AN ANXIOUS FATHER.

Answer:

You are altogether right and your wife is altogether wrong, but I am sorry to tell you that there is nothing you can do about it. She will never see your point of view until it is forever too late to save your daughter from the results of her folly.

Any woman with a grain of sense in her head knows that no girl of 15 has enough intelligence or knowledge of the world to order her own life, pick out her companions and be emancipated from all parental control. Every mother knows that a girl of 15 who has the passions of a woman and the judgments of a babe, who is crazy for pleasure and drunk on her new-found freedom, is at the most dangerous moment of her life and that she needs a strong and steady hand to keep her in the right path.

And no woman but who knows what happens to girls of 15 who have weak and silly mothers who fail them in their hour of need. You cannot pick up any paper without reading about some poor little girl whose torn and battered body has been found by a roadside where it has been cast by some fiend with whom she had trustfully gone for a joyride.

Or about some terrible automobile accident in which a careful of roisterous girls and boys who were burning up the road at seventy miles and hour have been killed. We have all seen little 15-year-old girls staggering drunk out of roadhouses and known them to wreck their lives by gin marriages with boys as immature and young as themselves.

Yet in spite of these awful warnings, mothers let their girls do as your wife is letting yours do, because they cannot bear to deny them anything they want; because they have not the backbone to fight headstrong youngsters; or because mothers have a curious vanity about their daughters being attractive to men and are proud when a girl of 15 has attentions from grown-up men instead of the innocent skylarking boys of her own age.

They ignore the fact that a young girl whose mother lets her stray out of the home fold unguarded is in as much peril as a lamb would be in a pack of wolves. That any one escapes is sheer luck, or the especial mercy of God.

I think there is no other more pathetic figure on earth than the father whose girl child is the very core of his heart who sees and knows the danger she is in and who is powerless to save her because her mother balks his effort at every turn. The two are leagued against him and he cannot fight them both.

* * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband and I have been married eight years. As we have no children and I can never have any, I have been thinking about adopting a baby. My husband is divorced from his first wife and has two children by this former marriage who were given into the custody of their mother. They have just been paying us their first visit as she would never let them come before, but now that are of high-school age she is willing that they should live with us and go to school here as the schools are very fine. My husband is naturally anxious for the children and cannot understand why I hesitate about their coming, but for four years I have cherished the idea of adopting a baby that would seem more like my own. I need something that is helpless and dependent on me. Should I forget my dream of the baby and try to love these two children who are a constant reminder of another marriage? Or should I fight for my own rights? UNDECIDED.

Answer:

May I tell you a story? Once upon a time an old Negro friend of mine, poor as poverty and with a houseful of children of her own, told me of a little half-starved waif, motherless and fatherless, who had drifted to her door. "I prayed to God," she said, "to tell me what to do about this child and it seemed to me like I heard a voice saying: 'The child is there in your house. He is hungry. He is ragged. He ain't got no maw or no paw. What other answer do you need?'"

Doesn't that story apply to your case? Here are these children who are the innocent victims of a broken-up home. They need a father, a father's guidance and love, and he longs for his children. What is there for you to do but to take them in and try to give them a mother's love and perhaps a sympathy and understanding that their own mother is incapable of giving them?

I grant you that is a difficult thing for any woman to do to mother another woman's children, and especially when that mother is still alive. Also, adolescent children are hard to stand even when they are one's own, but, nevertheless, I think you can be big enough and brave enough and love your husband enough to do it.

And the baby can wait for the three or four years that it will take children of high school age to grow from childhood into manhood and womanhood, and get them out into the world on their own. And, if you do your task wisely and well, you will get your reward in making friends of these children and in winning your husband's everlasting gratitude. DOROTHY DIX.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUSTER'S BUNDLE.

"Hey, fellows!" shouted Buster, one of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit boys, one day to some of his brothers and chums. "Hey, fellows! Did you hear what happened to Susie Littletail?"

"What happened?" quacked Jimmie Wibblewobble, a duck boy.

"She got a new dress," explained Buster. "And she was so proud of it she walked along to school looking at the colors and, all of a quickness, she fell in a mud puddle. Oh, gosh! You should have seen that new dress then. Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"Served her right!" said Custer, one of Buster's brothers.

"Girls are always proud," said

Buster.

"Sure!" agreed Buster. "Girls aren't like fellows. Now you take me—I don't care whether I have on a new suit or an old one."

"I don't, either!" said the other boys.

He Wonders.

Buster and his brothers and chums were out playing in the woods. It was Spring. Little green leaves were beginning to show on trees and bushes. That's why, because of the new leaves, Uncle Wiggily was able to hop along behind a bush, close to Buster and the other boys and not be seen by them though he could hear them.

"Yes, girls are always proud," said Buster again. "I'm glad I'm a boy and don't have to be proud."

"Hum, I wonder now," said Uncle Wiggily to himself, "if boy animals are ever proud? Perhaps not of new clothes but proud of the things they can do, of their strength and how fast they can run and how they can play ball? I wonder?"

While Uncle Wiggily was wondering he heard some of the boys say:

"Come on, Buster, we're going to play ball. You can be pitcher."

"Yes, I'm the best ball pitcher," said Buster. "But I can't play now. I have to go to the store for Nurse Jane. She wants a lot of groceries and as soon as I take them to the bungalow I'll come and play ball."

"All right," agreed the other boys. "Hurry Buster!"

"I will!" he promised and away he hopped to the store.

"I'll hop along to the store myself," whispered Uncle Wiggily. "I want to see what Buster does if he isn't as proud as Susie."

Keeping behind the bushes with their new Spring leaves, Uncle Wiggily reached the store a little while after Buster. The rabbit gentleman hid behind a pile of brooms and saw what happened.

"Here's what Nurse Jane wants," said Buster, giving the old dog gentleman who kept the store the grocery list.

Proud, Too.

"Hum," said the dog gentleman, "butter, bread, lard, vinegar, flour, soap, sugar, cans of tomatoes, corn, peas and beans, oatmeal, ketchup, mustard, olive oil, crackers, cookies—my that's a big order. I don't believe you can carry all that, Buster."

"Oh, yes I can, Mr. Dog. I'm strong. I'm pitcher on the ball team. I could carry more than that. Put 'em all in one bundle and I'll carry 'em. And please hurry."

"You never can carry this bundle," said the dog storekeeper.

"Sure I can!" boasted Buster. "I'm strong, I tell you!"

"And I'm afraid you're proud, too," thought Uncle Wiggily.

Buster started out of the store carrying the big bundle of groceries. But he hadn't gone very far before he slipped, stumbled and fell and the butter, bread, lard, vinegar and crackers spilled all over the ground. Oh, what a mess!

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" cried poor Buster.

"Never mind!" said kind Uncle Wiggily, hopping to the rescue. "I will help you, Buster. What happened?"

"I—I—er—now—I guess I'm not as strong as I thought I was," said the little boy rabbit.

And if the potato masher doesn't try to make hash out of the cabbage shortcake, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Jingle's polish.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

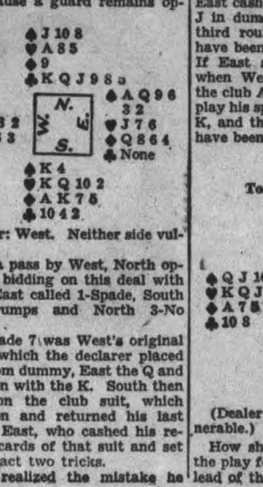
"The Authority on Authorities"

HOLD-UP COMBINATIONS

ALL DECLARERS know how to hold up an ace so that later it can block the run of a suit. Not so many think of holding up a guarded king. Still fewer consider doing so if it necessitates blanking the king, even though that is perfectly safe because a guard remains opposite it.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.

After a pass by West, North opened the bidding on this deal with 1-Club, East called 1-Spade, South 2-No Trumps and North 3-No Trumps.

The spade 7 was West's original lead, on which the declarer placed the 10 from dummy, East the Q and South won with the K. South then started on the club suit, which West won and returned his last spade to East, who cashed his remaining cards of that suit and set the contract two tricks.

South realized the mistake he had made. On the first trick the play of the 10 from dummy forced the Q from East. This should have been allowed to hold, and whether East continued the suit or waited for a lead from West, the spades could not have been cleared before the club A was driven out. Had East cashed the spade A, the spade J in dummy would have won the third round and West would not have been able to return that suit. If East switched to a new suit, when West gained the lead with the club A, East would have had to play his spade A, to pick up South's K, and the third round would still have been won in the dummy.

And then kind spring drew a merciful curtain to hide and end this burlesque of the Body Beautiful at Play. But not before Zadok Dumbkopf, wiseacre-at-large, had made comment. "The pointed paper cap," quoth he, "no longer is the insignia of the aged clown. It's a pair of ice skates."

Rev. H. O. Burwall
Addressses W. M. S.

At the Easter Thankoffering meeting Friday afternoon, the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's Church heard a graphic and inspiring outline of the work in South China from the Rev. H. O. Burkwall of the British and Foreign Bible Society and recently returned from Canton. Mr. Burkwall came from Toronto in place of his wife, who was to have addressed the meeting but was prevented by illness.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. James Dutton, who with Miss Cullen, was responsible for the program and the Devotional period, Miss Cullen reading the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Dutton leading in prayer.

Going to China as a young man in 1896, after four years as a missionary, Mr. Burkwall became connected with the Bible Society. At that time there were 100,000 copies of Scripture books circulated each year in the two provinces of South China. In a few years numbers of mission stations were started, and when Mr. Burkwall left in 1937, 600,000 books a year were in circulation, with forty-five and fifty men at work in the field all the time.

In describing the work among the women, the speaker pointed out some of the difficulties. It is hard for the women to learn to read, because their labors are so arduous, they being counted as equals with men in farm and other work, usually toiling in the fields throughout all the daylight hours and with household duties and care of children as well. It is difficult to gather them for meetings, but Bible women go into the villages, live and make friends with them and gain access to their homes and hearts. Bible training schools are being established to train Bible women, and trained women are placed in strategic points. This is the way the work is being carried on, and the Chinese are responding in a wonderful way to the Gospel.

The Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, in thanking the speaker, expressed the keen interest and appreciation of the ladies. Following the taking of the offering, the dedicatory prayer was offered by the pastor.

Music was supplied by twenty-six girls and boys of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band, who delighted the listeners with the singing of the hymn, "The World's Children for Jesus," with Mrs. Adam Sands at the piano. The meeting was closed with the benediction by the Rev. Dr. Barr.

"Regency Furnishings" and "Lace" Discussed For Art Association

Disappointment was manifest at a largely attended meeting of the Lyceum Club and Women's Art Association Friday afternoon when it was announced by the president, Mrs. F. E. Hooper, that Miss Muriel W. Burnaby, who was to have given a demonstration of puppetry, was unable to be present. When 20 miles from Toronto on the highway, Miss Burnaby had been forced by the snow storm to turn back. She will be sent another invitation by the Association at a later date.

During her opening remarks, the president announced the annual dinner of the Women's Art Association to be held in the Empress Hotel on April 22, with Senator Iva Campbell Fallis as guest speaker.

Two members, Mrs. J. G. Wharry and Miss Laura Belleghem stepped into the breach and very ably entertained the meeting with papers on "Regency Furnishings" and "Hand-Made Lace", given previously to study groups.

The Regency Period.

Explaining that the Regency period dated from about 1795 to 1830, Mrs. Wharry gave a comprehensive account of the whole furnishing of a small town house such as became increasingly popular in England during this period.

Walls and ceilings were plain and flat and frequently covered with plain or small patterned paper in place of panelling. Pale or bright colors were preferred. Carpets, curtains and upholstery were usually either plain or with wide stripes or small designs of flowers or symbolic motifs and curtains were often elaborately draped. The most popular ornaments were Dresden figures and Chinese or Grecian vases.

The elaborate candlesticks, candelabra and chandeliers in glass and metal, the result of an increasing demand for more illumination, were described by Mrs. Wharry. Oil lamps in bronze or gilt brass were introduced about 1786 and gas was a much admired novelty in 1821. Large mirrors with elaborate frames were in every English house with any pretence of luxury, and decorative firescreens were popular.

Whatnots of rosewood mahogany or satin wood veneer appeared about 1808. Tables had ornamental legs or pedestals. "A tru Regency table was supported by a pillar separating at the base into three or four feet with brass tips" said Mrs. Wharry "The variety of design in seat furniture was also a feature of the period". Chairs sofas and settees of mahogany and rosewood were beautifully inlaid carved or trimmed with gilt. There were fine bookcases in the same woods with applied metal ornaments. The speaker concluded by observing that the Regency mode is "a logical source of inspiration" for those who do not care for modernistic styles.
